

AN ASSASSIN IN THE DARK.

Denis Quinlan Bearly Murdered on the Bellevue Road.

THE MURDERER UNKNOWN.

Disastrous Termination of a Day of Enjoyment to a Young Man Well-known in This City.

Mysterious Tragedy.

Last night at 11:30 o'clock, just as the last loiterers around the saloons in the vicinity of Haswell's park were about adjourning to their homes, there was heard a report of a pistol. The flash was seen by many on Vinton street in front of what was formerly Haswell's, now Spoerl's park. An instant later a crowd stood around a body which lay in the mud. One of the number felt for the pulse of the prostrate man and found that the heart beats had ceased forever. The remains were lifted from the mire and carried into Henry Jones' saloon, on the southwest corner of Vinton street and the Bellevue road, the carrying being done by P. M. Cummings, Jos. Gardner and Chas. Hoyer.

When the Bee reporter arrived upon the scene, on the floor of the saloon mentioned lay the body of a young man about 20 years of age. He was of shapely form. Closer inspection revealed the fact that he was clad in a neatly-made suit of clothes. He wore no collar. His face was almost completely covered with mud which had dried black upon all the prominent features, and his clothes on the front of his person were sadly soiled by the same material. It seemed as if, after having been shot, he fell prone upon his face and never stirred while the vital spark was being extinguished. The right eye was closed tight, while the ball of the left, blood-shot and glazed, had almost shot from its socket. The hands had been placed upon the breast, and that was only quiet feature about the unfortunate who had come to so violent an end.

The murdered youth is Dennis Quinlan. Investigation into the cause of the shooting developed the following facts:

On the northeast corner of Vinton and Eighteenth streets is what is known as Mueller's hall. On Sundays, it is a resort for people in the neighborhood who desire to drink beer and dance. This propensity may be indulged into the night. The usual Sunday night ball was in progress last night. It was attended among others by young Quinlan, Michael Hineley, Chas. Hoyer, R. M. Cummings, together with the parties who are responsible for the crime. The latter were three in number. It is claimed that one of them was admitted to the dance hall by Miss Mueller without paying the customary price of admission. Two of them were more or less under the influence of liquor. They danced as stagers around the hall and it is stated that a special pleasure in waltzing against other dancers for the pleasure of depriving them of the enjoyment of the dance. This fact led to a wordy dispute between them and Quinlan, which was followed by the latter putting himself into a position of defence and challenging the others to an attack. Several friends interferred and the parties were separated before a blow had been struck. Miss Mueller took the three above mentioned aside and conversed with them in German, nothing further of a belligerent nature occurring and Quinlan and his friends returning to the enjoyment of the scene. Immediately after the separation, however, Joseph Gardner, who understands German, said to Thomas Flynn, who was also present, that the heavier man of Quinlan's assailants said in German, "I'll fix that fellow when I catch him out," at the same time reaching for his revolver and taking it from his hip pocket.

Nothing more was thought of the occurrence, especially as two of the disturbers left the hall. One of these was described as a tall, slender man with long hair, the other being a short heavy man. It was the latter who had made the threat alluded to.

A few minutes later R. M. Cummings said to the party, "Let us take a run down to Jones' and get a drink." The suggestion was approved, and the crowd, known to consist of Cummings, Quinlan, Flynn, Gardner, Hoyer, Durr and possibly several others left the hall and started for Jones'. The latter place is distant southwest about 130 feet. They took the street, and being they claimed in good spirits ran at an easy gait. One-half of the street opposite Spoerl's park was soft with mud, merely a track wide enough for vehicles being dry. Along this track the party proceeded and when they had reached a point almost north of Jones' two men were met. Quinlan was very near the lead and Cummings close by. One of the opposing party, whom Cummings recognized as the long-haired man, said: "Here's the ——— we want," and immediately struck at him. Quinlan attempted to defend himself, and as he did, the heavy-set man above referred to rushed up and remarked: "And here are more of them." The next instant his revolver exploded and Quinlan fell to the ground. Cummings ran to seize the thick-set assassin and immediately the latter snapped his revolver at him, but the cartridge failed to explode. The report of the pistol checked the advance of some of Quinlan's associates. The long-haired man turned, ran west, and dashed through Jones' saloon, and made his exit through the back door. Jones noticed the party running through his place, but did not know him, neither did he know what had transpired. He had heard the shot, but supposed that it had been fired by some person at his dog, because he had heard the canine bark a moment before the report of the explosion was heard.

The heavy-set man ran westerly along the Bellevue road followed by Cummings, who pursued him to the end of Spoerl's park. There the assassin ran west toward Twentieth street. Cummings not being armed there desisted at the suggestion of his companions and the murderer disappeared.

A crowd gathered in an instant. The dance at Mueller's was broken up, the saloons in the neighborhood were emptied and amidst a frenzied crowd, the stain man was conveyed to Jones' as above described.

Dr. Wirth was summoned at 11:40 o'clock. He examined the wound. It was found in the corner of the left eye. The bullet penetrated to and lodged in the brain. As the body was turned over some of the brains of the unfortunate young man dropped through his nostrils to the floor, and in a short time a pool of blood formed there under Quinlan's head. The man of course was beyond relief. Indeed, he did not speak after he was shot. The police were notified and Captain Cormaek and Lieutenant Mostyn drove immediately to the scene. Coroner Drexel was also notified, and with Messrs. Maul and Baker soon reached the spot. He selected a jury as follows: M. O. Maul, Thomas Cormaek, W. C. Gregory, Frank Atkinson, J. B. Ryan and E. A. O'Brien. The inquest will be held to-day at the coroner's office, at 2 o'clock.

A feeling of intense indignation prevailed among the crowd which viewed the remains, and deep regret was expressed that the murderers had not been apprehended.

Shortly after the arrival of the Bee reporter, Miss Mueller, who tends to the door in her father's dance hall, was brought to see Quinlan. She failed to recognize him, however, though that may be because of the mud upon the latter's face, which would have made his identification, even by his parents, a matter of difficulty. On his vest, however, was pinned a small white ribbon striped with red which served as proof that Quinlan had paid for admission to Mueller's hall.

Denis Quinlan, the murdered man is a carriage painter by trade and was employed in Snyder's carriage factory on the corner of Harney and Fourteenth streets. He is a temperate young man and was not under the influence of drink when he was shot. In his pockets were found a bundle of letters, mainly from friends in Chicago, who will be telegraphed to-day. He had also upon his person a couple of certificates of deposit in banks in this city. He has no parents residing here so far as known, his only relative being an aunt named Mrs. Byrne, who keeps a grocery on Thirteenth between Center and Dorcas streets. The remains are now in the coroner's morgue.

The police worked all night upon the clues given them, and are determined to leave nothing undone to catch the assassin. There will be little difficulty in identifying the guilty ones, because, while nobody who could be seen last night knew their names, there were a dozen who would recognize them on sight.

Their Ardent Invader.

The Salvation army invaded Bohemian town last night. Its experience was not the most encouraging in the world. With flying colors and shouting drums the army passed on South Twentieth street about 7 o'clock. It halted not until it reached a saloon at the corner of Williams street. "Halt!" cried the captain.

The army halted. The drums beat loudly and the two female privates sounded their tambourines vigorously. The leading tenor struck up a tune, "The Way to Heaven is not Easy," and the rank and file took it up.

Just then the saloonkeeper came out. He looked at the Salvation army. The army looked at him and sang more loudly and fiercely than ever. Just then an idea struck the saloonkeeper. He concluded that the street in front of his place was dusty and needed sprinkling. He grasped a thirty-foot length of hose and turned on the water, flooding the street and the Salvation army. The Salvation army did not mind the water, but the Salvation army did mind the water being turned on. "I think those Salvation army duns come around here again pooty quick. Vat you dink mit yourself, eh?"

"Rout Them for a Dollar." A man named Baptiste was found in Hausen's saloon, on Tenth street, last evening with a bundle of clean underwear and shirts and collars which he was trying to sell. Officer Dempsey took him to Stephenson's barn and momentarily left him while he stepped to a telephone to call the patrol wagon. The fellow saw his chance and dashed out of the door. Dempsey had a ten second hundred yard dash to make before he caught his man again. The prisoner claimed he had bought the clothing from an unknown man on the street for a dollar. The shirts all have the name of W. B. Ostrander and from the appearance of the clothing it had been stolen out of a drawer or trunk. Mr. Ostrander can recover his property at the police station.

ACCOMPLISHED

Ever since our opening here we have labored under great disadvantage on account of our store being too crowded. We were heretofore not able to get such a large place as we desired, and not only were we prevented from keeping the stock we intended, but we could not even properly display the assortment we did carry.

We have at last succeeded in securing additional room and have leased the two floors above as also the rear part adjoining our store on 14th street. This, in addition to our present salesroom, will make us the largest clothing house in the west.

The necessary alterations will crowd us fearfully, and this as well as the desire to open the enlarged quarters with entirely fresh goods prompts us in making a SPECIAL SALE, at which we will offer extraordinary bargains.

We are Now Marking down our Stock throughout at such prices that it will make a stir in the clothing trade, and will move our goods quickly.
