Rev. Mr. Mackay Gives an Interesting Lecture On "Savonorola"—A Decision Concerning Druggists—Personal.

A Fearless Preacher. Last evening at St. Paul's church Rev. T. J. Mackay delivered a most interesting address on "Savonorola."

He presented an outline picture of the condition of Italy, and especially the church during that period, so as to rightly estimate the work and character of the noted Italian preacher and philosopher.

The absolute supremacy of the Roman pontiff or pope had begotten in the successors of St. Peter a spirit of worldly ambition.

The excesses and corruptions of this and succeeding centuries led to the reformation.

The popes of the fifteenth century entered upon a task which is to-day exercising the ingenuity of man everywhere—how to serve God and Mammon.

In consequence, the state of morals throughout Italy became frightful. Crimes were condoned by paying money into the church treasury.

Lucretia's story was told of the lowly Jesus. It was the papal vice chamberlain, when asked how notorious criminals escaped punishment, replied: "God will not the death of a sinner, but that he should pay and live."

The wickedness in high places infected the whole body, permeating over the monasteries. Pope Innocent rescinded the order forbidding concubinage, because that or something worse was universal.

He was, however, compelled to consent to the enforcement of an old edict forbidding priests to keep taverns, play houses and houses of ill-fame, to such a pass had the priestly order come at this time.

It was at this period that Savonorola was born. Destined by his parents for the medical profession, he was thoroughly educated, but to the bitter disappointment of his friends, he drifted into a religious life, and entered a monastery.

His time was spent largely in meditation and prayer. He ate only enough to sustain life. His garments were coarse, but neat, for "he liked poverty but not dirt."

His bed was of pieces of wood laid crosswise and a sack of straw. He was a close bible student, and to this day visitors to St. Mark in Florence are shown one of his bibles, the margins covered with notes.

Following with the greatest austerity a life of purity and self-denial, he judged how the corrupt practices of the church at large must have affected him.

To a less sincere and honest soul, the first impulse would be to surrender to the prevailing customs, and none but the bravest would have dreamt of stemming these abuses single handed.

His manner in the pulpit was that of the prophet, terrible in denunciation, and fearless in declaring the woes which would come because of the sins. He declared that these predictions were direct revelations from God.

He was doubtless sincere, and while many of his predictions remain unfulfilled to-day, it is also true that his political forecasts were rarely at fault.

There has never been a time when the claim of being able to foretell future events has been entirely absent from the human family.

Read the latest message of Washington, in the light of history, it seems prophetic. He was intrepid on being chosen prior of St. Mark. He declined to follow the custom of paying the cardinal's tax from the earnings of his singing in the act of dangerous concession to the temporal power.

All remonstrances were met with his query: "Is it God or Lorenzo who has made me prior?"

Lorenzo sought to moderate his pointed preaching by seeking his friendship, presenting large amounts of money to the convent and sending influential delegations. He defied all of Lorenzo's efforts.

This intrepid honest man as his last confessor.

The changes which made him the practical ruler of the city brought out his administrative ability. He wisely guided the unruly populace, insinuating various reforms, preached incessantly and kept up the spirit of the revival of morals.

The attempt to silence him by the threat of a cardinal's tax from the income proved in vain. Placing himself in opposition to the pope he aroused the sympathy of prominent people all over Europe, but also aroused an enmity as unscrupulous as it was powerful.

His severity had made him bitter enemies among the fickle populace.

In the burning of the vanities, a vast pyramid on which was piled pictures, carvings, medals, gowns, and other immodes dresses, lascivious books, perfumes and ornaments, and then consumed by fire, he took a step from the consequence of which nothing could save the people preferred vanities to austerity.

The pope issued his edict of excommunication. A new party, opposed to Savonorola, got control of the city and challenged him to prove the truth of his teaching by monk of the Franciscan order, by submitting to the ordeal by fire, both parties to enter a circle of fire, the victor to come out unharmed, the vanquished to die.

But the failure of his opponent to appear frustrated the scheme. The appetite of the mob had been aroused for such an exhibition, and it was with difficulty that he was able to return to his convent alive, the howls of this disappointed multitude proclaiming to the heart broken man, as he knelt in prayer in his lonely cell, that his days were numbered.

The once idol of the people was subjected to indignities and tortures, and the execution of the death sentence speedily followed.

The life of this wonderful personage shows what can be accomplished by one earnest man who has the courage of his convictions, and who practices what he preaches.

The church which burned him at the stake has now canonized him as a blessed martyr to the truth. Ten years later Raphael painted him among the sainted doctors of the church, on the walls of that same vatican which he had trampled at the preacher's denunciations, and whom he could silence only by death.

To-day all men admit the purity and grandeur of a life which shall ever be a grand inspiration to faithfulness, to God, to conviction of right, and an example to those who contend against the evils that still exist in the church and in the world.

Such men are needed to-day, as ever. They are needed to correct the shams and devices by which men, pretending to serve God, serve the world more effectually.

To do this they must have the consecration of Savonorola—his spirituality, his earnestness, his self-denying life. Well said Savonorola: "In the primitive church there were chalcives of wood and prelates of gold. In these days the church has golden chalcives and wooden prelates."

God sends men to return to the banks by lives of devotion and zeal, to restore the spirit and power of the church, even at the loss of the temporal. God helps us to be true to convictions of right. "The road that is given, guard, and to ourselves be true."

He Skipped Away. Deputy Sheriff White, of Mills county, came up last night to hunt for a boy named Harry Brown, who has run away from the institution of the feeble minded at Glenwood. He has traced the boy to this city where it is thought he will try to obtain transportation to his home in Cherokee, as he has told several persons while walking here from Glenwood that he had a uncle living in this city and if he could find him he could get home. He is between 16 and 18 years of age and strangers would hardly notice in talking on general topics that his mind was not right. He is harmless, but the authorities at the institution are anxious for his return. He has been at the institution but a short time.

THE MANAWA RAILWAY.

The Books to Open To-day and Several Enterprises Depend Upon It.

The Lake Manawa street railway company held a meeting Saturday at the office of Messrs. Wright, Baldwin & Haldane and this morning the stock books will be opened for the public spirited citizens who feel inclined to subscribe to what will no doubt prove a big investment. In all cities where they have motor railways, they have proved a grand success, and now it lies with the citizens of Council Bluffs to push this enterprise here to success.

The Minneapolis syndicate, with Mr. Hay at its head, recently purchased 160 acres of land adjoining the beautiful Lake Manawa and propose to erect a $30,000 hotel on the grounds, lay out parks and in general beautify this place and make it the popular resort for the masses, both in winter and summer.

It is not care to go ahead with their plans and begin operations until the Lake Manawa railway is an assured fact, but just as soon as they are satisfied beyond a doubt of the building of the motor railway, they will begin operations. In consequence of the large amount of improvements that of necessity awaits the assurance of the building of this road, the monied men of Council Bluffs should step forward and subscribe liberally to the stock of this enterprise.

Should the road be completed, and their charter makes it compulsory to be completed within a short time, it would afford rapid, cheap, safe and convenient transportation to what will be one of the finest resorts in the west. It would require not more than ten minutes to make the run from the Broadway depot, to the starting point of the motor railway, and could accommodate not only the residents of Council Bluffs but of Omaha, as well; and also many strangers would visit this city for the express purpose of visiting the lake and indulging in the bathing as well as the other sports which certainly will be inaugurated.

The building of the road as well as insuring the expenditure of not less than $40,000 by the Minneapolis syndicate on their hotel and grounds, will also insure the building of the cottages on the bank of the lake. The property was purchased for the express purpose of erecting summer cottages which are to be rented during the summer season, and the syndicate is composed of several well-known business men of Omaha, who propose to erect their own summer residences by the lake, as well as about three gentlemen from this city with two from Chicago.

Lake View has been platted but has never been put on the market. It was purchased by E. L. Squire, who will hold it until the railway is started. In connection with several others, he proposes to beautify it and build several nice houses and sell a portion of the remaining property to actual buyers.

The rowing association recently formed also will own a share of its success to the building of this motor railway. The association intends to build a fine large boat house, but before they begin operations wish to be assured that the road will be built.

Besides securing the success of these enterprises the motor railway, if one can judge by other cities, will be the cause of increasing the value of residential property along the immediate route of the same. In a conversation with Mr. Cooley, chief engineer of the Minneapolis Motor railway, who was recently in this city, he stated to a representative of the Bee that property on the line of the road would be much more valuable than property a block off of it; that no property in Minneapolis had advanced as that which was on the immediate line of the Minneapolis Motor railway. It is the same in all other cities where there is a motor railway, and as this city is becoming awakened to the fact that nothing like enterprise pays as that which pays big, the citizens should not be backward about subscribing to an enterprise like this.

There is no other resort in this part of the west that can be visited in the summer without the loss of several days to business men, and with the enterprises proposed Lake Manawa will be made to equal any of the popular western resorts; it will be easily accessible to residents of Omaha, Lincoln, Plattsmouth, Nebraska City, Blair, Valer, and the lively towns along the North-western road as well as on all of the other nine railways that center here and will be the means of bringing hundreds of visitors in daily.

As it is, there seems to be not a single kicker or mossback along the entire proposed route and all seem anxious to help push it along. It is to be hoped that this, above all other enterprises, will be pushed along and if the citizens will only look ahead they can readily see that this is an enterprise that deserves fostering.
