The Army of the Lord. "I heard that the Salvation army girl who went from here to St. Joe had nearly starved to death down there," remarked a citizen to a cadet in the army yesterday.

"Well, she didn't starve, but she did come pretty near it," was the reply. "We got her up a box of grub here and sent it down to her, for she wrote that she needed it. When she left here she had only enough money to pay for her board a day or two, and she hadn't begun to get in enough from collections to pay her way."

"As soon as we heard of it, we had a box fixed up and sent her, enough to last several days or a week. I tell you it is not all fun or nice work to be in the army. The girls have a hard time of it part of the while. Now the girls when they first came here had only enough to keep them a few days, and they had it nip and tuck to live. They slept in the hall, and they lived off of cold food sent them from the Ogden house. The Ogden house girls were very good to the girls, and every day sent them a big basketful of what was left from their tables."

"How do they get a living? From the collections, or do they get a salary?" "I'll tell you. These women are just sent to a place, and have to get along as best they can. They go to work, hold meetings, and take up collections. They have to make it up. If there is not enough taken in to pay the expenses they get nothing, but if there is enough to pay the expenses and their salaries too, they get their pay."

"Out of these salaries what do they have to pay?" "They have to pay their board, pay for clothing and all that. They have to buy their own tambourines. The most of the drums, but the rest is owned by the soldiers personally. The post here is getting so that after paying the expenses of the meetings and the salaries there is a surplus left over in the treasury. Two or three meetings last week though, the receipts were not enough to pay expenses. It costs about $2 a day to pay for the hall, lights and fuel. The girls now board at the house, and they are much visiting to do and other work that they have no time to cook for themselves, and they were getting behind on their sewing and such things."

"Do those who join have to wear uniforms?" "No, they don't have to. The army wants them to wear some badge or something to show that they belong to the army and so most of them do."

"Do they have to do away with bangs and feathers, gold ornaments and so forth?" "Yes, they can wear such things if they want to, but it is not thought to be of any use to spend money for such things. The girls don't have much left after they pay for their living, but if they did, they feel that they can use it to make others better and happier, and so they don't care for such things."

"What about the statement that a certain number of them are to be sent to headquarters, to make the high officers live in comfort and wealth?" "That isn't so. There is a certain amount, 10 cents on a dollar, which goes to the higher officers, and their expenses. That is, just as in all other societies and churches. The division commander, for instance, is something like a presiding elder in the Methodist church. He looks after all the posts in Iowa, say. Well, he is allowed a certain amount and his traveling expenses, and this is paid by all the posts. Then there is a certain amount which is to be paid for the headquarters to be built in Chicago. This headquarters will be barracks for those who get sick or worn out, a sort of soldiers' home, the same as the Methodists take care of their superannuated preachers sometimes."

"How long will the army stay here?" "I don't know. These girls will go away next week. Their three months is up, they change every three months, and new ones come here. We'll have some new ones in a few days."

"How did you make out in Omaha the other night?" "Pretty well, but we got rotten egged. That is, there was one spoiled egg thrown at us as we went by one place, a sort of grocery store and saloon. There was only one egg, and that hit one of the boys, and he was splashed on some of the others. Just as soon as there can be a hail got there I expect the army will start in for taking that town."

Makeup Re-arrested. George Washington Hakepeter, on being acquitted at Denison, has been re-arrested on the charge of grand larceny in Harrison county.

The friends of County Attorney Lally resent the intimations that the prosecution was not ably and fully conducted in the recent trial at Denison. It is claimed that Mr. Lally's predecessor, now Judge Thornell, drew up the indictment, and that there were in it two errors fatal to the successful prosecution of the case, one being that the money said to have been appropriated by Hakepeter belonged to the Haish & Co., when in fact it belonged to Jacob Haish, who had no partner, and there was no such firm. The other was in bringing the action in Crawford county, when the embezzlement, if there was any, was at Dunlap, in another county.

Personal Paragraphs. C. L. Burpee, of Champaign, Ill., is in the city. Mrs. Nick O'Brien has gone to Danbury on a visit.

Alex Malmrose came in off the road last night.

Louis Kahler has gone to see the ice palace at St. Paul.

Misses Testerman and Bullard leave to-night for St. Paul.

A C Barnham, of Champaign, Ill., is in the city looking after his interests here.

John Dohany, who has had quite a serious sick spell, is again attending to his usual duties.

Mrs. E. A. Pippin and Mrs. George Rudio have gone to Mapleton, Ia., to attend the wedding of Mrs. Pippin's sister, Miss Ella Snyder.

Max Brody, who was injured by the running away of his team, recently, is improving and now able to be up and about.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sims returned last evening from their wedding trip, and will for the present have rooms at the residence of Mr. J. E. Harkness.

Clarence Judson, who has been so long connected with Burnham, Tuttle & Co. and the Council Bluffs National bank, has resigned his position. He will continue to reside here, and will soon engage in a different business, which will in due time be announced. He is too active to remain out of business for any length of time, and will doubtless make a success of whatever he undertakes.

The Ruby Mines of Burmah. London Daily News: Owing to the very great jealousy of the Burmese government, the ruby mines have been carefully guarded from strangers, and from this cause our knowledge regarding them is very small.

The mines are said to be only about sixty miles northeast of Mandalay. The extent of ground over which the rubies exist has not been precisely ascertained, but it is believed to extend at least over one hundred square miles.

The value of these mines was reported a few years ago to be worth annually from £12,000 to £15,000, but this includes sapphires and other stones as well. The mines were wholly royal property, and the stones were a monopoly of the king. From this it may be assumed that the Indian government will now claim the ruby mines.

The "gem bed," as it is called, or strata in which the rubies are found, varies considerably at different points in its depth. Pits are sunk down vertically until a gem bed is touched, and then horizontal galleries are formed through the strata. These galleries are usually of thickness; sometimes they are only a few inches, while in others they are found several feet in depth. The earth of the gem bed is brought up to the surface, where it is carefully washed, and the gems are secured. The most of the rubies are small, but large ones do turn up; the difficulty is to find large ones without a flaw.

The lapidaries or gem polishers are in the capital, and not at the mines. The polishing process is performed by pounding the smaller gems and worthless stones. These are pounded and mixed with other substances, and formed into cakes about ten inches long and four wide. The gold rubies are rubbed on this. When the stone has been ground down roughly on this a finer cake is employed, and the finishing touch to the gem is given by rubbing it on plates of brass or copper.

Sapphires are also found with the rubies. The people employed manage to secrete small stones, and these are smuggled from the mines to the capital.
