AN AIR LINE TO OMAHA.

THREE HOURS IN THE WATER.

A German's Narrow Escape-Dr. Graham Leaves Omaha-Police Court-Recorder of Deeds, Etc.

An Air Line Route.

The visit of the railway officials from the east, as mentioned in Thursday's BEE, means something of importance to Omaha. Inquiry develops the fact that they came to this city in furtherance of a scheme already mentioned in the BEE, namely the operation of an air line between Indianapolis and Omaha. The In-dianapolis, Decatur & Springfield line is built from Indianapolis to Decatur, 153 miles, and there is proposed to be built a contination of the line to Quincy, a distance of 130 miles. From that point the combination proposes to operate the Quincy, Missouri & Pacific, which is built to Trenton, Mo., a distance of 136 miles. That line will then be extended to Pattonsburg Mo., forty miles. This will strike the southern terminus of the Council Bluffs & St. terminus of the Council Bluffs & St Louis line, which is to be included in the system. The line will thus be complete from Indianapolis to Omaha. These roads named have been bought by the combination, and the track which remains to be laid is well under way. It is said that Omaha will enjoy the benefits of the air line this coming summer. The road will probably enter Omaha by the new Union Pacific bridge.

FOUR HOURS UNDER THE ICE.

An Iowa Man's Miraculous Escape From Drowning in the Missouri. Peter Mohn, a German, who lives near Silver City, Ia , had a frightful and thrilling experience in the chilly waters of the Missouri on Wednesday night that would have killed a man of ordinary constitution and powers of endurance. Mohn has been working on a farm near Love-land, Ia., and on Wednesday evening started out with two friends named Heckel and Simpson for a night's fishing. Their plan was to cut holes through the ice in the river at intervals of fifty to sixty feet in which the baited hooks are thrown. The fish are attracted by these openings in the ice and are easily caught in large numbers. The catch on Wednesday night was unusually fine and the three men remained on the ice until midnight. They then started to take up their lines when Mohn, who was at one end of the cut, was heard to utter a cry of alarm, and his companions turned around just in time to see him disappear through a hole in the ice. They rushed to his assistance but before they could reach him the waters had closed over him and shut him out of their sight. One of the men began cutting holes in the ice further down the stream in the hope that Mahn's body might be attracted to it while the other ran for help. Several men who lived near the bank were called and aided in the search. At the point where the accident occurred it appears that the current washes the shores of the rwer, and to this fact Mohn owes his life. About one-hundred feet from the hole in which Mohn fell there is an air hole under a high bank and partly concealed by a tree that has fallen from the bank. Against these branches was Mohn washed before he was entirely unconscious and with nat-ural instinct grasped them and endeavored to pull himself out of the water. He could only get his head partly out, but was so chilled and benumbed that it was imposfible for him to speak. In this position he remained, unable to move until unconsciousness came to the of his sufferings and for nearly four hours. It was nearly 4 o'clock when one of the searchers, who had started home, discovered Mohn's body, which the current had washed by this time almost hall way out of the water. The man was lying with his head and shoulders over the limb of a tree that was partly covered ried to the home of Joe Meddar, a short distance from the river, where, after an energetic rubbing, he showed signs of of regaining consciousness and soon entirely recovered. He was so weakened and chilled by his long expos-ure that he was confined to the house all

In Which Questions of By-gone Days Were Revived and Discussed.

Thursday night the Creighton college students of the higher classes had a lively contest in debating the "Missouri Compromise." The question underlying the original subject was the right of southern states to extend their system of slavery to the territories. And as it is hard to find fault with that conciliatory policy of Henry Clay, which succeeded in staving off civil war for half a century, this other phase of the subject was taken up. The affirmative was argued by Messrs. J. McCarville and T. McGivern, the negative by Messrs. George Mercer and Edward Furay. George Mercer took the old view of the "lax constructionists" that the constitution had tolerated slavery as a necessary will only bidling it. very as a necessary evil, only biding its time to abolish it as a rotten system that was pernicious to the general prosperity of the country. The arguments of his colleague displayed learning, wide read-ing and considerable thought. The negative had argued to the point of expediency forgetting that it was a question of constitutional right that was innounced in the subject.

The first speaker on the affirmative made the first speaker of his life, with the ad-dress of one posted on all the points. The warmth of debate caught in the audence, and two other members not on the lists contended in friendly rivalry before the chairman closed the debate, by summing up the arguments.

GRAHAM IS GONE. He Successfully Eludes Arrest-His Record in Omaha.

The police officers are on the lookout for one Dr. Graham, who came here a few weeks ago from Sioux City, opened up in a small room near the Millard hotel, and has been in business here ever since. A warrant is out for his arrest on the charge of confidencing a soldier named Christian Lazarus out of a sum of money. On Tuesday the warrant was sworn out, and Officer Whalen at once went down to Graham's room in the Gruenig block. The doctor received him very blandly, requested that he be not arrested at once, and promised to appear in police court the next day. He said that he was very busy and could not possibly leave his patients. Officer Wha-len, thus assured, went off. The next day Graham did not show up, nor the next, nor the next. The police took occasion to pay several visits to his place, but on each day his door was found securely barred. Yesterday another visit was made, and again his room was visit was made, and again his foom was found locked. Slipped under the sign on the door was a paper bearing the words: "Dr. Graham out of the city." Inquiry revealed the fact that he had left Tuesday night. His landlord, when questioned about the matter, said that he had gone to Canada and did not intend to return again. He said that the doctor had turn again. He said that the doctor had quietly sold off all his goods.

Graham came here from Sioux City, as already stated, and the authorities there say that his reputation was wretchedly unsay that his reputation was wretened yun-sayory. When brought before the Iowa board he claimed to have six diplomas, but failed to produce one. This being the case he could not practice med-icine in Iowa and he came to Omaha. Here he at once established his reputation as a quack and charlatan by posting up circulars around the city advertising himself as a healer of blindness, deafness and all complaints which "flesh is heir to." The unsophisticated portion of the public, indeed, to judge from his circulars, would think him a phenomenon in the art of healing. Compound oxygen was his great specific, To illustrate its marvelous healing powers, he was wont to say that two pounds of it tion as a quack and charlatan by posting was wont to say that two pounds of it would, inside of a week, cure the most stubborn case of deafness. Despite the widespread announcement of his powers his patients were few and far between and those who know him say that his sudden departure is due partly to lack of business and partly to fear of prosecution

The Bonanza Somebody Will Enjoy if H. R. No. 3 Passes. The county commissioners have re turned from Lincoln. Besides taking a little interest as spectators in the senatorial contest, they protested, to Mr. Hayden of Saline, against the passage of certain clauses of his bill, known as house roll number three. This provides for the office of register of deeds in all counties of over 15,000 inhabitants, and sets his compensation at the amount of fees received by him for recording of instruments. In counties having less than 15,000 inhabitants the work of recording is to be done by the county clerk. The objection to the bill in question is that in this county, if the recorder is to be paid by fees, his salary will not fall short of about $20,000 per year This, of course, is too much for the work, especially so, as it would take that much out of the money which the commissioners are at present able to expend for county purposes. The com-missioners want a salary of say $3,000 at tached to the office in counties of over 75,000 inhabitants which would thus affect only the county of Douglas. The difference between that amount and the income of the office could then be applied to county affairs instead of going into

RAPHAEL.

His Life and Works Under Consideration by Arthur May Knapp.

Arthur May Knapp's lecture at Unity church Thursday night was upon Raphael. He referred principally to the masterpiece of the artist, but claimed that they were not characterized by the power which distinguished Michael Angelo's, nor the intellectuality which characterized those of Da Vinci. Raphael was cogently influenced by his surroundings and his paintings evinced a marvelous susceptibility. At first they bore the impress of youth and a tender nature. His works still had a tender suggestion, but were more on the sensational order, a certain previous stiffness having given place to easy grace and expressive action. In a short time afterward Raphael was summoned to Rome, and again changed, be coming the classical artist, and depicting the lives and passions of the Grecian gods and goddesses with an extraordi-nary aptitude. The paintings illustrating these changes in the artistic sense were shown and expatiated upon at length, and the lecture ended with views and explanations of the different "Madonnas" from Raphael's brush; the first only indicating womanly purity, those painted later in life, tenderness, and the last, womanly dignity, showing the changing ideas produced by time. The series of lectures will be concluded this evening with "Mythology of Sculpture."

Burglars Foiled. Burglars entered the residenc of Mr. A. E. Nields, of the firm of D. M. Steele & Co., on Leavenworth street, near Twenty-second, about 2 o'clock yesterday morning. After a thorough search among valuable papers, none of which they took, they went up stairs into Mr. Nields' room. In taking his pants and vest from a table they disturbed Mr. N. who at once gave an alarm and the thief or thieves made their escape through the front door which they had left open, pursused by Mr. Nields. Had they not closed the door after them one would have taken some lead with him as Mr. N. was close at his heels with his revolver. They secured but $1 in cash from Mr. N.'s pants, which they let drop on the stairs, and some cigars. They seemed to be looking for money, as a valuable microscope and fixtures costing upwards of $2,000, and pieces of silverware, etc., down stairs, were not disturbed.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Marvelous "Fantasma" as Produced at Boyd's Last Night.

"Fantasma" produced last night at he opera house. The audience filled the house, and it was bothh large and enthustastic enough to satisfy the desires of the enterprising management. "Fantasma" relegates "Humpty Dumpty" to obscurity. It comprises tricks, acts, and specialties never thought of in the days of the "man who sat on the wall," and abounds in transformations which, both in number and gorgeousness, were never accomplished in the days of George Fox's master piece. So numerous are these features that the spectator expects one at almost every chenge of scene, and the spectator, in his anticipation, is but seldom disappointed. The company is an excellent one, but the number of people composing it precludes more than plural commendation. "Fantasma" is a piece for the babies as well as for the adults, It will therefore be an excellent attraction for this afternoon's matinee, as also for this evening's performance, wsich will be the last given by the company in

The company is composed of talented artists, speciall engaged for their individual parts, and is headed by that clever soubrette, Miss Blanche Vaughn, whose singing, dancing and banjo playing has captivated her audiences. A large percentage of ladies has been noticable in the audiences during the week, which proves that the People's theatre is fast becoming popular with the fair sex. The company remains two more nights, and gives this afternoon at 2:30, for the bene-lit of ladies and children who are unable to attend the evening performances a grand family matinee.
