SHERMAN AT SPRINGFIELD.

The Ohio Senator's Vigorous Address Before the Illinois Legislature.

POLITICAL ISSUES PRESENTED.

The Policy of the Administration Denounced in Unmeasured Terms-A Strong Comparison Between the Two Great Parties.

Senator Sherman's Speech. SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 1.-The bad weather of to-day seriously interfered with the Sherman reception. About 12 o'clock rain set in, which continued at intervals, making it necessary to abandon the outdoor demonstration. Elaborate preparations had been made in the way of a platform and seats in front of the state house. During a full of the storm about 8,000 persons occupied seats, but were driven to representative hall by the rain. The committee therefore determined to remove the demonstration to the shelter of the state house and the crowd surged and pressed for entrance to the assembly chamber. In a short time 2,000 people had crowded into the small galleries and about 1,500 to the floor of the house. As Senator Sherman, accompanied by Governor Oclesby, Senators Cullom and Farwell, state officers and members of the managing committee, entered the hall, there loud and continued applause. In introducing Senator Sherman, Governor Oglesby said that all present were aware that not one-lifth of those who had visited the state capital to hear the distinguished visitor had been able to gain admission. Senator Sherman had occupied a most prominent place in the history of the country for more than a third of a century. He was one of those who assisted in the organization of the republican party, and was one of the helpers to Abraham Lincoln in the early efforts of the people to organize that party. He was, as all know, perfectly familiar with the history of the country, and had helped to shape the foundation of the republic, and had been one of its chief statesmen during the last one-third of a century. Sherman then began his address as fol-

Fellow Citizens, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is with unaffected diffildence that I accented the invitation of officers and members of the legislature of Illinois to speak to you here on the political issues of the day, for I know that they have been presented to you by many eminent statesmen and orators of your state in a far more attractive manner than I could hope to copy. Still I regard this invistate in a far more attractive manner than I could hope to copy. Still, I regard this invitation as a call of public duty, and I hope to catch some of the inspiration that springs from this fountain of political intelligence. And now that I have seen your city, have met you here, and have been received so cordially, I do not regret my coming.

What you desire of me, I presume, is a statement of my views of the principles and tendencies of the two great political parties of the country, for they must be tested by these and not by independent opinions or partial differences, which always exist. These principles are the natural outgrowth of the contest over the institution of slavery that has continued since the commencement that has continued since the commencement of the government, but it was not until the repeal of the Missouri compromise, and the great debata that occurred in Illinois between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, that the philosophy of slavery was fully presented before popular audiences. It was this debate that led to the nomination of Mr. Lincoln and made him the first republican president of the United States.

Then also was shown the destructive tendencies of the institutions of the description.

dencies of the institution of slavery and its dencies of the institution of slavery and its mastery over the democratic party. Because Mr. Douglas would not agree to its extreme demand it broke up the Charleston convention and destroyed his last hope of success. When Lincoln was elected it fired upon Fort Sumter and commenced the war that covered our land with heroic dead and left among us hundreds of thousands of maimed, wounded and invalid soldiers and the widows of those who perished. But, thank God, in this struggle slavery committed suicide, and the good time which Lincoln hoped would come in the far future, came by the attempt at secession, and it was his hand that wrote the decree of eternal justice that abolished slavery forever. abolished slavery forever.

It was the republican party that guided the ship of state through the perils and storms of civil war. It marshalled armies. storms of civil war. It marshalled armies, built navies, improvised a currency which to this day is the best ever devised in peace or war. It borrowed immense sums of money, and yet laid the foundation of a public credit higher in the markets of the world than that of any nation in our own or in ancient times. It also established a public policy of taxation, which, improved since the war, has filled our treasury to overflowing with revenue, and yet has so encouraged, developed, fostered and protected our industries, that we can dig from our mines, make in our own workshops and raise on our own farms all the raw products of nature, and every article of necessity, convenience or luxury essential to the highest civillence or luxury essential to the highest civil what did the democratic party do during these trying times? That many thousand democrats did their full share in maintaining the government, both in the field and in the public councils, must be conceded by every fair minded man and the highest credit must be given to them for their patriotism, courage and devotion to duty. Chief of these at the and devotion to duty. Other of these at the beginning of the contest was Stephen A. Douglas. No man doubts that if he had lived he would have stood at the right hand of Lincoln in the senate, and in the field, would have maintained the honor of the flag and the integrity of the Union, and, like Lincoln and Grant, would never have yielded until and Grant, would never have yielded until the last rebel had laid down his arms in un-conditional surrender. His speech made in the old state house here, on the 25th day of April, 1861, after Mr. Lincoln's first call for troops, is full of passages of the most earnes patriotism.

Referring to the democracy in the south Referring to the democracy in the south-ern states. Sherman said: There was not an intelligent man in the land who does not know that Cleveland is president by virtue of crimes against the electoral franchise, in-cluding murder, arson, bailot-box stuffing, forgery, and perjury, and but for which Blaine would now be in his place. Senator Bherman decounced the president's veto of the river and harbor bill, and the democratic financial rediox. Speaking of the tariff. Sherfinancial policy. Speaking of the tariff, Sher-man said the revenues must be reduced, but opposed the reduction of duties on articles that we ourselves produce, thus bringing our skilled artisans in competition with foreign labor that will inevitably reduce the price of domestic labor.

Sherman closed his speech as follows: If Sherman closed his speech as follows: If I have correctly stated the aims and tendencies of the two parties, the republican party is the only one litted to carry on the government. Our adversaries may brood over the dead past and mourn the decay of confederate ideas; but republicans hall with unbounded satisfaction every advance of our country in strength and power at home and abroad, conscious that this is consistent with the full powers of the state, county and local sovereignty, reaching to every family and homestead in the land. We brood over no lost cause, but look forward hopefully to rean tor future centeral. We brood over no lost cause, but look for-ward hopefully to reap for future genera-tions the great benefits conferred by the sac-rifices and services of our patriot soldiers in the preservation of the union and the abolion of slavery.

it is said that the republican party had been long in power. Our democratic friends wanted to examine the books. They wanted to turn the rascals out. What rascals nave they found in? What wrong or peculation have they found in the books? I can with confidence and pride say to you that no administration of this or any covernment has ministration of this or any government has been more free from corruption, fraud or peculation than the republican administra-tions from Lincoln to Arthur, both included. The republican party has justified itself in war and in peace. It is the only party in this country that can give you a national, patriotic, liberty loving, fraud hating and business administration. It enters into the lists this year and next year proud of its record, with no apologies to make, no crimes to repent of, no people deprived by it of their rights. It has stood the test of defeat and retirement with unquestioning acquiescence, though it was brought about by crime. It has fairly treated the democratic president, who has gained public approval only as he has resisted his party. It will again appeal to the suffrages of the people, asking only an honest vote and a fair count, and referring to its record in the past as the best evidence it can give that it will maintain in the future the honor of our country abroad, develop the resources of our people at home, and secure all, so far as it can in the full and equal enjoyment of the rights and privileges of American citizens.

At the conclusion of Senator Sherman's address loud calls were made for Governor Oglesby, who responded in a brief speech, during which he worked the vast audience up to a high pitch of enthusiasm. He was followed by Senator Culion and Hon. Clark E. Carr, both of whom were called out and made five minute speeches each.

The plaintiff alleges that they own the largest amount of stock of the railroad company owned by any one person. The cost of the new road would be about eight hundred thousand dollars.

A Pieuro-Pneumonia Circular. WASHINGTON, June 1 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE. |- The commissioner of agriculture to-day issued the following circular.

To the managers of all railroads and trans To the managers of all railroads and transportation companies in the United States:—Your attention is called to the fact that contagious pleuro-pneumonia exists among cattle in the states of Illinois, Maryland and New York and that the infected districts in said states have been duly operating by the depart. have been duly quarantined by the department of agriculture in the manner provided by the act of March 29, 1884, establishing the bureau of animal industry. The existence of this contageous disease in such important cattle centers as these states is a danger so menacing to the cattle interests of the cattle centers as these states is a danger so menacing to the cattle interests of the United States that it calls for the most prompt, thorough and energetic measures that can be taken, not only by the national government, but also by all parties interested in the great cattle industry of the country. No persons or class of persons are more interested in the safety and growth of this industry than the transportation companies, who derive a very large proportion of their revenue from the shipment of cattle and their products, and none should be more active and energetic in enforcing such measures as are necessary to should be more active and energetic in en-forcing such measures as are necessary to stamp out this disease and prevent its possi-ble spread. The insiduous character of this disease, its easy and imperceptible propogation by contact with animals having the germs of disease and giving no outward symptoms of its presence, the contraction of the plague from infected cars, the spreading of the germs by means of manure carried unclean cars from place to place, all make a matter of grave concern and render it necessary that stringent measures should be adopted to protect the cattle interests of the country from this greatevil. I have therefore to suggest and request that all transporta-tion companies shall establish on their re-spective lines a rule, and see that it is rigidly enforced, that all cars that have carried live enforced, that all cars that have carried live stock shall be thoroughly cleansed on the discharge of their freight, and not allowed to leave the freight or stock yards before this is done; also that the said cars shall be carefully disinfected in the following manner:

1. Remove all litter and manure. 2. Wash the car with water thoroughly and until clean. 3. Saturate the walls and floors with a solution made by dissolving four ounces of chloride of lime to each gallon of water. Stock yards and pens should be cleansed and disinfected at least once a week. Transportation companies having connection with infected districts should require parties offering cattle for shipment to present at the point of loading affidavits of the owner and two disinterested pesons, stating that the cattle to interested pesons, stating that the cattle to be shipped have been known to afflant for at least six months next preceding, and that said cattle have not been in any of said districts and have not come in contact with any cattle from said districts. Said affidavits should be attached to and accompanying the should be attached to and accompanying the way bill to point of destination. As several very extensive outbreaks of pleuro-pneumonia have recently been traced to cattle that had been shipped from infected districts a considerable distance by rail, the necessity of these precautions cannot be overestimated, and if enforced they would be a material safeguard against the spread of this disease. Kaliroad companies can be of the greatest assistance to the bureau of animal industry in its work of extirpating pleuro-pneumonia, if they will co-operate with it and assist in maintaining the rules and regulations prescribed by me on April 15, 1887, and the quarantine orders since made. I hope this support and assistance will be cordially given. Very respectfully, NORMAN J. COLMAN, Commissioner of Agriculture.

RELIGIOUS GATHERINGS.

The Organ Again Victorious in the United Presbyterian Church. PHILADELPHIA, June 1,-Another long debate occupied the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church to-day. The direct case at issue was the use of an organ by Rev. J. T. Tates' church at Keokuk. Ia., to which objection had been made first to the local presbytery and then to the synod of lowa. In each case the body declined to interfere. An appeal was inally taken to the assembly and the committee to whom the matter was referred reported "that the prohibitor vlaw forbidding the use of instrumatter was referred reported "that the prohibitor y law forbidding the use of instrumental music in the worship of God had been

A lively debate ensued, during which Rev. James Brown said the appeal should stand. "I couldn't go into the Keokuk church," said he, "because they nave an organ there. The congregation promise to cover the organ if I would come and preach for them, but I could not do so." Arguments were made in favor of the organ again, when Dr. McHenry, of San Francisco, arose and insisted that the prohibitory law had not been repealed. More debate ensued, when another effort was made by Rev. J. H. Brown to settle the controversy with the following proposition: Whereas, There is now no law forbidding the use of instrumental music in churches of God, and therefore there has been no violation of law in the case pending, therefore, Resolved, That the appeal be not sustained. riage license was issued to W. H. Waltz and

Bessie Wearmouth by County Clerk Wilkinson. The young people reside near Mitchellville and thus far have had a hard row to hoe. William tormerly worked for Bessie's father, a wealthy farmer. During the summer Bessie and he became enamored of each other, and, despite the fact that William was only getting $20 per month, decided to get married. By some means pater familia discovered their secret and a terrible scene followed, the outcome of which was William's discharge and Bessie bathed in tears. But the young folks were undaunted by any such trifle as papa's snger and opposition and set about to accomplish their cherished object. William was under age and could not procure a license, it is stated, he took the family bible and changed the record skilfully to make it appear that he was of age. He then entered into an argument with his mother concerning the date of his birth and finally brought up the bible as his authority, getting the good old lady so confused that she was unable to fix the date herself. He then made an appointment with Bessle and the two left town, going to the county clerk's office, taking the bible with them to prove William's age. But the clerk was unwilling to take it as evidence, and as William was unwilling to perfure himself, the license was refused and the much abused pair sadly departed. He left Bessle at the house of a friend near Altoona and returned to Mitchelville. In some manner Bessle's parents heard of her whereabouts and made arrangements to bring her home. Knowing that the would-be husband had no money the father was not careful about telling of his destination and it got to William's ears, Papa boarded the train for Altoona, while the sly William ensconsed himself in a box car. When the train arrived William jumped out and made for the house where Bessle was and got her away before her father arrived. When the old gentleman got there he was told that Bessle had just left with William for parts unknown. Sadly her father returned and William soon came back, but without Bessle. HILL AND HIS VETOES. David's Offensive, Alliance With the

Rum Power. NEW YORK, June t .- | Special Telegram to the BEE. ]-The Tribune says: Governor Hill's veto of the Vedder bill was the subject of a good deal of criticism vesterday from both democrats and republicans. Ex-Chief Justice Noah Davis, ex-Judge Hawes, Assemblyman Crosby, Secretary Griffin, of the anti-saloon republican organization, and many others, denounced the veto in unmeasured terms. "The governor's apparent object." said Judge Davis, "was to cut off any further discussion of the measure. The governor's insolent tone towards the legislature and his flippant treatment of this important matter are upworthy of a person filling such high flippant treatment of this important matter are unworthy of a person filling such high office." Crosby thought the governor had practically ended his political career, as no man or party could achieve political success in this country by an open alliance with the rum power. A well known democrat who once held high office and who is known as a temperance man, said: "I am sorry the governor vetoed this bill. His selection of this measure, one of the last to reach him, for a veto, while he had thirty days to act on it, and while he retains [337 other bills, looks for a veto, while he had thirty days to act on it, and while he retains '337 other bills, looks like undue haste to serve the cause of the saloons. The course of the democrats in Albany and of the governor on this subject must greatly weaken the party. Hill will find that he has made a terrible mistake in leading the democrats into this hole."

CHICAGO, June 1 .- [Special Telegram to the BEE. |-Congressman Dorsey of Nebraska, who is in the city on business, said last evening that as yet the people of his state had not begun to figure on the presidential candidates for 1888. They were attending strictly to business, and the proof that this was necessary in order not to fall benind was to be found in the fact that the bank clearances in Omaha had increased last week 96 per cent over the corresponding week last year. Nebraska had always been a Blaine state and would like to cast her electoral vote for him again, but the people did not presume to dictate who should be nominated. A man who could carry New York was the man Nebraska people wanted to see at the head of the republican ticket, and that man would get the full electoral vote of the state. In reply to a question as to what exthat this was necessary in order not to fall state. In reply to a question as to what ex-Senator Van Wyck was going to do, Dorsey said he was a man who would not be lost. He would pop up somewhere. He had the largest political following of any map in the sargest positical following of any map in the state, and he was all right. Nebraska has never returned a man to the senate for a sec-ond term, and although Senator Manderson has been most serviceable to the state, this unwritten rule may defeat him for re-elec-
