H. R. Stewart, the crayon artist, returned yesterday from Kansas City, for a short stay here with his old friends and patrons. Two of his late pictures are now displayed at W. W. Chapman's art store.

One is a portrait of John Kintz, who died a year or more ago. His friends pronounce the picture strikingly life like. The other is a portrait of Gladstone. This is one of the finest bits of art ever displayed here. The rugged face of the grand old man stands forth as if in life. The work is very fine and bears the closest inspection. Mr. Stewart took a great deal of pains to secure from the old country the best photographs of Gladstone and has enlarged them, and the picture is probably the finest portrait of Gladstone in this country. displayed at W. The Plans For the Chautauqua Assembly in Council Bluffs-A Suspicious Pair Arrested For Robbing a Ticket Office.

The Drum Major at Home. "Major" Carbee arrived home yester day morning over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. He was in company with Chief Mullen. There was quite a crowd at the depot to meet him, as his sudden departure and his sensational coming back interested many of the mi-coming back interested many of the militia and the musicians. When he got out of the car he was still clinging to the two batons, which he carried away with him, and which aided so materially in his identification when the telegraphic orders were sent out for his arrest. The patrol wagon was in waiting, and he marched along in sad contrast to the buoyant manner of his strut at the head of the holiday processions. He was taken to the county jail, and there given quarters until he can have a hearing. When arrested there was found on his person only $17. He had a ticket for Lafayette, Ind., and his baggage was

He had a ticket for Lafayette, Ind., and his baggage was checked to that place. On the return with the chief of police he talked far less than is his wont, but when he saw the crowd of old acquaintances and anxious creditors at the depot, his temper gave way. He ranted and cursed on being interviewed at the jail, and expressed hot indignation at the numerous charges made against him. His statement, boiled downed, was to the effect that he did not skip at all, but was simply going on a visit to his mother, intending to return in a few days. He took with him the dashy drum major's uniform to show the old lady. He never intended to wrong anybody out of a cent. He was coming back soon and intended to return he money which he had belonging to the band, the amount, as he claimed, being only $22. What about the checks he had issued paying for board and for clothes? He had drawn the checks on the bank because he expected $200 from his mother, and thought it would be here in time to meet the checks.

Metcalf Bros., who had sold him a suit of clothing, and who had taken one of the worthless checks in payment, tached his trunk and it took about half of the cash found on him to pay the costs. He had a gold watch which he had pur-chased of Jacquemin & Co., and on which there had not been a great deal paid. This was taken by this firm. This paid. This was taken by this firm. This closed out the available assets. Max Mohn, of the Creston house, where he boarded, got an old white hat which Carbee left behind. "That hat cost me $14," and Max put it on with a satisfied air at getting off so easily. Inquiry about the the city shows that Carbee has been running bills all over the city. It is said that he made false representations, to some declaring that he was getting a large commission for selling lumber, to others that he was owner of the yards.

For some time he has been very anxious to get a position in some church choir.

For some time he has been very anxious to get a position in some church choir. Money was no object. He would sing for the good of the cause. Last Sunday he did succeed in getting an invitation to sing with one of the choirs. At the close of the service he volunteered his services to drill the choir, and arranged to be with them at their rehearsal last evening. He was not there. He was studying different bars. He also talked to the pastor about his wonderful travels through the holy his wonderful travels through the holy land. He had visited Gethsemene, and had been all over the sacred soil. He volunteered to give the Sunday school an address on this subject whenever the

While at Melbourne, in charge of the while at Melbourne, in charge of the chief of police, and waiting for a train to bring him to this city, the drum major improved the time by drilling the band there. It was by his own desire, and the chief consented to letting him do so. Chief Mullen kept close on his heels as he went through the various evolutions, and gave him no chance to skip. He soon tired the chief, and was invited to walk over to the depot and there waited. walk over to the depot and there waited.

It is learned that the flashy drum major was parading under an alias. His real name appears to be Howard Hawk, and his home is said to have been in the eastern part of the state, although he has been away for some time, at Denver, Fremont and other places. His record as Hawk is said to have been rather as Hawk is said to have been rather

Death of John Tierney. The funeral of John Tierney who died Friday evening at St. Joseph hospital, Omaha, will take place from the Omaha, will take place from the Catholic church here to-day at 2:30.

Mr. Tierney was the victim of a railroad accident which proved fatal on the 29th inst and it is the pleasure of one, who knows, to state that before his death he had the full use of his reason and expressed belief in all the sentiments of the Catholic church. The statement made by some of the papers that excessive drink was the cause of death is an injustice to his memory, there being no truth to it.

The Chautauqua Move. There many inquiries as to what is the plan of the proposed Chautauqua assembly, being organized here. The movers in the enterprise, who are securing subscriptions to the stock, are met with the query so frequently that it seems there is little known about such assemblies. It is difficult to explain all the details of the plans. In general the purpose is to hold here every an assembly which will be a pattern after the large and successful one held at Lake Chautauqua. The movement is to secure at once 100 acres of land, and to build amphitheaters, dining halls, etc. The grounds are to be beautified, and all needed accommodations afforded so that during the summer season those desiring rest and recreation can enjoy themselves by camping there, or by using summer houses. Besides this opportunity for physical rest, there will be a school held, classes organized, in music, art, literature, etc. There will be entertainments also lectures from mea of national reputation, concerts and scientific exhi-

A Suspected Pair.

Yesterday morning the police arrested two young men who gave their names as Elmer Wright and William Abbott. They answered the description of two who were wanted at Des Moines, on suspicion of having robbed the Des Moines office of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy passenger depot, the amount taken being $350. The young men were held until the arrival of an officer from that city. Their cases were investigated, but no proof could be obtained sufficient to hold them. They admitted having but no proof could be obtained sufficient to hold them. They admitted having been in Des Moines, and they had walked out to a station this side of there, where they took the train for this city. They had each a few dollars in money, and had express receipts for their baggage, which they had shipped through from Colfax, one of the pair being en route for Red Cloud, Neb., the other going to Kansas. They had no such sum of money as had been taken, and denied knowing about the robbery. As the money was sneaked out of the office while the ticket agent was out for a few minutes, there was little to fasten any such charge upon them. They were accordingly allowed to go free.

PROHETIC DREAMS.

A Minister who Heard of Garfield's Nomination in His Sleep.

San Francisco Chronicle: At a gathering of clergymen in this city during the past week the subject of dreams came under discussion, and opinions were found to differ greatly on the question whether the deity sometimes fortells to his servants coming events in their slum-bers. All were agreed upon the testi-mony of the scriptures that this was often done in ancient times, but some of them were of the opinion that such revelations, through the medium of dreams, belonged to a past dispensation, and were unknown at the present day. On the other hand, some of the ministers maintained stoutly that God was "the same yesterday, to-day and forever," and that the heavens were as open to mortals by night as well as day, as everything wore. To sustain this day, as everything were, To sustain this view several remarkable instances were related by one and another of the clergymen, going to show that coming events are sometimes revealed in dreams at this day. The most striking of these was related by Rev. Mr. Bodkins, editor of the Southern California Advocate, a Methodist paper published at Los Angeles. ist paper published at Los Angeles. He stated that he was by no means disposed to credulity or superstition, but as a matter of fact he had on several occasions been instructed of far distant and coming events in dreams of the night. The death of his mother had thus been distinctly revealed to him, and the nomination of General Garfield for president by the republican convention at Chicago in 1880. He said that he was at the 1880. He said that he was, at the time, in a little country town in Iowa, nine miles from the count seat. There was no telegraph communication and the mails were slow and incation and the mails were slow and infrequent. He was greatly interested in the issue, anxious for Blaine's nomination and impatient to hear the result. He had not heard or thought of Garfield as a candidate and barely knew of him and his record. One night ne dreamed and a distinct voice aanounced to him that James A. Garfield was nominated unanimously. He could hardly believe it; but the news was confirmed the next day.
Although his dream was so distinct, and notwithstanding his past experiences in this line, he was so doubtful that he would not tell his dream until the truth was confirmed. It could not be accounted for, he said, by his previous thoughts on the matter or what he had heard said, for no one about him talked heard said, for no one about him talked of Garfield or imagined that he, as "the dark horse," might win the race.

A Fight Under Water.

A diver named Quintree, says the London Daily Telegraph, had a remarkable fight with a formidable fish called the boultous or bondro, a kind of shark which infests the Breton coast, at Douarnenez, the other day. According to all accounts Quintree had a narrow escape, and his own report of his terrible submarine encounter reads like a stanza form Schiller's counter reads like a stanza form Schiller's famous poem, or a page from one of Jules Verne's romances.

The diver, an old salt, was employed by the government, and in pursuit of his daily labor duly descended in a diving apparatus off the Douarnenez pier for the purpose of laying the foundation of an addition to that structure. While he was at the bottom of the sea the men who were working the air pump in the pontoon boat above were suddenly frightened by feeling the alarm signal. They instantly pulled up and brought a large boultons, nearly eight feet long, to the surface. The marine monster's head formed three-quarters of his length and his under jaws were of immense size. Shortly afterward Quintree came up, his hand on the air pipe of his helmet and his diving apparatus somewhat damaged.
