ONLY A MATTER OF RUMOR.

Reported Sale By the B. & M. of Its Lincoln-Milford Line.

PROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.] Rather an absurd railroad story has been put in circulation late this afternoon. It is well known that there has been considerable strife between the Burlington and the Missouri Pacine for territory. The direction of this strife seems to have been toward Milford. The Missouri Pacific steered across the country from Talmage toward Crete, with the announcement that the line would be extended to Milford and further north and west. This stirred up the Burlington and immediately that company put on surveyors to locate a line from Crete to Milford and farther west.

Now, so runs the rumor, the Burling-ton has sold to the Missouri Pacific the Atchison & Nebraska line between Lin-coln and Milford, which if true would of course call a halt on the construction of other lines. This story sounds very absurd, for a line so short would be of little use to the Missouri Pacific and the Burlington has certainly no disposition to give up any of its lines now in operation.

THE B. & M. STRIKE.

The strikers on the B. & M. are quiet though they do not give up. They insist upon the train men coming to their rescue, and though little is said it seems the company's business is somewhat interfered with, as the new men employed are green at the business.

The Utica Driving Park association has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The object of this company is to own and maintain suitable grounds and buildings for the training and exhibition of horses. The capital and exhibition of norses. The capital stock is $1,000. No indebtedness can be incurred exceeding one-half the capital stock. The incorporators are S. H. Nelson, B. C. Regan and R. S. Neir.

The Nebraska Loan and Trust company filed amended articles. The principal place of business is at Hastings, Neb. Capital stock $500,000, to be increased to $1,000,000 on a vote of the stockholders. The indebtedness of the association is limited to $250,000 and the private property of the stockholders is in no event to be liable for the debts of the corporation. The articles are of the corporation. The articles are signed by James B. Heartwell, as president of the association.

Articles of incorporation were also filed by the Women's Christian association of Omaha. The object of the association is declared to be the temporal, moral and religious welfare of women and children and the furnishing of pretection to those in need until permanent homes can be secured for them. The articles are signed by Mrs. Perine, Mrs. McLain, Mrs. Jardine, Mrs. Knight and a dozen others.

The state veterinarian has received a letter from Blair stating that there is some disease among cattle there which has the appearance of black leg. Four animals have died and one more is sick. They live from ten to twenty-six hours after being taken. The dead cattle can be found for examination at Mills' station. There is also a letter from Cerisco stating that some fatal disease of long duration exists among the horses there.

Dr. Gerth has gone to Tekamah In

Now if yo' git started fai' and get well ahead, jist streak it like h—, my boy, but if yo' don't an' yo' git behind, stay thar. The little jockey smiled his acquiescence, and rode out to the track to join the cavalcade of racers that were prancing impatiently waiting for the signal to start.

The field during a race day is the meeting place of about as many queer characters as could be found anywhere. Here gather millionaire owners, stable men, jockies, horse fanciers, touts, trainers, and scores of others. While the prepar-ation of horses is being carried forward their chances of winning are discussed, and many a race is practically run before it is begun. The trainers and stable men give their particular friends quiet tips on the quality of their particular racers' dilating upon their good points and concealing their weak ones. Owners stand around and silently look over their animals as if calculating their chances to win, and occasionally ask a question of the trainer, which is always answered in a low tone. The following is a sample of what can be heard any fine s a sample of what can be heard any fine

"Little afraid of that right leg of his'n.

Another owner goes up to his trainer and almost whispers: "How's the bay for this dash?" "Faster'n a cyclone. Whoa! you brute," and the trainer dodges nimbly aside to escape a well-aimed kick from "the bay." "Think he's all right then, eh?" is the next question "Say, he'd run over the grand stand if you'd give him a chance," and the owner retires to interview the bookmakers. The old "hossman" is always around. He is an attache of the racing stable who is indispensible to its success, and he is always in the field just before the race is run to add his opinion to the others about the merits of a particular horse.

A Colorado View of Values.

Range Journal, Denver: There are reasons why the prices of cattle must advance, possibly not this year, but in the no very remote future. Statistics show that never in the history of the cattle business were so many cows mark-eted as last year. It is one of the unaccountable things in the cattle business that the producers all pursue the same line of policy at the same time. The idea that a reduction of the number would increase the price, took possession of the cattlemen all at once, and they began a wholesale disposal of their she stock. For the purpose of further reducing the for the purpose of further reducing the increase, spaying was resorted to and thousands upon thousands of heifers were rendered barren by this means. The result is inevitable; a large falling off in the beef supply from the range country will soon be observed, and the price will necessarily advance. Then all the cowmen will see where some of them at least missed it, and before will be heifers. and heifers will be heifers. In truth there has never been an over-production. The consumers have all the time been gaining on the animal production, but prices were low and the ranchmen adopted a plan of relief which may be of temporary benefit, but which will in the end prove to be an unprofitable experiment. On some ranges, greatly over-stocked, something had to be done to reduce the herds, and we have advised in such cases that everything be sold that was marketable, and that the spaying knife be resorted to for the purpose of limiting the stock to the capacith of the range, but this practice has not stopped here, but has been employed where necessity did not require it. While it may result in an advance in prices we believe that many ranchmen will find in the end that it was an expensive experiment, which had better not been ried. Values were adversaged by been tried. Values were depressed by artificial means, and the stockmen should have stood together in a determination to have justice, regardless of cost, and while it might involved an outlay of money direct which they were very un-willing to incur, they will in time dis-cover that they made a very great sacri-fice in depleting their herds of female stock. We predict that the tide will turn within twelve months, and that all the cowmen will be looking for heifers. Everybody understands the force of the saying. "buy whenever everybody wants to sell, and sell whenever everybody wants to buy." We suggest that when-ever everybody wants to relieve their Bodies Found in a Cave of the Sierra Madre Mountains.

A MOST INTERESTING DISCOVERY

The Remarkable Appearance of the Remains-The Menner in Which the Discovery Was Made.

San Francisco Bulletin: Some few weeks ago there was brought to this city a collection of mummies, which constitute one of the most remarkable scientific discoveries made on the American continent. These munmies differ from those discovered in Egypt in a remarkable degree, being entirely nude, without wrappings, and apparently not having been subjected to any empalming process, Exposure to the air has no effect upon them, the flesh having been dried in an hermetically sealed cavern until it is like parchment, and the weight of the bodies s merely nominal.

Mr. Docking, in whose possession these specimens are at the present time, tells u romantic story regarding their discov-ery. In one of the spurs of the Sierra Madre mountains, not far from the banks of the Gila river, and almost on the boundary line between Arizona and New Mexico, a party of American miners were searching for treasure which tradition says is buried in these hills. A cavern was one day discovered, hermetically sealed with a cement which defied the picks of the party, and only after chip-ping it off flake by flake was an entrance gained to the cave. Lighted only by the flame of a blazing pine branch the party traversed a passage about thirty feet in length, which ended in a room cut in the solid rock.

Here, instead of untold gold and other treasures of the Aztees, they were startled to find a number of human bodies, looking more ghastly than usual in the flickering light of the torches. After recover-ing from their surprise, preparations were made to remove the remains, but the superstitous natives of the vicinity, believing that the bodies were those of their gods, objected to the proceeding, and it was only with much diplomacy and occasional skirmishes that they were finally conveyed to a flag station on the Southern Pacific road and transported to this city, where they were placed in the charge of Mr. Docking, who still keeps them in his residence, where they have been viewed by a number of scientists and physicians as well as by various consuls of foreign powers in this city.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MUMMIES.

The most remarkable of the mummies are those of a mother and child, which when found were enveloped in one shroud, portions of which are still to be seen covering the lower limbs of the Still another mummy is that of a woman, her long hair being in a state of perfect preservation. The feet are small and high arched, while the fingers are long and tapering. Remnants of her shroud still remaining are of a dark blue color, differing both in this respect and texture from the material of which the shrouds were composed.

Another remarkable specimen, however, is that of a man in a sitting pos-ture, the body being considerably larger than any of the others. During life his girth of chest must have been much above the average, the whole of the upper portion of the body having seemingly been molded in gigantic proportions. The cartileges of the ears and nose are still plainly to be seen, while the head is covered with a dense growth of black bair. The eyebrows are well defined, while between the glistening teeth protudes the tongue, now dried to an almost cork-like consistency.

The remaining mummy is that of a man, said by scientists to have been comparatively young at the time of his death. Many speculations have been made by those who have seen the collec tion as to his relation to the female bodies reclining on either side of him. And dif-ferent theories of brother and husband have been advocated.

That the remains are those of the ancient Aztecs, members of that civiliza-tion which was destroyed in Mexico by the soldiers of Cortez, there can be no doubt. The woman and the smaller man present the peculiar physical conditions attributed to this once numerous people. The high cheek bones and slanting eyes are there, the thick skin and black hair are plainly visible to the eye, and the height of the bodies, although they were found more or less doubled upon them-selves, is estimated at about five feet three inches. When this is taken into consideration, with the fact that the Aztecs spread southward from about the thirtieth parallel until they inhabited the high plateaus of Mevico and Central America, there can be little doubt as to the race of which these mummies were once living members.

The specimens will be shipped east in few days, and, in all probability, will find a resting place in one of the princi-pal museums of Europe. Although Mr. Docking has kindly shown them to all scientists and historians who have called upon him, they will not be placed on public exhibition in this city.

That Decision.

In the decision of Judge Dealy of the United States court of Portland, Ore., in the matter of the inter-state commerce law, the words "similar and dissimilar circumstances" are accepted by traffic managers hereabouts as meaning that competition may be met by reducing rates between common points without affecting rates to or from non-competing, and they propose to govern themselves accordingly, or, to put it just as it is, hereafter unprotected local shippers will have to make good any losses that may accrue to the road through competition between points that happen to have more than one route to the outer world. This is just as it was before the commerce law became operative, and Judge Dealy's interpretation of the long and short haul clause conforms exactly to a well defined principle of railroading, to-wit: Make the helpless local shipper pay the ex-pense of all rate wars, all competition and all of everything else that can be crowded upon him.
