The large crayon portrait of Gladstone, by the artist, H. R. Stewart, is still on exhibition at Chapman's art rooms. Gorham, the photographer, has been taking some cabinet of it and the face of the grand old man is finding a ready sale.

The coroner's jury consists of three of the most responsible citizens and they have been carrying on the investigation in the most careful manner. They determined from the start to leave nothing undone to satisfy the public demand for a thorough sitting of the facts.

The salivationist, Rolander, arrested some time ago, had a hearing before Judge Aylesworth yesterday. The court room was brilliantly lighted by red shirts, and the liveliest interest was felt by the Salvation Army, for each member of the barracks contributed to pay the attorneys for defending their brother and send him "happy on the way."

New Goods are arriving and invite inspection

There was no jury drawn for the last term of the State court, because the appropriation for that purpose had been exhausted. Deputy Clerk Hunter received word yesterday that the necessary money was on hand for a jury at the coming term of court, which convenes September 27.

The alley alongside of the city building was paved recently, but it has sunk so that it has become necessary to take up the cedar blocks, fill in dirt and replace them. The manner in which the paving is going to pieces indicates that the city should have a little closer inspection of the work when it is first done.

Notwithstanding the hot weather, meetings still continue at the Oakland Avenue tabernacle with increasing interest. The much discussed "Sabbath question" is still at the front.
