THE PLACES FOR WORSHIP.

An Important Decision on Sewer Assessment—Personal Mention and Brief Hits of News From All Around Town.

Another Burglary.

Yesterday morning when John Thompson, living at No. 714 Fourth street, awoke he found that some one had entered his room during the night. Entrance had been gained by a window and from the feelings of the victim, and other circumstances, it appears that chloroform had been used upon him to make him sleep. His pantsloves were found in the yard, but his pocketbook containing $130 in cash was gone. The job was worked well. It seems that the same gang is doing all of this work lately in Council Bluffs, and that the burglars are residents of the city. It seems that the police ought to be onto them by this time. They had a good chance to nab them the other night, when they were not allowed, and by the eagerness of one of the officers the gang was alarmed, and nothing could be done. It would pay the city to have an officer detailed to shadow the burglars, and water them until a good opportunity presented itself for nabbing them. The burglars are getting altogether too frequent.

The Assessment Law.

A decision has just been rendered by the supreme court, which is of special interest to this city, as it is upon a question which has been several times raised here in regard to improvements to be paid for by special assessment. The constitutionality of the present sewer laws, by which assessments are levied is fully sustained. The suit was brought by Davis against the city of Des Moines. Davis sought suit to cancel the contract which the city had entered into with Mr. McCauley to construct a sewer along the street adjoining his property, and to assess the cost thereof against said property, and to cancel the city's contract with McCauley attempting to enforce said contract. The plaintiff contended that the city is already indebted beyond its constitutional limit, and would therefore be void. The question determined is: Does the contract in question create a debt against the city? The court says: "It seems to us that the contract in question creates a debt, and is indebtedness against the city. There is no doubt that the city is authorized by law to make special assessments for improvements of this character upon property situated in the city. The provisions of our statute, which are the plain provisions of our statute. See chapter 162 laws of 1878, and section 16, chapter 163 laws of 1886. The contract involved in this case, expressly provides that the certificates issued by the city shall be accounted for by the contractor in full payment for his work without recourse on the city. The city can never be held liable to any action for the construction of the sewer. Its resources cannot be affected thereby. Its contract is fully and completely performed by ascertaining the amount of property chargeable to the adjacent property and the issuance of assessment certificates to the contractor."

Miss Lillian Lewis.

Miss Lillian Lewis, who for two nights and a matinee has appeared at the opera house, has won high praise from those who attended the entertainments. She is certainly an actress worthy of the title of artist. She is intensely emotional, and while she is not a pretty face, she has a grace of manner which makes her charming. Her costumes are elegant and her appearance is so easy that she is evidently so much at home before the footlights as to render her fascinating. The greatness of her setting is, however, not in her personal charms, nor in her dress. She has a strength which is a pleasing relief from the rush of prettily dressed dolls who are aspiring to histrionic honors. Her voice is not effeminate, and at first impresses one as too coarse for one of such grace of manner, but the distinctness of the feeling which she throws into every word, especially in the stronger displays of emotion, renders it a powerful feature, handled with great effect. Her stage falls are probably as wonderful as any one of the details which make her so pleasing an actress. "The Crook" is a play which she has played down a flight of stairs, not with any of those apparent self-savings so common to the stage, but the fall is a genuine one, and fairly startles the audience. The wonder is that she does not fall under her own weight. She is quick in action and enters into her lines with an earnestness which shows that her heart as well as her head is in the part she takes.

The company supporting her is excellent. It is not a large company, but excellently arranged. There are no sticks, and several of them are of more than ordinary ability. It is to be regretted that there were no larger houses, but a variety of circumstances rendered the dates a little unfortunate. With the reputation she has established here, her next appearance will ensure for her a full house.

The Bridge is Sure.

That there will be a speedy building of the wagon bridge at the foot of Broadway there is no longer any good reason to doubt. The preliminary arrangements are being rapidly completed. It is expected that the bids will be in so as to be opened and the contract let by the 20th of April. The contract will call for the completion of the bridge by the 1st of next January at the latest. The bridge will be the basis for numerous other enterprises, which are now ensuared, as there can be no longer any doubt as to the bridge. Council Bluffs is entering upon the most prosperous year in its history, and the building improvements are in sight indicating that the growth of the city this season will be marvelous. Those who have been investing in real estate are confident, and are not eager to sell even at an advance, preferring to invest more, rather than pull out. The new bridge alone Council Bluffs will give an impetus which will cause property to continue to advance rapidly. The other corporations are also confident, and Council Bluffs has a solid basis for its hopes of a future growth.

Card of Thanks.

The parents, brothers and sisters of John T. Morris, wish to extend their most sincere thanks to their many friends for the kindness shown to their beloved son and brother, through his illness and death; also to his classmates of 1878 and others for the floral decorations sent him.

An old hunter living in the Crazy mountains of California, caught a young beaver soon after its birth and carried it to his cabin where he gradually made a pet of it. As the youngster approached maturity he got to building dams, and each morning the hunter found his cabin floor divided by a dam which reached from wall to wall, and the component parts of which were firewood, books, articles of clothing and other movable articles in the house that could be reached or transported. To add to the confusion a small stream of water, if possible, was captured and flooded over the floor. This little animal who had never seen a stream or dam to know either, was busy at work engaged in doing what his caretaker had done a thousand times before him. While all other game or fur-bearing game of the northwest are likely to be exterminated without a dissenting voice, poor little harmless and hard-working beaver has found a fast friend in the cattlemen and herd owners. The reason is obvious. In this great dry country and climate the streams and water holes on the ranges are few and far between. Moisture is the cattlemen's greatest want. Now a beaver destroys nothing but trees, and there are few of the latter on the great treeless plains of Montana, the beaver's nest is built on shrubs and roots, and builds his dam where he may. This just suits the cattlemen, who find in the insect-eating animal, compared to his 1,000 pound steers, a most valuable ally in providing ponds and drinking places where there were none before.

Big Deal.

Garman, White & Co., the wide-awake real estate brokers, a few days since, sent city and county maps with plats of several additions, to Kansas City capitalists, who are about to invest in Council Bluffs dirt. Acre, business and residence property and vacant lots in all parts of the city for sale. Carriages always ready to show our customers property. Correspondence solicited.

The mammoth People's store has started a series of special sales and begin with them to-morrow. It is the intention of Messrs. Henry Eiseaman & Co. to inaugurate this metropolitan custom and it will no doubt meet with the approval of trade in this vicinity. Their immense stores are full to overflowing with the finest lines of goods handled by them, and these special sales will give buyers rare chances.

Curious Clocks.

Frederic G. Mather, in Popular Science Monthly for March: When the Emperor Charles V of Spain retired to the monastery of St. Yuste, he took with him his clock maker, in order to while away the time by constructing the movements of clocks. So wonderful were some of the pieces of work which they made, that the monks would not believe any one except the devil had a hand in them, until the shepherd who followed them to Geneva to see a clock which had been made by Droz, a merchant of that city. Upon the clock were seated a shepherd, a negro and a dog. As the hour was struck, the shepherd was shown to them by the emperor. It was ordered by Charles that when he should die all of these clocks should cease running—and it is said to be a fact that his orders were obeyed.

Another king of Spain came to Geneva to see a clock which had been made by Droz, a merchant of that city. Upon the clock were seated a shepherd, a negro and a dog. As the hour was struck, the shepherd was shown to them by the emperor. It was ordered by Charles that when he should die all of these clocks should cease running—and it is said to be a fact that his orders were obeyed.

Upon the belfry of the Kaulthaus, in Coblenz, there is the head of a giant—bearded, and helmeted with brass. The giant's head is known as "the man in the custom-house;" and whenever a countryman meets a citizen of Coblenz, away from that place, instead of saying, "How are all our friends in Coblenz?" he asks, "How is the man in the custom-house?" At every stroke of the bell which sounds the hours upon the clock, the mouth of the giant opens and shuts with great force, as if he were trying to say, in the words of Longfellow, "Time was—Time is—Time is past."

London Truth: The malicious and meddlesome organ of the Pinfrose league announces that Lord Hartington (and Mr. Gladstone, having declined to meet Lord Randolph Churchill,) he "consequently went off in a huff abroad." These statements are pure fiction and there is no foundation whatever for the spiteful innuendoes contained in them. Lord Randolph Churchill will be no more damaged by the pumping, jobbing snarl of the tory press than Mr. Gladstone has been. As a matter of fact, he left England by the advice of his medical attendant, and his departure had been decided some time before he left.
