FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU. Information was received by telegraph In Lincoln yesterday that the contract had been signed, sealed and delivered in Chicago for the construction of two and a half miles of cable street railway in the city of Lincoln the present year. John H. Ames and J. H. McMurtry have been in Chicago the past few days, where they met the representative of the construction company, J. K. Graves, of Dubuque, Ia., who a few weeks ago was in Lincoln looking the ground over and preparing his estimates for contracts. The building of this cable line will now be watched with increased interest and the struggle to have the location point to different tracts of suburban property will be interesting to note.

WANTED FOR MURDER Sheriff O. P. Hallam, of Washington county, Illinois, obtained requisition papers from the governor yesterday for the arrest of one Robert Gore, who lives in Red Willow county and is wanted for a murder committed in Illinois in May. 1867. At the time Gore committed the murder he fled the state and has not been heard from since until a short time ago, when the authorities in Illinois received an anonymous letter from Indianola, Neb., stating that Gore was there and had boasted of the murder committed twenty years before. The copy of the indictment made at the time the murder was committed, and attached to the papers, show that Gore shot a man at that time at Nashville, Ill., killing him instantly. Upon telegrams forwarded from Kansas City, Gore was arrested by the local authorities in Red Willow county, and Sheriff Hallam departed on the noon train yesterday for his man.

DECORATION DAY.

Memorial services on Decoration day in this city will be imposing and of un-usual interest. The majority of the busi-ness houses in the city will close, and the parade promises to excel any former effort. In the morning hours the graves of the dead soldiers in Wyuka cemetery will be decorated, and at 1:45 p. m. the procession will form for a march to the grounds, where the services will be held. The university cadets and band, the posts of the G. A. P., the three divisions of Knights of Pythias in full uniform, the city government, state officers, board of trade, etc., in carriages, will form a part of the line that will cover the principal streets and march to the university grounds, where the exercises will be held. Senator Charles F. Manderson, of Omaha, is the orator of the day.

PARNELL'S GRANDFATHER. His Commission Was Signed by Andrew Jackson in Big Letters. Kansas City Times: "Come in and hear this story," said the Hon. Thomas L. James, as I stopped at the door of the directors' room of the Lincoln National bank of New York this week. "You know Pay Director Cunningham of the navy, of course. He says that he has a letter from Mr. Parnell, which, when compared with the London Times forgery, proves the original of the latter spurious."

"Yes," said Mr. Cunningham, "and there is an interesting bit of history connected with the letter I have. I said to Mr. Parnell one day that he came honestly by his hatred of British oppression, for his grandfather, Rear Admiral Charles Stewart, was one of the best fighters who ever shed lustre on the United States navy, and the only officer sine John Paul Jones who, with one ship in a fair fight, captured two of the enemy. He didn't seem to know much about it, but the country was wild with enthusiasm over it at the time. It was in February, 1815, as you remember, that Captain Stewart's ship, the Constitution, fell in with the British ships of war Cyane, thirty-four guns, and Levant, twenty-one guns, off the coast of Spain, and after a light of forty minutes captured both. Stewart lost three men killed and thirteen wounded while the enemy lost thirty-five killed and forty-two wounded. The Levant was subsequenty recaptured by the Britwas subsequenty recaptured by the Brit-ish squadron of three ships, which reached the American position under cover of a dense fog, but Stewart saved his own ship and the Cyane and kept his prisoners. When he returned to this country he was presented by the com-mon council of New York with the freedom of the city in a gold box, and with his officers was entertained at a great public dinner. The legislature of Pennsylvania voted him a gold-hilted sword, and con-gress tendered him a vote of thanks, and ordered a gold medal struck in his

"I told Mr. Parnell this, and that I had his grandfather's commission as commodore, signed by President Andrew Jackson. That commission is a curiosity. In the first place, it was written by hand; all the commissions of United States officers were written before the time of President Van Buren; after that they were printed in ordinary type until the time of General Grant. Now they are beautifully engraved. The parchment in Andrew Jackson's time was coarse, like leather, and almost as thick as this sheet of blotting paper. Jackson's signature on Commodore Stewart's commission is a remarkable one. The first initial is at least three inches long and correspondingly heavy, and the remainder of the name is proportioned to the first letter. You can imagin how Jackson, when he took his pen to write it, said: 'Now, this is for my old friend, Charley Stewart, and I'll give him a signature that will show him that I mean it."

"Old Hickory did things for effect, sometimes, you know. Chief Justice Taney told me of a remarkable instance. He was with Jackson when a committee from Philadelphia was announced, desired to see him about the United States bank. He was in a most affable mood, but said to Taney: 'Lmust pre-pare myself for the reception.' He stalked up and down the room for a minute or two, ran his fingers through his hair, put his clothing awry, and grew red in the face. When the committee came in he roared at and bullied them. and after they had gone, asked Taney if he didn't think he had properly impressed them. "I offered to give Mr. Parnell his grandfather's commission, and when he received it he wrote me the letter I re-ferred to. Good day. I'm off for Wash-ington."

PAY DAY AT FORT ROBINSON.

How the Boys in Blue Beguile the Bot tle and the Loaded Dice. Crawford (Neb) Crescent: The troops here were paid off on the 6th inst., and Paymaster Bash departed on the 7th. Immediately after payment the fun began, fast and furious. A military post, on pay day presents a lively spectacle. No sooner are the companies dismissed than a grand rush is made for the post trader's saloon, where our genial friend the champion cork-puller, Green, stands waiting with sleeves rolled up, armed with a cork-screw, ready for the fray. Behind him are cases and kegs of foaming lager. "Six beers here!" "four wines here!" "cigars this way," yell the crowd from every side. Corks fly and bottles are emptied as if by magic. Cigars are then lit and the boys are ready for the business of the day. The gamblers are now on deck. Just imagine a crowd of from one to two hundred men in a single small room, trampling and than a grand rush is made for the pos crowd of from one to two hundred men in a single small room, trampling and jostling each other in their eagerness to reach the small tables where the "dealers" have piled up their money to break or be broke, devil a bit do they care which. A peddler, grap-sack filed with sinde jewelry in hand, enters, he is hustled aside, no one cares to look at his wares. Anyone cares to look at his wares. Anxious creditors, in search of long standing debts creditors, in search of long standing debts peer in at the yelling crowd and vainly try to attract attention, but no one sees them, no one hears them. The boys are all rustling for a "stake." The betting is fast and reckless. Twenty, thirty, forty and even fifty dollars are unhositatingly stacked on the turning of a card. What a yell of delight arises as some lucky better rakes in a large bet, and how the dealer shuffles his deck—often with the sweat running down his forewith the sweat running down his fore head—as the pile of money in front of him steadily decreases. And well may he sweat, for in a few more bets his capi-tal in trade has vanished with startling rapidity, and the lucky winner, clutching a couple of hundred dollars in each hand, is hustled off to his quarter by his friends, for the luck may turn. As we glance over the tables, the scene is intensely dramatic. On either side extend the rows of cards almost buried beneath the piles of coin and greenbacks, aggregating hundreds of dollars. A breathless allence falls on the anxious crowd, whose gaze is fastened with a devouring intensity on each tell-tale bit of pasteboard, as the dealer slowly draws it forth, and as ne rakes off the losing card, the individual whose all was perhaps staked on it, steps whose all was perhaps staked on it, steps back and makes place for another expectant winner. The garrison police are also on the alert and the sergeant of the guard keeps a sharp look-out for civilian "tin horns," who will often run the gauntlet in order to get a share of the "swag." All day the game goes merrily on. A strolling Italian harpist drops in with his instrument and strikes up an Irish jig. Instantly a tipsy son of Erin is footing it to the lively strains, while yells of "go it, Paddy, avick!" "More power to yea!" "Whoop, hurrah for ould Ireland!" rise on every side. The tide of good luck inclines from one side of the garrison to the other. Last pay day the infantry scooped the boodle and left the cavalry boys high and dry, financially. This pay day the tide changed and the troopers, combining their forces, fell upon the unlucky mud mashers and succeeded in carrying away almost the entire

SUNKEN TREASURE,

Immense Fortunes Recovered From the Sea. London Telegraph: The memory of the loss of £200,000 of silver and gold will survive the loss of 1,000 souls in a coup. There was the Lutine, for in-stance. She was of thirty-two guns, commanded by Captain Skynner, and she went ashore on the bank of the Fly island passage on the night of October 9, 1799. At first she was reputed to have had £600,000 worth of specie on board. This was afterward contradicted by a statement that "the return from the bullion office makes the whole amount £140,000 sterling." "If," I find in a contemporary account. "the wreck of the unfortunate Lutine should be discovered there may be reason to hope for the recovery of the coast of South America. They succeeded and brought home £300,000, which had been forty-four years at the bottom of the sea. Captain Phipps, who commanded, had £20,000 for his share, and the duke of Albemarle £90,000. A medal was struck in honor of this event in 1687. There was a very costly wreck in 1767. She was a Dutch East Indiaman and foundered within three leagues of the Texel, taking down all hands but six and £500,000. The price of four such armadas as that of 1588 went down in the last century alone in the shape of gold, silver and plate. She was the annual register ship, as the term then was, and had in her 500,000 pustres and 10,000 ounces of gold on account of the king. and twice that sum on the merchants account, making her a very rich ship. She foundered and no man escaped to

The Royal Charter is the most notable modern instance of the wreck of a "treasure" ship that I can just now call to mind. She left Australia with £350,000 in her. Of this sum, says Charles Dickens, in his chapter on this dreadful shipwreck in "The Uncommercial Traveler," £300,000 worth were recovered at the time of the nevelist's visit to the spot where she had driven ashore. "The great bulk of the remainder," writes Dickens, "was surely and steadily coming up. Some loss of sovereigns there would be, of course; indeed, at first, soverigns had drifted in with the sand and been scattered far and wide over the beach, like sea shells, but most other golden treasures would be found. So tremendous ures would be found. So tremendous had the force of the sea been when it broke the ship that it had beaten one great ingot of gold deep into a strong and heavy piece of her solid fron work, in which also several loose sovereigns that the ingot had swept in before it had been found as firmly imbedded as though the iron had been liquid when they had been forced there." This is a curiosity of disaster, but mightily suggestive of the sea's miserly trick of concealing her

What Would the World Do without women? asks the essaist who starts out to say something new on this off-treated subject. Of course, the human element of the world would not exist without woman, so the question is gratuitous. It would have been far more sensible to ask: What would the world do without the salvation of woman, without a panacea for her physical ills and care for her peculiar diseases. In a word, what would the world do without Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Perscription," the great remedy for female weakness? It is indispensable for the ills of woman-

How the Monte Carlo Job Was Done. Court Journal: This is how the organ-ized swindle on Wednesday afternoon last is said to have been done:

Just before the commencement of a deal at trente-et-quarante the attention of the chef de parti and other employes was drawn from the table. One nobleman wanted change for a £100 English note; another dropped a number of louis on the floor, which always creates a dison the floor, which always creates a dis-traction, a third raised a noisy dispute over a previous stake. Meanwhile, a fourth chevalier cleverly slipped a num-ber of cards on the top of the six packs about to be dealt. The dealer was in collusion with the rogues, and received the prepared cards under cover of a 1,000 franc note, passed up in the usual way for change. Then the little game began. Maximums were freely played at both ends of the table, and of course were won. The bank had to renew its capital two or three times, and the excitement was immense.

The added cards being finished the association of thieves slipped away, but suspicion was aroused. The packs were counted, and sixty or seventy too many cards being found the dealer was put under arrest. Three hundred and eighty thousand francs is the sum mentioned as the spoil carried off; but bona fide play-ers also followed the lead of the apparently lucky punters, and it is said the loss of the bank was not far short of £20,000. The implicated dealer has been sent out of the country, as legal proof would be difficult, and the administration are anxious to have the matter kept could.

Outcome Remedies.

If I had known of the Curicura Remedies twenty-eight years ago it would have saved me $2.0.00 (two hundred dollars) and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (Psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body and got under my nails. The scales would drop off of me all the time, and my suffering was endless, and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have this disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors asid was leprosy, some ring worm, psoriasis, etc. I took. . . and . . Sarsaparillas over one year and a half, but no cure. I cannot praise the Curicura Remedies too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was three boxes of Curicura, and three bottles of Curicura Soap. If you had been here and said you would cure me for $200.00 you would have had the money. I looked like the picture in your book of Psoriasis (Picture number two "How to Cure Skin Diseases"), but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me, I thank you a thousand times. Anything more that you want to know write me, or any one who reads this may write to me and I will answer it.

Honesty is the best policy in the manufacture of proprietary articles as in all other matters, and the fact that the proprietors of Athlophoros have never claimed for it even all its merits would warrant has not a little to do with its wonderful popularity, and the thousands of grateful testimonials received
