The Third and Last.

Harner, the new Omaha pitcher, made the hit of his life yesterday, and should now retire on his laurels. He only gave seven mer ses on balls and hit four others. It seemed that if he couldn't send a man to base one way, he'd do it the other, and after the Omahas had won the game in the second inning, by piling up seven runs on a beautiful bunching of hits, he turned right around and gave it away by the most slovenly work in the points seen on the home grounds this season. Jantzen, the catcher, was also off, and caught and played all round like the veriest no vice at the game. In truth the local battery yesterday was an unqualified botch, and when at its best it is but of the most ordinary description. Both sides were kalsomined in the first inning, but in the second the Omahas on seven corking hits, including Walsh's home rup and Messitt's two-bagger, and a bouquet of errors by Johnson, scored seven runs, and the handful of people present howled with delight.

In the second and third the Topekas scored a single tally each, but in the fifth they took the cake, the crackers and the bakery, rolling up no less than six runs and not making a single hit.

This is the way the old thing worked, and it is a fair sample of the whole game.

Stearns went to first on five bad balls, stole Stearns went to first on five bad balls, stole second without half trying, and went to third on a passed ball. Werden was hit by Harper, and ran down to the next bag on a passed ball. Johnson hit out toward Dwyer who got the ball and threw home in plenty of time to catch Stearns, but of course Jantzen muffed the ball, and Johnson took second. Macullar then goes to first on balls, and Harper thumps Goldsby in the ribs, and Werden is forced in, and still the bases are full. Sneed lines one to second, and Messitt by a lightning throw home mips Johnson at the plate, leaving all the bases still occupied. Then to liven up matters Macullar runs home on Jantzen's third passed ball, and the others move up a base. Arden hit to harper, who threw to first, but too late, and on Dwyer's throw to third to cut off Goldsby, the ball gets by Messitt, and Goldsby and Sneed both score. Gunson is sent to first on balls, forcing Ardner to take second, and the next minute he ran clear home on another passed ball, Stearns out to Bandle ended the agony.

Here Jantzen went to the field, Bandle to second, Messitt to third and Fusselbach be-hind the bat, but the change did not bring victory.

The Topekas tried hard to lose the game, but it was impossible, and just as darkness was coming on they knocked in a couple of runs and the game was ended. THE SCORE. OMARA. POS. AB. E. BH. TB. BS. PO. A. E.

WHAT KILLED GEORGIANA?

A Colored Woman's Mysterious Death in a Cell of the City Jail.

POLICE BRUTALITY SUSPECTED

How a Colored Cyprian Perished in the Lock-Up and the Startling Rumors of the Cause.

A Woman's Strange Death.

Georgie Clark, the castaway, whose death yesterday morning at the city jail compelled a non est in her case to be rendered as a plea, promises to attract more attention in death than she claimed in life. The circumstances of her death are involved in such conflicting accounts and formed such a large space in yesterday's papers, that the BEE, determining to ascertain the full facts as obtainable from opposite sources, detailed a re-porter last night to visit all the persons connected with the affair in any manner. The deceased is universally described as having been of a color between mulatto and black, of a vivacious disposition, possessed of an education obtained at the high school in this city, and being a skillful pianist and and a good singer. She was born and raised in Omaha, where her mother and sister now reside, and took to the town after the death of her husband, who committed suicide on account of jealousy at her light conduct. She was in a measure rectaimed by a man named John W. Fielding, with whom she lived as his mistress, adding to her support by him in playing on the piano at various houses of ill fame in the city. Fielding, who is also known by the name of Shakespeare, was formerly a soldier and latterly in partnership in the liquor business with Hans Young, whose sudden flight from Omaha some weeks ago with the partnership assets, compelled the remaining partner to accept a bartender's place at the saloon opposite the Metropolitan hotel on Douglas street, where he was found last night by a reporter.

He is a white man and disclaimed any regrets or shame felt for the ambiguous position he sustained towards the deceased, alleging gratitude on his part for kindness received when needed, at her hands as the reason of his forgetfulness of color in bestowing his protection upon her. His story is as follows: On Monday night between 10 and 11 o'clock he saw his paramour going towards their lodging place on Farnam street and followed her, thinking by her gait that all was not right. On passing the corner nearest to her abode, she was observed by two policemen, one named Brady and the other whom he does not know, who also followed her. Se maintained her gast until reaching her home, where she fell in a swoon in the vestibule. There she was met by the proprietor of the house, a man named Ewalt, who, instead of assisting her to her room, signaled to the two policemen, Brady and the unknown. Their arrival and his own were simultaneous. He begged the officers not to arrest her, disclosing his relations to her and assuring her that he would remove her to her room and prevent any disorder. They disregarded his entreaties and remonstrances, and ordering him gruffly to 'move on,' dragged the woman along the flags in her insensible condition to the nearest patrol box, fully forty feet away. By this time she sufficiently revived to be able to talk, and entered the responsive patrol wagon without much assistance. Fielding further said he followed the patrol wagon as far as possible and arrived at the station in time to see the woman then partially recovered from her stupor, thrust into a cell with a dissolute white woman named Rose Maley, who resented the intrusion and the two began a free fight. Fielding says they fought for a long time undisturbed by the police; he alleges as his reason for not interfering and demanding of the police that they separate the combatants, his fear that he would be locked up, an event which would prevent his presence in court in would prevent his presence in court in the morning with bail to liberate his dusky friend. Continuing he says that after some time when the yells of the women became unbearabble, Officers Ormsby and Crawford entered the cell ormsby and Crawford entered the cell and parted them. In removing the deceased to another cell, Officer Crawford, who had hold of her, brutally struck her, not once but several times. After being violently thrown into the new cell she never spoke. A reference to witnesses who saw the brutality was furnished.

While Fielding was narrating his story to the reporter, Officer Crawford in uniform entered, demanding a retraction of the statement in an afternoon paper that he (C.) violently dragged the woman he (C.) violently dragged the woman from the patrol wagon to the jail. This retraction Fielding cheerfully made, denying the utterance of such a charge, but persistently refused to exonerate the officer further.

French Em's house, in which the dead woman had often in life played the piano, was next visited. Both the proprietress and the inmates bore wiless to the many good qualities of Georgie the many good qualities of Georgie Clark, and said they seldom saw her under the influence of liquor, and never helplessly so. "If poor Georgie had come here last night," said French Em, feelingly, "this would not have happened."

J. P. Dorwood, a black man, was found at Wood's notel, on Capitol avenue, be-tween Eleventh and Twelfth streets. He was a prisoner in the jail at the time of the occurrence, and corroborated fully all of Fielding's statements regarding Crawford's brutality. He says he will swear positively to the blows struck, and the identity of Crawford as the man who struck them. He further says the women were gaurded to fight, and such taunting remarks as "Hi Rose, you got to sleet with a nigger to-night," and others of like kind were used to evasperate and anger the white prostitute.

The body of the deceased is laid out awaiting interment at her mother's house on Capital avenue, near Ninth street. An inspection of it discloses a contusion over one of the eyes and wounds on the breast, side and groin, some resembling the prints of boot backs. Much bitter feeling is manifested by the residents of the vicinity at the haste of the coroner's inquest and the fact that the relatives of the dead woman were not infarmed of her death, which were not infarmed of her death, which was discovered by them accidentally while the body lay at the undertaker's ready for transit to the Potter's field. The sister of the deceased said that yesterday morning while she and her mother were on their way to work, passing the city jail, they were saluted by two of the police officers, who allowed them to pass on without informing them of Georgie's

At the jail the officers were reticent, simply contenting themselves with denying in toto the charges of brutality. About midnight Mr. Maul, of the firm of Drexol & Maul, repaired to the house of the deceased and placed ice on the body.

At the inquest held in the morning, the police to whom alone the coroner could look for the facts in the case, deliberately withheld all testimony of the violence, greater or less as it may be, which they certainly knew the woman had suffered at beilt hands. To further cloud the fair purpose of the proceedings Detective Horigan secured a place on the jury. The verdict, so speedily found, was written by D. M. Connell, the foreman, and set forth that the woman had come to her death from the excessive use of "licker." Whether this travesty on the solemn proceedings was a betrayal of ignorance or an outwas a betrayal of ignorance or an out-break of heathenish humor, none but the author can explain.

The excited colored friends of the dead woman announce their determination to prosecute an investigation. A MASSIVE ORNAMENT. The Big Buffalo Head Casting for the Union Pacific Bridge. A telegram received from New York ast night, states that yesterday afternoon, Mr. Favey, of the Favey Bronze works of that city, cast a buffalo's head out of bronze for the Union Pacific railroad company. The head will be placed on the bridge now building across the Missouri river from Council Bluffs to Omaha. The casting is the largest single piece ever cast in this country, weighing 6,000 pounds. 6.000 pounds.

Mr. Morse's Successor. The feeling is now obtaining among railroad men that the appointment of Mr. Tibbitts as the successor of Mr. Morse as general passenger agent of the Union Pacific road is but that of a figure head, and in no way likely to satisfy head, and in no way likely to satisfy the requirements of the position.

Mr. Tibbetts is a man of but comparatively slight experience in the passenger business, and is not such as to warrant his successful coping with the duties of the office. It is also alleged that the appointment, if such it may be termed, is but temporary and that the real successor of Mr. Morse is to be either John N. Abbott, chairman of the Western Traffic association and exthe Western Traffic association and ex-general passenger agent of the Erie road, or A. C. Dawes, general passenger agent of the Kansas City, St. Joe & Council Bluffs. Mr. Abbott is one of the brightest and best known passenger men of the country, a protege of Jay Gould's and a friend of Mr. Potter's.

The following communication was read from the city treasurer:
Gentlemen: The police and fire funds are exhausted and the general fund will be in a Gentlemen: The police and fire tunds are exhausted and the general fund will be in a week or so. That means that warrants which will be issued between now and January 1, shall bear interest at 7 per cent and be discounted—if sold at all—at a loss to the owners of from 1 to 3 per cent of face. This is a hardship to the men who work for the city, be they contractors or servants of the government. And yet this order of things has existed time out of mind. Apart from the direct loss to the tax-payer in being compelled to pay 7 per cent on the city paper, there is a greater indirect loss in this: That ishor could be obtained and work done at much better rates if there were a reasonable probability of having cash to pay when the warrants are issued. Stationers, furniture men, and contractors generally will figure interest upon their bids. Moreover, the petulence and anger of creditors are sometimes very embarrassing.

I believe that all of this can be remedied.

A CANTANTA WASSED TO

There is no law in existence to prevent the city council from raising the valuation of property as returned by the county assessors. But, if this course be objectionable—and tax-payers would no doubt protest against it—then there is a safer and better plan: Raise the valuation of districts or wards to correspond with other districts and wards. There is a piece of property whose owner holds it at a valuation of $15,000 which was returned by the assessor at $750. The city council sought to raise this and other descriptions last year, but the owners of the property protested because there were very many more glaring inconsistencies which remained undisturbed. Why not bring all such eases up to a common standard? This is equalization. The assessors' valuation of Omaha is $1,600,000. It ought to be $40,001,-000. You cannot make a levy of more than Omana is $1,000,000. It ought to be $40,001,000. You cannot make a levy of more than 41-10 per cent. Four per cent on $40,000,000 is $1,000,000—a big tax, but, if collected for one year, there would be a gratifying reduction thereafter until a minimum of 2 per cent would be reached. * * *

JOHN RUSH, City Treasurer.

Mr. Hascall said that he believed that a part of Mr. Rush's communication was all right and he believed in it, but another part he thought was a little off.
The police and fire fund was not exhausted. If it were true, as mentioned, that the fund was exhausted, equalization would not, could not, act as a remedy. It was not true that there was no cash to meet the warrants.

Mr. Lee moved that the communication be referred to the committee on finance. The motion prevailed. Sewerage—Recommending the building of a sewer in district number 2 from Fourteenth to Eighteenth. Adopted. Same—Recommending sewers in dis-trict 60. Adopted.

Viaducts-Instructing the Omaha and Council Biuffs Bridge company to designate one street upon which they shall build their approach to their bridge over the Missouri on this side of the river and and give bond to pay for damages which may be sustained by the building of the approach to the same.

Mr. Bailey said he favored limiting the company to two streets from which to select the approach and would allow them thirty days in which to make their selection, after which they should lose the privilege of either. He thought that eventually they would select either Douglas or Dodge street.

Mr. Snyder said that he did not think the company should be allowed more than one street to select as an approach. Mr. Ford said if it were true that the contractors were here to build the bridge in question, he could not see why they wanted six streets to select from. They ought to be just as competent now to select a place as they will a month hence.

Mr. Burnham said he thought Mr. Bailey's idea a good one. It was neither too restrictive nor yet too oppressive.
The amendment was adopted.
