Seven Miles of Sewer Being Laid This

PREPARING FOR

Rolling Apples Cause a Runaway-A Gambler's Big Winnings-A Destitute Woman-Pinancial Embarrassment.

Public Improvements.

The city improvements consist largely this season in building sewers. There are several miles of sewer contracted for, a portion of which is already in course of construction. Work is proceeding on Fifth avenue, also in Glendale, and on Mynster street. The pipe is being laid on the ground for the Willow avenue sewer, and work of construction will soon commence there. The pipe has been ordered for Harrison and Bluff streets. The work on Ninth avenue will begin very soon at the west end, in order to accommodate the canning factory, as speedily as possible.

The paving contracts are being held off to reserve energies for the paying of Broadway to the river. The city will have to pay for the intersections, while the rest will be charged up to the abutting property. The city is reserving its financial resources so as to crowd this work along as soon as it is needed. There will be some other paving done this sea-son, but no long lines until this is out of the way.

A Queer Accident. Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Joe Morris met with an accident while out driving yesterday. They were visiting Mrs. Morris' father, in the country, and in starting for the city put some apples in the buggy. The apples began rolling about, frighten-ing the horse by the noise. He made a short run, and smashed the buggy. Both ladies were somewnat bruised, but their injuries are not serious.

A Slick Theft. Mr. J. J. Morgan, a stock dealer of Battle Creek, was robbed of his pocketbook on a Northwestern train, near Denver, a few days ago. His total loss was about $1,500, fully $300 of which was cash. In presenting his mileage ticket, Morgan laid his pocketbook beside him on the seat, whereupon a stranger sitting in the next seat, carelessly threw his coat over the book, and the absentminded stock dealer forgot all about it until near Council Bluffs, when he bethough t himself of his carelessness only to find the coat in his possession and the pocketbook and the stranger gone. The card of a prominent citizen of Dow City was found in the coat, and Goldheim's brand on the collar. Conductor Paine at once notified Sheriff Mooney to look up the remainder of the suit. He found it. The owner of the card appeared in Denison wearing pants and vest that matched the coat. Upon inquiry, however, it was learned that his coat had been stolen thet day of the crime, and that the adroi thief had systematically tried to deflect suspicion upon one of the most respectable gentlemen in Dow City.

A Penniless Woman

A destitute woman, giving her name as Mrs. Snell, has been cared for by the police for a day or two. She claims to be from Denver, and is trying to get to Ottumwa, Ia., where she has friends. She says her husband mortgaged everything, even to their clothing, and then skipped out, leaving her penniless. She is accompanied by a little boy, and is in a condition to indicate that within a few days she will be accompanied by another child. An attempt was made to get Mr. Hardin, as superintendent of the poor, to buy her a ticket to send her on her way, but he could not see that the county money should be expended for that pur-pose. The city marshal took up a collection yesterday for this purpose. What-ever may be thought concerning the truth of the woman's story, it is evident that she is in a condition which demands care

A Financial Pinch. The news of the financial troubles of L. W. Russell, of Glenwood, is surprising to many. He is one of the best known business mer of that place, and has been considered solvent and with a good-sized surplus. It is announced that he has now been securing most of his creditors, having turned over about $70,000 in property, which reaches within a few thousand dollars of the total amount of his indebtedness. Mr. Russell is said to have lost heavily on the board of trade in Chicago, and that these losses have resulted in his recent action. He was in this city yesterday arranging his affairs, and several Council Bluffs houses are financially interested.

The Military Prizes.

There is a mystery attending the prizes awarded to the military companies which entered the competitive drill at the driving park on the Fourth of July. Two companies from out of the city and one local company drilled, and it was generally advertised and understood that the first prize was $100, the second $50 and the third $25. The ten men who had charge of the driving park deny that they ever offered any such prizes. They say they are willing to pay the money if it can be shown that any one of the ten authorized the giving of prizes. The committee having in charge the celebration also deny having authorized any such offer. In fact, there is a general hunt for the man who promised the military companies any prizes. It seems that the driving park association supposed that the committee on celebration had made seems that the driving park asso-ciation supposed that the com-mittee on celebration had made arrangements for this competitive drill, and the committee took it for granted that the driving park association was offering the prizes. The militia who took part do not seem able to shoulder the responsibility out of one purson, but took it for granted that so long as it was so publicly advertised, it must be all right. They entered the drill and proved a very attractive feature of the day's en-tertainment, but there seems no money tertainment, but there seems no money in sight.

Heating the house is a science. Cole & Cole, 41 Main street, have made it a study for years. Figure with them in your fur-nace work.

The Band Concert.

Last evening there was not so large an attendance at the opera house as was supposed would be. The selections were varied, and a high class of music was well rendered. For so new an organization the band is almost phenomenal in its renditions of difficult music. There were sixteen pieces last evening. They appeared in their new uniforms and presented a fine appearance. Prof. Daibey served as director. His modesty should not have prevented one or more of his own compositions having been on the programme. Some having been on the programme. Some of the best band music now played in the land is by him, and it would have made the entertainment still more local in its nature. The Dodge Light Guards gave an exhibition drill during the evening.

THREE COLORED SPORTING MEN.

Ex-Gov. Pinchback, John C. Alexander, and Col. Robert Harlan. Chicago Tribune: At the Palmer house one evening this week two gentlemen were playing billiards.

The spectators were numerous, not from any excellence of play, however, and this fact appealed to the curiosity of a man, who asked a bystander: "Why is there such an interest taken in that billiard game?"

there such an interest taken in that billiard game?"
"Don't you know who that is playing?"
was the reply. "Why, that man with the long-tailed coat, full beard, and bronzed complexion is no other than he who, at one time, just at the close of the war, by holding the office of governor of Louisiana, became one of the most widely talked about of Americans. You know that time when William? Itt Kellogg was such a power down there."

that time when William litt Kellogg was such a power down there."

The inquirer did remember, and so proceeded to watch the playing of ex-Governor Pinchback. He saw before him a most gentiemanly like man, possibly fifty years old, whose hair and whiskers had slightly turned, but with an erect form and commanding presence. The face denoted affability, an active temperament, and a smooth, oily disposition. His informer continued. "The ex-governor is in Chicago in attendance at the races. Last year he was 'on the box,' as the bookmakers say, This means that he was proprietor and manager of a bookmaking concern. Always a power with the proprietor and manager of a bookmaking concern. Always a power with the colored people, it was thought that through the darkeys, so noticeably connected with everything in the racing line Mr. Pinchback was supplied with the very best of information. His record, however, has always been that of a man who put his money up 'on the square,' and only strove to get it on the best animal."

Another colored man who is always to Another colored man who is always to be seen at Washington park is J. C. Alexander of Columbus, O. He is now the owner of a small stable, the best horse of which is Malaria. Alexander was watchwhich is Malaria. Alexander was watching Pinchback's game of billiards, and the man who was furnishing the information said: "Alexander is a remarkable man. The keeper of the gaming house in the town where he lives, there has never been a time when he did not stand better with his fellow townsmen than any man dealing faro. The patronage of his establishment is largely that of the moneyed class. Like all other sporting men, he has had his ups and downs, but for the last few years he has been, as they say, 'on top.' The spring before Garfield's nomination Alexander went up to the town of London, thirty went up to the town of London, thirty miles from Columbus, and there won some hundreds of dollars against faro, his original stake being but a $2 note. Thence he attended the small running and trotting meetings in that section, and, pressing his luck, went to the Louisville races with several thousand dollars. By fall he had accumulated something like $30,000. A strong republican, he could see nothing in the Garlield-Hancock race, but 'Garfield first,' and, plunging of the could see the could be seen to the could see the could be seen to the could b ing on the event, the general's success made of him quite a rich man. Since then he has been more conservative in his ventures, and all who knew him hope to see him always prosper. No matter what the nature of the transac-tion—cards, horses, business—there never was a fairer man to deal with than John Alexander, "But whereas with Governor Pinchback he divides the honors at a race meeting, there is now a colored man in Chicago upon whom all people of his race look with respect, and who in poli-tical affairs, state and national, wields a tical affairs, state and national, wields a power not inferior perhaps to that ascribed to Fred Douglass. This is Colonel Robert Harlan of Cincunnati. Always a lover of the horse, Bob's face has been seen for years upon the various race courses. Ever with money at his command, he has been the joy of the poolseller and the bookmaker. Readiness to wager the established odds is his characteristic, and when the horses are running he from his commanding heighth being he, from his commanding heighth being able to note their exact positions, always has a proposition to make. has a proposition to make. 'Two to one Volante wins,' changing rapidly to 'five to one.' There is a record to the effect that he once lost a bet of one hundred to one by his horse falling midway of the stretch. But while to Pinchback and Alexander racing is a scheme to further financial interest, with Harlan it is pastime sought rather than gain. There are few men rather than gain. There are few men with such lion like features, raw bones and visible energy. The high cheek bones are rather of the Indian than the bones are rather of the Indian than the African race, and just such a chin it would be hard to find outside of a kennel of flghting dogs. Strength of character of the highest order is marked in every furrow of the face. An old man now, and wearing spectacles, still every movement partakes of the extremest vigor. Bob is a cyclore in Cincinnati politics, and even now holds the office of state senator—a good republican of course. He was one of the most enthusiastic partisans of Garfield, and upon Inauguration day in Washington, where during the review before the white house he the review before the white house he stood for hours near the president's stand, he was the most delighted of spectators.

Tom Waller's First Romance. Philadelphia Times: Many stories are told of the picturesque ex-Governor Wal-ler, of Connecticut, but none more interesting than that which describes his first romance. He was then an impecunious law clerk, but he fell in love with the mayor's daughter notwithstanding. So far as the lady was concerned his suit was successful, too, but Mayor Loomis was an august personage, and he not only objected to the union, but prevented it. This set back put the spur to Waller's pride and his energy, and he forthwith determined to be a bigger man than the mayor of New London. He devoted himself to business, kept a weather eye on politics, and was soon elected, mayor politics, and was soon elected mayor. Mayor Loomis was meanwhile credited with a yearning for the governorship, but he had to stand aside and see it go to his would-be-son-in-law. And by and by Mr. Waller was mentioned for the by Mr. Waller was mentioned for the vice presidency, made a national reputation and was assigned to an important place in the diplomatic service, and then Mr. Loomis began to feel regret for his mistake. The sequel ought to be, of course, that Mr. Waller finally won the father's consent and married the daughter, but, as a matter of fact, each found a mate years ago, and now Mr. Waller's house is next door to that occupied by the daughter of the mayor and her husband, and the two families are on the best of terms. best of terms.
