HOW THE CORPSE WAS FOUND

Arrest of the Dean of the Iowa College of Physicians and Surgeons in Hopes of Unraveling the Mystery.

Who Were the Grave Robbers? DES MOINES, In., Jan. 20,- (Special Telegram to the BEE. |-The people of Carlisle, a village in Warren county, about sixteen miles south of Des Moines, are still greatly excited over the grave robbery that occurred there some weeks ago. The young lady. Mise Maud Hull, whose body was stolen. was a resident of that place and highly respected by all who krew her. She was about sixteen or seventeen years old, unusually beautiful and attractive in her manner, and a general favorite in the village. She was living at home with her mother and her brother, who was a physician, as had been her father, who died a little more than a year ago. During the middle of December Miss Hull was taken sick with some illness resembling a fever but not considered dangerous. In due time she began to recover and had nearly regained her usual health when she suddenly grew worse and soon died. The suddenness of her departure caused a little comment and there was a little suspicion on the part of some that she might have been poisoned, either accidentally or for suicidal intent, and some of the friends wanted a post mortem examination. But the family did not think there was any need of one and none was held. The burial took place in a country graveyard, and the following morning a farmer living in the vicinity noticed wagon tracks in the fresh snow leading to the cemetery. He followed them, and saw indications that the grave had been disturbed, Going back for neighbors he returned and made the startling discovery that the grave was empty and the body had been stolen. The family and friends were at once stolen. The family and friends were at once notified, and a diligent but quiet search was made. This occurred early in Christmas week. On Wednesday of that week the young lady's brother came to Des Moines and made a search through the various incdical colleges nere, there being three. The family by this time were nearly distracted with grief, but they could find no comfort or satisfaction in their fruitless inquiry. The help of local officers was secured and the search was continued Thursday and Friday, a watch being kept of the medical Friday, a watch being kept of the medical colleges each night, but without effect. Officer Bradshaw, however, had a suspicion that the colleges each night, but without effect. Officer Bradshaw, however, had a suspicion that the body would yet be brought to one of the colleges, and was inclined to think that this one would be the Iowa College of Physicians and Surgeons. The professors in the college had shown to reluctance to their inspection of the premises and be was satisfied that the body was not yet there. But he had an idea that it would come before long, so on Saturday night (Christmas night) he waited until the college had been closed for the day and all connected with it had left. Then he came down to the Register block, which adjoins it, and climbing out on the roof he lowered himself through the scuttle to the medical college. Proceeding straight, way to the dissecting room he was rewarded by finding stretched out on the dissecting table the body of a young lady evidently the one he sought. The body had not been mutiliated in any way save that the skin of the face had been removed, apparently to prevent identification. He was satisfied that he had found the body of Maud Hull. He hastened away and brought back the brother, who declared at once that it was his sister. When the officer first entered the room he saw a lock of hair lying on the table. He promotly secured that and it afterwards helped to identify the body. There were other marks of identification as well. During the girl's sickness some hot bricks or irons had been applied to her feet which had slipped loose and slightly burned the flesh. This mark and the body was at once taken back to Warren county.

Here, for a time, the matter apparently Several citizens of Carlisle, of the afflicted family, came up to Des Moines and were indignant at the outrare that had been perpetrated and sought to discover the guilty parties, but they received little encouragement and scarcely any clue on which they could work. The medical college authorities, as usual in such cases, are the most ignorant of all and while cases, are the most ignorant of all, and while "deeply regretting the sad occurrence," as usual could throw no light on the mysterious affair. Meantime the friends of the young anarr. Academic the triends of the young lady and her family have been leaving no stones unturned to find out who had done this ghoulish work. The past week the grand jury of Warren county has been in session in Indiauola and information was laid before it such as to cause the indictment of the Scheduc the dear of the weeklern. of Dr. Schooler, the dean of the medical col-lege where the body was found. Yesterday a deputy sheriff from Warren county came to Des Molnes and placed Dr. Schooler under Des Molnes and placed Dr. Schooler under arrest. He went at once to Indianola, filed a bond and was released to appear when his case will be heard, which will be at the next term of court. Dr. Schooler is very generally respected in this community and the general impression seems to be that he was arrested more with the hope that from him some clue to the names of the guilty parties might be obtained rather than from a belief that he was himself a party to or concerned in the despleable outrage.

Florida's Infatuated Senator.

DETROIT, Jan. 29 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE.]-"Any baby would know better than that," said Senator Jones, of Florida, when shown a statement in a Florida paper to the effect that the governor of that state had a right to declare the senator's place vacant because of his continued absence from the body to which he had been elected "It is the senate that has jurisdiction over me. If my presence is needed there to complete a quorum, or for any other purpose, they can send the sergeant-at-arms for me and I must go. It is a question with me if even the senate could declare a vacancy in my case because of absence. It never has attempted such a course in similar cases. The constitus tion speaks of a vacancy from resignation death or other cases but that other cases in death or other cause, but that other cause ha, never yet been construed, and it would place a dangerous power in the hands of the ma-jority if mere absence, when the senate has power to compel attendance, should create a vacancy."

WORKING AGAINST HARRISON. Porter and Blaine Using Their Influence in the Indiana Contest. Chicago, Jan. 29 .- | Special Telegram to he BEE. |- The Journal's Indianapolis special says: National politics is having something to do with the keeping of Senator Harrison out of the full vote of his party in the legislature. Governor Porter is working with Blaine to defeat Harrison and make the national ticket read Blaine and Porter. The latter could command the votes of the three recalcitrant republican greenbackers in the EPIDEMIC OF ENDOWMENTS.

Another Big University Started Among the Many Now in New England.

DAWES' DEMOCRATIC DRAW.

Boston, Jan. 27 .- | Correspondence of the BEE |- The making of bounteous bequests seems to have become an epidemic. The last is Jonas Gilman Clark, of Worcester, who planks down a trifling willion or so for the founding of an educational institution to be known as Clark university, in the city of Worcester. It seems rather unkind to find any fault with a man who is so generous with his money as Mr. Clark has been, and I would not say anything to discourage the bewould not say anything to discourage the bestowal of money for such a cause as education. But would it net be a delightful change if the givers would now and then exercise a little discretion in making their gifts.

Massachusetts, and even all New England, is crowded with schools and colleges. Harvard, the foremost of American universities, is but a short distance from Worcester, and it will be an age before Clark university can cope with her. Besides great sums of money, it has taken two centuries and a half to make cope with her. Besides great sums of money, it has taken two centuries and a half to make Harvard what she is, and it is highly improbable that a new university so near by will ever become her successful rival. Yale follows close behind Harvard, while Amherst, Williams, Dartmouth, Brown, Bowdoin and Colby are within the radius of a few miles. If Mr. Clark had given his fortune to strengthen one of these smaller colleges, or if he had taken it to the west and given it to some of the many struggling young institu-if he had taken it to the west and given it to some of the many struggling young institutions which sorely need assistance of this kind, he would much more juotly have carned the name of benefactor.

Mr. Clark's gift is not the only example of misplaced generosity. Across the river at Harvard the snug little sum of $10,000 from some western enthusiast lies waiting to be converted into "a gateway to be erected at the main entrance of the college yard." There are no particular objections to a $10,000 gateway, but the money might be used in a hundred other ways of more advantage to the college. Then comes Mr. Greenloaf's million, so tied down that it can not be used for the building of dormitories, which are just what the college needs now, since one-third of the men are unable to get rooms in the yard.

which are just what the college needs now, since one-third of the men are unable to get rooms in the yard.

The senatorial contest is over, and unlike Nebraska, Massachusetts has re-elected her senator. It has been a quiet and steady fight between the supporters of Governor Robinson Congressinan John D. Long, and Senator Henry L. Dawes and resulted in the re-election of Mr. Dawes on the first joint vote. When the democrats saw that their votes would elect Mr. Dawes, they began changing from their candidate, Hon. P. A., Collins, to Dawes; and in afteen minutes enough democrats had changed to give Dawes the election. There is a pretty general feeling of satisfaction among the republicans that Dawes was elected, but many of them are extremely sorry that he get the election by democratic votes. In my opinion Massachusetts has done herself proud to re-elect Mr. Dawes. He has served the party and the country for many years, is an eminently capable man, and there is no reason why he should be removed.

Mr. Long is a young man, and it was the younger element in the republican ranks which supported him. That he is brilliant there is no doubt; but the republican ranks which supported him. That he is brilliant there is no doubt; but the republican need brilliancy in the house as well as in the senate, and Mr. Long does very well where he is. It is true that Mr. Dawes' success has caused a trilling ripple in the party, but it could not have been otherwise, and it is sate to say that any other result of the election would have left the party in a nuch less har-

The noted revivalists, Sam Jones and Sam Small, are both in Boston, preaching to large audiences and no doubt doing good among the class of people who go to hear them. Another departure in the way of revivals is the beginning of a series of public religious services to be held in old Fancuil hall, under the auspices of the Trinity clab. A most eloquent sermon was preached last night by Rev. Phillips Brooks, to an immense audience which represented nearly every nation.

These meetings are a God-send to many of the North End inhabitants. Many of these people never attend church, while those who do attend rarely lave an opportunity to hear such a man as Dr. Brooks.

It will be of interest to watch the result of It will be of interest to watch the result of these meetings, since they are a radical change from the general Episcopal way of goings, and there is much conjecture as to how the idea will suit some of the exclusive Episcopalians of Trinity church.

In establishing these meetings the Trinity club has followed directly in the wake of the Unitaries with their Suffell, conferences.

club has followed directly in the wake of the Unitarians with their Suffolk conferences, and meetings in the Howard Athenaeum; the Y. M. C. A. with its public meetings on the common, and the Methodists with their Jones and Small revivals.

I must not fail to mention the great poultry show which took place in Mechanics' building last week. I know that some of my Nebraska readers who are interested in fancy poultry will be glad to know that even in Boston the good qualities of a highly cultivated hen or rooster are duly appreciated. Bostonians as a rule are not very much interested in chickens, but they like a good thing when they see it, and when there is a distinguished gathering of the very aristocracy of the feathered tribe in their midst, they will not fail to give it every possible consideration.

they will not fail to give it every possible consideration.

There were 3,000 birds of different kinds in Mechanics' building, and this is the largest display of fine poulity on record in this country. The quality of the exhibit was also better than that of any other preceding show, The collection is a superb one, containing some beautiful specimens of fowl, not only from Massachusetts, but from all New

Mr. Dion Boucicault begins an engazement at the Hollis Street theater this week with "The Jilt." This play will run for two weeks, when he will present a new war play, or rather an old one revivined by himself, from the old play of "Beile Lamar." This play is looked forward to with considerable interest by those who admire Mr. Boucicault both as an author and an actor. An effort was made to who admire Mr. Boucleauit both as an Rithor and an actor. An effort was made to get Miss Maida Craigen, who made such a success as Phyllis last winter, to take the same part again; but this lady is now in the Museum company and therefore the part will have to be played by some one else.

Mme. Modjeska's engagement at the Hollis street has been very successful and if size could have prolonged her stay she could have played to paying houses for a considerable length of time.

The favorite Boston Ideals have made a tour into the northwest as far as St. Paul and as far south as Richmond, and Manager Foster tells us that they will give a presentation of Auber's "Fra Diavola" in the Boston theater on the 31st inst., which will challenge eduparison with any organization of the present generation. One is tempted to believe this when he learns that the leading singers of the troup comprise such artists as the following: Mile. Zelie de Lussan and Marie Stone, sopranos; Mile. Louise Lablache and Miss Harriet Avery, contraitos; Messrs. Tom Karl and W. H. Lawton, tenors; Messrs. H. C. Barnabee, W. H. McDonald and Clement Bainbridge, baritones, and Messrs. W. H. Clark and Ivan Morawski, bassos.

Mr. Louis James and Miss Marie Wainweight are to be seen this week at the Globe. These artists are well and favorably known to Boston theatrical circles. Mr. James will be remembered as having taken prominent parts with John McCullough. He has had remarkable success in other cities, and much will be expected of him. His company is noted for its rendition of "Romeo and Juliet," "Much Ado About Nothing," and "Virginius."

Mr. Lawrence Barrett has delighted large and ences at the Boston theater this week

Mr. Lawrence Barrett has delighted large Mr. Lawrence barrett has designed large audiences at the Boston theater this week with his play of "Rienzi." The spectacular parts of the play are skilfully given, and these, added to Mr. Barrett's own genius as an actor, make a pleasing and creditable performance.
