THE HARVEST ABOUT OVER.

The Palmy Days of Lincoln's Hotels and Saloons Drawing to a Close.

OFFICER MALONE INVESTIGATED.

The Badly Decomposed Body of a Man Found in a Back Room on O Street-Other Capital City News,

IFROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU. Lincoln's greatest harvest time is nearing a close. The hotels and boarding houses which have been filled to overflowing the past four months, will soon be deserted. The high priced furnished rooms will remain vacant for two long, weary years. The saloon men's profits will diminish more than one half, The country theatricals which have met the plaudits of the interior statesmen will go on the road to starve. The festive backmen will take time to properly feed and groom their abused horses. The merchants' sales will suffer a great decline. In fact, every business and moral interest of Lincoln will suffer a great shock by the adjournment of the legislature. It is safe to say that four-fifths of the $59,000 appropriated to defray the expenses of the legislature is paid to business men in Lincoln. Some say that a few dollars also find their way into the coffers of questionable business women. No wonder that Lincoln people and newspapers have nothing to say of the shortcomings of the legislature as a body when it is the support and vitality of the city. It has appropriated far more money to Lincoln institutions than ever before. It has created new enterprises and new interests and liberally endowed Nacity ever needed paved streets worse than Lincoln does. The streets are uniformly level and soft. After a rainfall the water stands and soaks in. There is no grading or sewers to carry it off. The movement on foot to pave the city comes none too soon. Like all such movements it is fraught with schemes to run in paving material in the interest of certain parties without regard to public economy. The city can well afford to make haste slowly. The people should take a hand and brace up their representatives in the council. It is an awful good time to look out for jobs. A few honest men can do nothing in the face of a corrupt majority with money.

THE SALINE LANDS. A looker on said to your correspondent yesterday: "The Saline land syndicate would rather have lost $25,000 than the would rather have lost $25,000 than the bill providing for sale of the land recom-mitted. The syndicate is the sorest crowd in the city to day. They are cast down as if by an overwhelming sorrow. There is a good deal of talk to day of annulling the action of the conference committee on adjournment, so that the legislature may hold over two or three days without pay. The movement is traceable directly to the land syndicate, who hope to revive

THE TEACHERS' MEETING. There are more than two hundred teachers in attendance at the state association meetings Interest in the discussions is very active and a great deal of good is being accomplished.

OPERA HOUSE COMPLAINTS.

Several complaints have come to this office of the repeated action of the opera house management here in raising the established price of admission upon occasions of crowded houses. The regular price of admission to the gallery is 25 cents, of admission to the gallery is 25 cents, which is immediately raised to 75 cents after all seats are sold and standing room only is announced.

INVESTIGATING THE MALONE CASE.
Officer Malone's official conduct was investigated by a special committee of the city council last evening. He was suspended some weeks ago for alleged misconduct, which action is said to be the culmination of a long and tedious petty warfare of jealousy and back-bit-ing among members of the force. A de-tailed review of the matter would be exceedingly tiresome. The committee is expected to report its findings next Monday evening. If reports may be relied on there are other members of the force there are other members of the force whose conduct needs more thorough investigation than Officer Malone. In the bill of particulars a charge is made that he was guilty of disobedience of his orders from Officer Post, who was at that time acting chief. The date was given as March 14, notwithstanding that he had suspended Mr. Malone on the 12th. Post also swore that he was appointed temporary chief on March 7, and in his charges he accuses Malone of disobedience of orders given him by Post on the 6th. Malone says that Post had issued no orders until the following Friday. Post testified that Malone had never disobeyed his orders while Post was actdisobeyed his orders while Post was acting chief.

HORRIBLE DISCOVERY. About 8 o'clock this morning a horrible discovery was made in a back room on the south side of O street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, over grocery store. The room had remained locked for three days, which gave rise to the suspicion that something was wrong. The authorities were notified and an immediate investigation was made. An officer broke in the door, and a scene that beggars description presented itself. There was no furniture in the room, but in one corner on a pile of straw the form of a dead man, apparently forty years old, partially covered by a quilt, lay stretched out. Upon one foot only was an old sock and shoe. He wore a suit of respectable-looking clothes. His bloated appearance and the sickening stench which filled the room, indicated that he had been dead at least three days. To add to his frightful appearance the rats had eaten away his nose and part of one cheek. The body was soon re-moved to the coroner's office, where at-tempts were made during the day to identify the unfortunate man. One person thought his name was Batchelder, but could not be positive. He know nothing whatever of the man's history or business. He had met the dead man but once. Another thought he recognized him as a former brakeman on the B. & M. railroad, but the records of the company could not substantiate this theory. The coroner is hard at work trying to learn the dead man's identity. There seems to be no suspicion of foul play in the case, although there is no evidence of cause of death. The whole case is wrapcause of death. The whole case is wrapped in mystery. An inquest will probably be held this evening.

A burglar entered a boarding house at Eighth and R streets last night, through a cellar window. He carried off an overcoat, two fur caps and a few other things of less value. He left the house without waking the occupants.

To-day it is stated upon the best of authority that Mr. John Fitzgerald has positively refused to accept the democratic nomination for mayor. His letter declining the nomination on the citizens' ticket ing the nomination on the citizens' ticket, and reasons therein given, would have rendered his acceptance of the democratic nomination decidedly in bad taste, and it was thought by his friends and himself that the letter would have de-

JICARILLO BOB TOOK THE POT. The Two Men Who Held Five Aces

Between Them Were Buried Farmington (N. M.) Letter in the New York Sun: They had a poker game here Saturday night in the back room of Jicarillo Bob, who was present to see that everything was fair. The men at the table were Tom Sinsabaugh, a cattle dealer, and Potter Abert, Omaha Throup and l'ap Williams, gamblers. The game had been going along for some without much excitement and with no very large winnings, when suddenly Pap Williams, who had thrown down two cards, offered to go it blind for $50. The others saw him, and a crowd that had as-sembled at the bar moved over to see how the thing would come out. All the others drew three eards each. Williams ran his cards over carelessly, called for a drink, and with a cigar in one corner of his mouth said he would bet $50. All the others stand in, and on the show-down, no one manifesting a disposition to rais it. one manifesting a disposition to raise it, it appeared that there were five aces out, Pap Williams having three and Potter Abert two. This discovery came very near resulting in war, but at the sugges-tion of Jicarillo Bob the pot was left up and a new deal was had, he taking the extra ace and tearing it up.

After the new deal Abert called for four cards, Sinsabaugh for three, Throup for three and Williams for two. There was now more than $400 in the pot, and as Abert offered to bet $50, the others felt that they would have to see him. concluded to raise the terms a little, and he put up $100. This caused old man Sinsabaugh to draw out, with the remark that the water was getting too deep for a man with a little pair. The other two saw the raise and called. Down came the cards, and almost simultaneously with their appearance was the crack of a revolver, and Potter Abert fell out of his chair, while Pap Williams, gun in hand, reached over and swept in the pile. of money. On the table in front of where Abert was lying were five cards, three of them aces, while in front of Williams were two aces, one of them be ing a duplicate of one in the hand of the man under the table.

So much interest was excited by the inspection of these two hands and the sweeping in by Williams of the money that no one noticed Abert slowly risin on the other side of the table. Jicarillo Bob was the first to catch a glimpse of him, but he had time only to cry out to Williams, when Abert's revolver was dis-charge, and Williams fell with a bullet through the head. Every man in the room, except, the proprietor, then broke for the door, but before all had gone out Bob's voice was heard saying that the dispute over the game had left no one to claim the stakes, and he as landlord would therefore take possession. Dis-playing two big repeaters as he said this, ne was just in time to reply to a shot from the weapon of Omaha Throup. Neither man was hit, and for a minute they stood facing each other. A by-stander here stepped between the men, and the crowd, edging forward, soon sep-arated them. Then a council of war was held, and it was agreed that the money not claimed should go to the house, the two survivors of the game receiving their stakes back.

their stakes back. The next morning Abert and Williams were buried just out of town, and at the head of their graves two boards were placed, that at Abert's grave having the inscription, "Three Aces," and that at Williams' grave having "Two Aces." The coroner's jury returned a verdict that both men came to their death from natural causes, "superinduced by over-eating." a good way, as one citizen said, of covering up the fact that they were hogs. It has not yet been decided which one had the extra ace, but from the fact that in Abert's pocket another ace was found and in Williams' belt there were two more, it is inferred that both were in the business.

but, to our thinking, the spectacle of a man in a lion's den is never a very edify-ing one. In the first place, however highly trained the animals may be, their performance falls very far short of that of performing dogs or "liberty" horses in a circus. When the lions have jumped backwards and torwards over barriers. and possibly their part of the business is is finished, though, in justice to Mr. Seeth, it must be mentioned that he has added a new feat by teaching one of his troupe to fire a pistol. But as a rule the feats of the wild animal are few and simple, the real attraction of the entertainment being to see a man exhibit his mastery over animals whose nature it is to resent interference; in other words, people go to see the tamer place himself in jeopardy. Of all exhibitions involving danger to the performer, the strongest admirers are generally those who would not for untold wealth venture the same thing or anything approaching thereto. The "high dive" into the net below was regarded with equanimity by crowds of persons who would shrink from taking a header off a four-foot board into a swimming bath; people who find delight in watching trapeze performers going through their evolutions at a dangerous height could not, probably, perform the simplest gymnastic exercise on the ground, while many of those who look on unconcernedly at the doings of the lion-tamer would re-treat incontinently into the nearest doorway if they saw an unmuzzled dog run-towards them. It is, however, a curious fact that, dangerous as lion-taming is, comparatively few lion-tamers have been killed in the exercise of their calling. If the sight of a man risking life and limb in a cage of wild animals can be tolerated, no one will venture to assert that the lion's den is the fit place for a woman, yet at the present time there is a "lion queen" who goes into the animals with her husband. She, however, is not the first of her race, though
