The Receipts of the Saloons and Hotels Something Enormous-A Row Over a Restaurant - Police Court Notes-Town Topics.

IFROM THE REE'S LINCOLN BUREAU, ! The crowd is dispersing. For days and days a crowd has infested the city of Lincoln greater than ever before in the city's history. There has been no sleep for a thousand or more of the visitors for three nights past, and the last night the greater part of the population staid up all night and joined in the sleepless vigil about the caucus doors, at the principal hotels and in other public places. An estimate of the money spent by this influx would be fairly startling, and the bars in the immediate vicinity of the headquarters have counted their receipts by thousands. A picture of the struggling masses of humanity as they threw off all restraint after the question that brought them to Lincoln was settled would be something to behold. A more jaded, red-eyed, weary-looking crowd of statesmen it would be hard to find. The Capital hotel building is fairly historic from previous struggles of this kind, but it never saw the equal of the present time. and with the departure of the crowds and the rest and recuperation of the mob there will settle a stillness over the political cauldron at this place from which buckets full of the seum and hangers on can be skimmed before the eautdron is ready for use again. The old idea that was dominant in Lincoln for years, that the city depended on political crowds in order to thrive and that the most must be made of such occasions, still largely remains and one would think from the efforts made to rake in the crowds that this city of 30,000 people depended on politics for bread. With the essation of present hostilities in the political field business will be resumed, the courts will cease adjournments for polities and from out the chaos there are a great many Lincoln people who hope that the Lancaster delegation will pro-ceed to business in the matter of city leg-islation, that the calendar may be agreed upon and passed and some good, permanent results be gleaned from the session.

A RESTAURANT ROW. Something like a week ago the Enterprise restaurant was closed through legal measures. The attorneys closing it attempted to invoice the goods, but one Watson, who had a claim in the matter, refused to let them touch them, and held guard. Replevin papers were then se-cured and when Watson was away Thursday the parties took possession of the place and mounted a guard over it. When Watson returned a row ensued, in which a window was broken in and an entrance was effected upon the disputed territory. Then came the arrest of Watson on a peace warrant, but he immediately returned to the seat of war and with a battering ram broke in the back door and another row ensued, in which officers, litigants and spectators drawn to the place were in considerable numbers. Watson was the second time arrested and the final disposition of the arrests, the rights of the parties interested, and all the intricacles of the law will be ventilated on the 24th.

IN POLICE COURT. The police court was enlivened yesterday by a larger number of cases than usual, and in the opening hours when the books were opened three parties who had become drunk to keep up the prevalling fashion of the night, answered to roll call. Their trial was short and pointed, each receiving the customary fine, two of whom had the necessary cash to liquidate and go free.
Some time during the day before a driver of a delivery wagon was made the target of a lad, who persisted in firing chunks of ice and frozen pavement at him. He located the lad for the police and yesterday they had him in court. He gave his pame as Richard Turner, his age as thirteen years, and the judge promptly fined him $3 and the costs of the case, admonishing him that if he came before the court again he would be given a home at the reform school.

One vagrant was lodged in jail, and he was a colored man. When his case was called he gave his name as Campbell, and a search of his effects showed that he had been a soldier for four years in the regular army. The judge made his sen-tence light for vagrancy, and fined him $10 and costs.

A row occurred in the notorious bagnio kept by Mollie Hall, the participants in the fracas being George W. Duncan, a former traveling man, and a prostitute named Bettie Lane. When the police arrived on the scene they found the girl lying in a brulsed and bleeding condition on the floor, her story being that Duncan assaulted her with a beer glass, smashing it over her head, knocking her to the floor ending his punishment by kicking her. Duncan was lodged in jail and the girl put up for her appearance in cash. The morning session of the court deferred the hearing of the case until late in the day.

TOWN TOPICS. County Treasurer Jacob Roche approached the artesian well Thursday evening to drink of its healing waters. When he was close to the fountain he slipped on the icy pavement, falling heavily on his left shoulder, either dislocating it at the shoulder, either dislocating it at the shoulder ions or breaking. cating it at the shoulder joint or breaking his arm. As Mr. Roche is a heavy man the fall was a hard one and will confine nim from duty for some time.

The real estate transfers in the past two days have been quite extensive, largely transactions in city real estate, the total transactions in the time aggregating some $75,000, all in parcel tracts and lots the largest sale recorded being a quarter section of land purchased by Pitcher & Baldwin of George B. Lane for $17,600. Some fifty mortgages were filed in the two days, a large number of releases and several contracts and mechanics' liens. Sheriff Melick 's confined to his bed by sickness, his ailment being a throat affect tion that has caused him trouble in former times. There is a lonesome look about the sheriff's office when Sam is not around and his associates in the county building are all anxious for his speedy recovery and coming forth among them

The Chautau qualiterary and social circle that was to meet last evening has postponed its session until to-night, at which time it will be neld in the basement rooms of the Congregational church. A very interesting programme has been prepared and the meeting will undoubtedly be a very successful one. The musical entertainment held at St. Paul's church last evening by the members of the Choral union was very largely attended, and the programme as arranged was greatly enjoyed and very creditable to the abic corps of musicians who were participants upon the pro-ALLIANCE RESOLUTIONS

tions of the state.

The receipts of hogs at the West Lincoln yards were very light yesterday, only 400 being received, and they of a poor quality. The prices offered yesterday were good, what sales were made ranging from $4.55 to $4.70 per 100.

TENNYSON'S EARLY LOVE.

The Original of "Mand" Heroine of Locksley Hall, London Letter: Those who are familar with the story of Alfred Tennyson's life will smile on reading his latest work, "Locksley Hall Sixty Years After," over the spirit of self-deception which runs throughout the verses. To the world "Maud" and "Locksley Hall" are beau-tiful poems only. A few know that they are something more than poems of the imagination—they are heart records. In the sequel to "Locksley Hall," just published, the poet tells his grandson that he could never have loved a worldling like Judith, who has played such sad havoc with the susceptible youth's feelings, but this is precisely what he did. When Alfred Tennyson was a promising young poet crowned with Oxford's academic laurels, he wooed his first cousin, the story of which wooing he afterward wove into beautiful verse and gave to the world. Another suitor, the wealthy heir to the earldom of Boyne, however, appeared on the scene, and the fair Amy, afterward so liberally adjectived as works and a popular to the scene and the fair Amy, afterward so liberally adjectived as the scene and savet savet as the scene and scene as the scene and scene as the scene as the Lord Boyne, who is the owner of large estates and valuable coal mines in the county of Durham, the heart of the north-ern coal fields of England, freely extended his hospitalities to the bride's cousin at Brancepeth castle, a modern but mposing mansion. The poet repaid the kindness by satirizing the good-natured peer, his brand-new title, and his recently-acquired wealth most mercilessly in his "Maud" and "Locksley Hall." Independent of his wife's very natural indignation, Lord Boyne was not gratified to find his beautiful homo described by a recent guest as a "gew-gaw" eastle, or at having the world informed in verse, however harmonious, that his wealth had come from the sweat of miners. Neither did he enjoy the thought that the tongues of the world were wagging over the story of his wealth having bought him a wife who preferred another lover. It is possible, too, he failed to see the beauty of those Rembrandt-like touches wherein he is described as a clown and drunken. It might be beautiful poetry, the outraged host urged, but it was not good taste and it was not true. His lordship is certainly one of the most commonplace and unin-teresting of peers or of commoners, but ne is neither coarse nor drunken, and Brancepeth Castle, with its shivering larches, knew Tennyson no more.

C. K. COUTANT. MILLIONAIRE MINERS.

A Californian Tells How They Have Made Their Fortunes. New York Times: "Does it ever occur to you," said a well-known Californian yesterday in a conversation about the prosperous year then ended, and as argument for the boom he predicts for 1887, "that notwithstanding all that has been said and written of the danger of the gold-mine fever there is scarcely a very rich man, or syndicate, or even king on his throne who has not among his best-paying experiences, either in the past or present, the record of a

"That may be," was the reply, "but you can scarcely say if all the records of all the gold-mines and properties that have served as gold-mines for a time were examined they would show an alto-gether profitable history."

"Well, what would, I should like to know? Of course, I may be prejudiced, and with reason, for it is not so many years ago that I landed in Montana with $5 in my pocket and nothing under the blue skies but my faith in Mother Earth as I staked out a claim with my partner. It may have been the proving of the old proverb 'a fool for luck,' but I am, as you know, a living example of the truth hat is stranger than fiction, and all the stockbrokers on earth will never shake my faith in the belief that stock of even a so-called 'hole in the ground' which has yielded John Mackay his seventy-odd millions is not better than this railroad wildcat stuff which a broker does not hesitate to recommend and likewise take his little profits on right along. Of course they are right in one sense, as they make much more on railroad stocks, but, all the same I should like to unload a few of my worthless ones at cost.

"Fascination of the thing? Well, yes, of course; but do you suppose if there were not hard rocks at the bottom the mere romance of the miner's life would be strong enough to draw John Mackay from the boulevards of Paris or the circle of friends who make so much of him in London and New York out to a wild western town like Virginia City, where he now is? Not much. He is there for another reason: to waten, himself, the borings from the diamond drill. Just think of it! Mackay, the richest man, almost, in the world, spending his holidays in Virginia City and making per-sonal examinations every half hour of the borings from that diamond drill. I guess he would say he preferred his little mining stock, which has paid him so well, to any of the big sounding railroad wildcats that a plausible broker could attempt to talk him into. Just think of the money that has been madeliterally out of the ground—in the Consolidated Virginia, to-wit, $110,000,000. From 75 cents a share up to $66 a share; then, after the break, to $17, the recovery to $27 a share.

"Look at the Comstock. Do you know what it has already paid in dividends? Well, I do. I happened to see the figures the other day. Here [taking a note-book from his pocket] I copied this as interesting to friends out yonder. 'Comstock paid in dividends over $250,000,000. Senator Jones' Alaska mine. in which the rich strike was make a little over a year ago, is now paying him-that is, his interest in it—$20,000 a month. Bye the bye, this is the mine D. O. Mills has paid a long price for the control of. Mills confidently expects to make the yield, by the aid of increased facilities, over $1,250,000 a year. 'Boss' Shepherd has 5,000 men at work at his Mexican mines. I was told a day or two ago that Shep-herd's daily profit is estimated at $24,000 They say George D. in sight. "You know Washington Connor, Jay Gould's partner? Well, he and Colone Jemison, of the cotton exchange, bought the control of the Phoenix mine, of Arizona. Connor knew the property and paid what was considered a fair price for Well, in less than a fortnight after of ore now ninety feet wide and averaging about $12 a ton. When they run the big mill they are estimating on, you mark my predictions, the Phonix will yield $1,000,000 a year profit. the purchase the tunnel ran into a body

"Here's the South Spring Hill mine, owned in Massachusetts. It was drilled as a mere hole in the ground, began paying a short time since $30,900 a month, and I remember when every broker seemed to think it necessary to tell a man who wanted stock that he was a 'fool and his money, or words to that effect. I know of two or three now who have some railroad stocks they will exchange gladly for any of these properties I have spoken of. Then here's the Keystone, paying $50,000 a month; Plymouth, $75,000; Homestake, $50,000; Ontario, $75,000. Yes, sir, every month as regularly as the day rolls around. Of course money has been lost in mines. Well, will you tell me in what it has not been lost! In every buyable and salable commodity in the world, I should say. Oh, no! I am no enthusiast Of course, I speak with some warmth of the bridge that carried me safely over. The Astors and Lorillards have made a big investment in Mexican mines with Clarence King. The Roths-childs are large mine owners, and are at the head of a syndicate just formed in London for the purchase of gold-mines. They have agents all over the globe looking up good properties. No, sir. If mines are good enough investments for the men I have mentioned I am willing
