There were only two drunks to dispose of yesterday. This is about an average day's business for the superior court nowadays. Those who advocated this expensive piece of judicial machinery are not so enthusiastic over its workings as they were on the start. An ordinary magistrate could polish off these plain drunks quite as well as to have a $3,000 judge and a $1,200 clerk.

C. E. Stone has commenced a suit against the city, and got a temporary writ of injunction restraining the collection of an assessment for curbing in front of his Vine street property. He claims that he paid the contractors, Hammer & Moomaw, $50 on the improvement, leav-ing unpaid but a small balance. TWO SIDES TO THE SEINES.

The Fishermen Tell Their Story and Are Planning to Play Even.

THE DEALS IN BLUFFS DIRT.

Two Boys Bankrupted By a Peanut-The Veterans Want Supplies For the Rally-Still Trying the Alarm System.

The Fishermen's Side.

J. M. Johnson, one of those arrested at Honey Creek, in Crescent township, for fishing with a seine, denies that there is any truth in the report that he once drove off a fish commissioner with a shot gun. Sheriff Reel, and others who have known Johnson for a long time, declare that he is a very peaceable citizen, and that it is not at all like him to make any threats, or to resist an officer. Johnson says he never had any trouble of any kind in regard to the fishing before this. An officer told him last Sunday that he must not fish any more with a seine. The officer told him he could clean what fish he already had, and take them to market. Johnson promised to comply with the order. When he was placed under arrest he was taking the fish out of the box in which he had kept them preparatory to taking to market, Thursday being always the day of the week on which this was

As in all such matters there are two sides to the controversy. There seems to be no doubt but that the fish law has been violated, but those violating declare that other portions of the law have been violated right along by those who fish for fun. They insist that if the law is to be fun. They insist that if the law is to be enforced in their case it must be strictly enforced. They also purpose to have the Sunday law enforced and the law in regard to trespassers. The sportsmen who gard to trespassers. The sportsmen who go out in that part of the county to take fish or game will have to walk very circumspectly now, for the tables will be turned, if possible.

There is some little feeling also over the manner in which the arrested men were treated. It is aligned that Captain were treated. It is claimed that Captain Anderson on arresting the men should Anderson on arresting the men should have taken them before the nearest magistrate, which would have been in Crescent, where the men could easily have given bonds. Instead of that he put the irons on them and pushed right through Crescent, passing two magistrates, and brought them here and placed them in the county jail. Their friends had to come here to give bonds for them and secure their release.

There seems to be more feeling over the manner of seeking the enforcement there seems to be more feeling over the manner of seeking the enforcement of the law than over the fact that the law is to be enforced. Those who are thus indignant cite the case of the Min-den raid, as showing how quickly any community resists the idea of having officers from elsewhere come in to attempt officers from elsewhere come in to attempt to enforce a law which the home officers feel competent to handle. The fishing with seines will doubtless be brought to a speedy stop, for those united on enforcing the law are determined in their action. Those who seek the enforcement will, however, be bothered, if it is possible, for those who object to its enforcement are able to make them trouble. They will take special pains to watch for violations of law, and the sportsmen will needs obey the requirements to the letter.

of law, and the sportsmen will needs obey the requirements to the letter.

One farmer remarked yesterday: "What is the use of interferring with these men. You city folks do not know how much we depend on this fish supply. These men sell the fish all around the country. We haven't got time like you city fellows, to sit on a bank with a hook and line to catch a mess of fish. We don't get a chance at fish meat very often during the summer, and I tell you a mess during the summer, and I tell you a mess of fish tastes mighty good as a change from bacon. We had just as soon these men would fish with seines, if they want to. They bring the fish right to our places, and we can buy them for a few cents a pound.

It is said that another mode of revenge will be that of prosecuting the city chaps as trespassers. It is difficult to get at the lake except by passing over some private property, and such passage is to be for-bidden to the lone fisherman. In fact it seems that the war has just opened.

A Perfect Match. In the old lady's scrap book there appeared yesterday what purported to be an original editorial on the local page, headed "Unequal Marriages." The article was a wall of distress because there were so few perfect matches in matrimonial circles. It may relieve the old lady's anxiety and cheer her gloomy views of life to call her attention to the fact that a perfect match has been discovered, and in this city too. An article, which has been going around the country, from the Brooklyn Magazine, appeared yesterday among the stereotyped plates which the old lady received by freight, and which she used to make up her yesterday's issue. This article appeared on the editorial page of the same issue in which there appeared the issue in which there appeared the local editorial of "Unequal Marriages." Strangely enough this article also bore the same heading, read exactly the same, word for word, and the only difference discernable was that the article which came in plate form was in different type, and was credited to the Boston Magazine. It is a wonderful co-incidence that the "original" local editorial in the same issue should be word for word the same. It is a perfect match on "Unequal Marriages." In order to avoid the unpleasant suspicions which avoid the unpleasant suspicions which such coincidences excite with some, the old lady has instructed her children to hereafter compare the boiler iron part of the edition with the original clippings, so as to prevent too perfect matches in the Bankrupted the Boys. Two lads from Denver arrived at the transfer yesterday, being sent through by friends, and bound for further east to visit other friends. The boys had evidently been well supplied on starting from home, with the necessaries for the journey, and with pocket money. When they arrived here they were loaded down with a little of everything but money. They had evidently been worked by the newsboy to the full extent. They had books, numerous specimens of vegetable ivory, a full series of detective stories, prize candy packages figs and cigaretts. prize candy packages, figs and eigarettes, but not a dime with which to buy a bit of bread. The boys had made sad calculations, and their financial distress was pitiable. They were well supplied, however, with everything which they did not need, and it appeared that the only way out of the dilemma was to sell off or trade off their purchases at a sacrifice. A full grown fellow who knows enough to act as news agent on a train, should have chosen older and less susceptible victims. Jewel, Jewel, Jewel. The Jewel gasoline stoves are guaranteed to be the best in the market. Call, examine and get prices at P. C. De Vol's, 504 Broadway. Satisfaction guaranteed or stoves taken back and money refunded.

Still Trying the Alarm. There is nothing settled yet in regard to the Richmond fire alarm. The system is in, and is said to be in working order. The city is using it, so tar as it needs to use any system. There has only been oc-casion as yet to send one alarm over the wires. That was from box 21, the alarm being caused by the burning of a real one, sent in on the police call.

Both the fire and police alarms have been frequently tried, and they come in all right, but there has been no formal test, right, but there has been no formal test, and hence no acceptance of the system. No reason seems to be known for the delay in having a formal test, but the city seems to be losing nothing by such a delay, for a longer and better opportunity is thus given for trying the boxes, before having to pay down any money. At the same time it causes naturally a little district as it would seem that if little distrust, as it would seem that if the Richmond company was certain about the success of the system it would be in a hurry to get a formal acceptance, would file its guarantee bonds, and col-lect the first payment. The bonds guar-anteeing the works for two years have not been filed yet. J. G. Tipton has bottom lots, hill lots, residence lots, and business lots.

"The Farmer's Daughter."

This is to be presented at the opera house Saturday afternoon and evening. It is a play dealing with modern society life, wherein a happy family, consisting of a talented husband and father, his wife, the wealthy farmer's daughter, and their little girl, are agitated and almost divided through the machinations of an adventuress to supplant the wife in her husband's affections, and thus gain access to his large fortune. Her deeply-laid plans approach success, when "Lennox," the approach success, when "Lennox," the husband, has a vision of his future career, seeing himself at the end a raving maniac, destitute of both friends and fortune. From this horrid nightmare he awakes to find himself still surrounded by wife and child, and his fortune still intact. The conclusion is part, he immediately The conclusion is patent; he immediately breaks with the adventuress, and resolves to see neither her nor her associate again, and the curtain grops on a reunited family circle, happy in their mutual love.

Believes It Was Murder. The details of the finding of the body of Irvin near the Broadway crossing of the Northwestern railway, are still fresh in the memory of the BEE readers. At the time several circumstances indicated that Irvin had been foully dealt with. Irvin's brother was here yesterday looking up further evidence. Ha is satisfied that he is on the right track, and it is expected that there will be some startling developments. The mystery of the man's death, and the condition of the body, can hardly be accounted for on the theory that he fell beneath the cars. It seems that he must have been left on the track in an upconscious condition at least, and probably was dead when the wheels

A LOVELY LOBBYIST.

The Charming Woman in Black Who Fascinated More Than One Senator. men. One lady, the wife of a senator from a far western state, was very indig-nant because her husband succumbed to the blandishments of this fascinating creature, and a suit for divorce might have followed but for the adjournment of the senate, which separated the senator and the woman who had alienated his affectious. The western senator is not the only one who was in danger. There were several others, notably one who has a large family of young children, and who is a man high in the management of the democratic party. Every senator in the body for several weeks observed the quiet flirtations going on between their col-leagues and the woman in black. Some of them made light of the matter, and unmercifully twitted their brother senators. Others felt that the dignity of the senate had been trifled with, and were seriously thinking of taking steps to end the little scenes that took place at the chamber day after day.

The woman in the case made her first appearance here last summer just before adjournment. She was then engaged in selling a book written by a prominent public man. She was very successful in this, both because of the popularity of the work and the unique way in which she solicited subscriptions. She brought with her to Washington a formal note of introduction to almost every gentleman in the capitol building. She would call upon them, leave a fashionable card, present her note of introduction, and when connected in a pleasant chat she would offer to sell the book. Many who would not have wasted a moment upoa an ordi nary book agent, spent half an hour in conversation, and then felt compelled to subscribe in order to escape being rude. From the day of her arrival at the capital, she attracted wide attention by her beauty and evident refinement. Her bearing was the height of modesty, yet there was a dreamy, wistful look in her languid blue eyes that was fatal.

At the opening of the session just ad-journed, the beautiful book agent was again on hand, but instead of soliciting orders from members of the house, com-mittee clerks, and other officials, it was noticed that she spent all her time at the senate. The system of freemasonry es-tablished, by which she obtained interviews with senators is interesting. All the doorkeepers knew her, and whenever she arrived they would jump from their chairs with great agility, each anxious to serve her first. There is a rule that no cards shall be pre-sented to senators until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, but this mysterious female was hampered by no such restric-tion. She arrived at the capitol every day, just after noon. Smilingly she would glide up to the doorkeeper, speak to him in a low tone, and two minutes later would be found chatting with the desired senator on the sofa in the marble room. Everybody, whose business has required frequent visits to the senate, has required frequent visits to the senate, has observed the woman in mourning and her tete a tetes with the senators, and numerous inquries as to who and what she was have been made. The replies are all unsatisfactory.

There are at least six senators who could tell all about her if they would. They have been kneeling at her feet all winter, and have borne all sorts of unpleasant remonstrances from their colleagues for her sake. There is one senpleasant remonstrances from their col-leagues for her sake. There is one sen-ator, the one whose wife threatens to sue for divorce, whose committee room is near the entrance to the private lobby. On certain days when the ex-book agent arrived she would go straight to the door of the committee room, and after a hasty nod at the doorkeeper of the lobby, walk straight into the little room. At other times, receiving another sort of nod, she would walk away without seeking admittance. It has been noticed that on cer-tain afternoons, when the senator failed to respond to roll call, the young woman in mourning also failed to make her usual visits to the senate.

When twitted by their colleagues about the visits of the beautiful young woman the smitten senators always reply: "Oh, she is endeavoring to secure the passage of a bill in which her hus-band is interested. It's a good bill, too, and ought to pass. The bill that this pretty lobbyist was endeavoring to pass was introduced in January, and favorably reported a week later. It provided for the payment of a large number of officials for extra work performed in the years from 1871 to 1885. She seems to be in a much more pros-perous condition than when she was a book agent last session, and, white she was then quite poorly dressed, she is stylish and fashionable now, although she wears the same black bonnet and long, deep veil of crape.
