A HEAVY PURCHASE OF BONDS

H. T. Clarke Invests $350,000 in Lincoln City Due Bills.

THE POLICE JUDGE MATTER

Kearney Business Men Will Explore For Gas and Oil-The Lincoln & Black Hills Road-Notes.

FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU. At the meeting of the city council Monday evening the question of the disposition of the city paving bonds was under consideration. Several bankers and brokers made offers to act as agents for consideration. Several bankers and brokers made offers to act as agents for the disposition of the bonds, but Mr. H. T. Clarke offered to purchase the bonds direct of the city at par providing that the city would allow him a commission of 2 per cent for the purchase. This was accepted by the council and the sale made. There are of these bonds $350,000 worth which net the city 08 cents on the dollar. $100,000 of the bonds are those voted by the people for the paving on intersections, and the balance, $250,000, represent the bonds issued by the special assessment against the property frontages. The first of those bonds bear date August 15, 1887, and the second lot will be dated September 1, 1887.

The examination of the charges against Police Judge Parsons settled down to business at the council chamber yesterday. The committee and attorneys were on time, and the direct evidence of the complainants occupied the day. The charges against Judge Parsons for holding fines due the county are in this condition: The expert who examined the books found them $400 delinquent. Up to the time the expert went through the books there had been paid in of this sum but $15, which was paid until July 19, 1887, when the judge paid over $195 at or about the time the expert completed his work. Again on the 6th of August when the complaint alleged that a balance of $142 yet remained unaccounted for, the judge paid that amount over. What the testimony will be in defense of holding this money so long remains to be developed, but it is understood that the judge claims ignorance of the law and thought semi-annual payments were all that were required. In the examination yeterday a dozen or more witnesses for the conclaims ignorance of the law and thought semi-annual payments were all that were required. In the examination yesterday a dozen or more witnesses for the complainants were examined. The fact to be established by these witnesses was that a large number of fines for gambling and prostitution had been collected by the police judge that failed entirely to appear on his docket, or only appeared in part. A. Saunders testified to paying monthly fines, aggregating some $40 per month for running a gambling hall and for his assistants. He had his books in court to show just when each of these fines were paid, and his testimony as to making the payments was direct. T. W. Scroggie testified that he was fined and incarcerated for gambling, but that in a Scroggie testified that he was fined and incarcerated for gambling, but that in a few hours he was paid out by Doc Porter. It is stated that this case does not show on the docket beyond a commitment.

Thomas Mann testified to paying fines monthly from August, 1886, to March, 1887, aggregating in amount $93.20. It is stated in this case that only three cases appear on the docket, two for $14.70 each and one for $9.70. Thomas Draper testified to paying Jailor Parsons, brother of the judge, one fine for Mann one month when Mann was committed. The docket, it is asserted, does not show this fine paid at all. Judge Crooker, an attorney, testifies that he had a case for a Mrs. Webb before the police judge in which she was fined $50 and costs. He gave notice of an appeal but was afterward informed by the judge that the case was settled up and disposed of, in what manner the docket it is again asserted gives no light. A man named Sharp testified to paid the first state of the second content of the second c gives no light. A man named Sharp tes-tified to paying fines for two prostitutes ung from Augu to July 1887, with the exception of April' It is alleged in the complaint that the record is blank concerning three of these months. How this testimony will be met in rebuttal remains for disclosure when the defense takes the stand.

Newspaper Statistics.

St. Louis Globe Democrat: A glance through the colums of the American newspaper dictionary is always of much interest to me. I cannot help noting the lack of originality shown in the naming of papers. There are Heralds, Times, News, Tribunes, Suns, Stars, Republicans, Democrats, Advocatos, Indicators, Journals, Recorders, Couriers, Globes, Worlds, Indexes, Presses, Registere, Chronicles, Dispatches Enquirers, Free Presses, Mails, Posts, Examiners, Advertisers, Mirrors, and Bulletins in every state, and all such have to be indicated by the place of publication to be identified. Few papers possess sufficient individuality to be recognized by their titles. The proprietors of weekly papers sometimes break through the conventionalties that surround the business and attract attention by oddness. The Texas Sittings, Florida Cracker, Arkansas Traveller, Land of Flowers, the Gold Leaf, Through the Car-window, a sort of daily review of matters and things; the Land of Clouds, published on Mount Washington; the Tombstone Epitaph, or the Solid Muldoon, are a few instances that are called to mind. How many readers of the dailies, however, know that there are upward of 400 publications in the country devoted to discussion of agriculture alone; that 200 discuss questions of medicine and surgery alone; that nearly 300 newspapers and periodicals are issued from educational institutions or are devoted to educational matter; that the wants of children are met by nearly 100 from educational institutions or are devoted to educational matter; that the wants of children are met by nearly 100 publications; that the secret societies supported at last accounts 146 organs; that 520 are run exclusively for Germans engaged in commerce and finance, insurance, real estate, law, music, science and mechanics, sporting, fashion and woman suffrage; that the total of religious newspapers and periodicals exceed 600, and that newspapers are published not only in German and French, but Scandinavian, to the number of 33; Spanish, 25; Hollandish, 12; Italian, 6; Welsh, 4; Bohemian, 12; Portuguese, 3; Polish, 2; Hebrew, 1; Irish (the Brooklyn Gael), 1; Cherokee, 1; and Chinese, 1,

A River of Ink.

Boston Advertuser: In Algeria there is a small stream which the chemistry of nature has converted into true ink. It is formed by the union of two rivulets, one of which is very strongly impregnated with iron, while the other, meandering through a peat of marsh, imbibes gallic acid, another ingredient in the formation of ink. Letters and other manuscripts are satisfactorily written with this singular natural compound of iron and gallic acid. A River of Ink.

Caught by s Badger.

"Talking about badgers and their biting powers," said a California sportsman to a correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser, "I know of a case where one nearly killed a man, and in a mighty curious way. It was down in Texas. A young fellow was visiting a ranch there, and was in the habit of going hunting for several days at a time, sometimes running down to a town near by. So nothing was thought of it when he didn't show up for three days. Finally a telegram was brought him concerning some important business, and the ranch-men began to hunt him up. To their surprise they found that he had not been at the town, or even been heard of there. Parties were now organized and sent off in various directions where it was thought likely he would go. On the second day the party went into the little gulch and one of the men raised a cry and pointed ahead. There was the missing man lying flat on the ground, face down.

"They rushed up to him, but he couldn't speak, and when they tried to lift him they found his arm was fast in a burrow. Something had him, and they were not long in finding out what. They went to work and dug down for about two feet, and came upon a big badger, lying, brac-ing back, with its teeth fastened tight through the boy's hand. It didn't take long to fill the animal with bullets and cut off its head. Even then they had to pry open its mouth with a bowie-knife before they could release him. They packed the boy home, and the next day he was able to speak. He was almost dead with thirst. The badger had beld him for five days. Another day would have finished him. "It seems that he had seen a little ani-mal run into the hole, which he took for a young badger, and, dropping his rifle, he lay down and ran his arm in as far as he could and began to feel around for the young ones, when he was suddenly grip-ped. At first he pulled and hauled with all his power, then he fainted away, and the arm began to swell so that he could not move, and any attempt to dig away the soil, baked hard, only made matters worse. So there he lay, gradually dying from hunger and thirst, every move making the ferocious animal renew its hold."

If all the instances like this could be collected they would make interesting reading. In the South Pacific a gigantic shell, the tridana gigas, is found, which weighs about 500 pounds, and men have been caught in it at low tide and held until drowned. At or near San Diego a Chinaman was caught by the hand by a huge abalone shell and drowned before he was discovered. Birds are often caught on oyster banks at low tide, and

Cured of a Diseased Spine.

Cured of a Diseased Spine.

T. J. Gilson, a leading druggist of Olean, N. Y., was cured of a diseased spine that had troubled him for some years by using eight Allcock's Porous Plasters. He says:

I take pleasure in recommending them to all afflicted, for they not only cured me, but I have known them to cure many of my customers of rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney difficulties, pulmonary troubles, and local pains arising from bruises, colds or congestions.

Care of Idle Botlers.

Safety Valve: Many boilers used during the winter months for heating are now lying idle. During the interval of warm weather is the time to have them carefully examined and, if necessary, repaired, give them a thorough inspection, and then adopt some good method to prevent corrosion. It will not do to trust to luck to bring them out all right in the fall, for neglect when out of use will cause a boiler to deteriorate more than it would wear out in doing the work ordinarily required of it.

The main object is to keep the boiler from rusting. If it could be kept perfectly dry there would be no fear of this; but it is almost impossible to prevent maisture in a boiler, no matter how carefully it has been dried. Filling the boiler with clean water and closing all the inlet and outlet pipes is advocated. By this method the inside of the boiler Care of Idle Boilers.

will be preserved, but moisture is bound to accumulate on the outside. External corrosion is likely to result in this case.

If it were possible for a man to get at every part of a boiler, it could be given a coat of paint and thus protected; but unfortunately, there are many places that can not be reached by the paint brush, and in squirting or slopping paint into cracks and crevices the chances are always that it does not strike all the surfaces.

Decidedly the best method of protecting a boiler from corrosion, etc., during the summer months, is that of coating th exposed internal parts of the boiler with oil. Pour three or four gallons of black oil into the boiler after it has been cleaned and properly dried; then turn the water on slowly. The oil having al-ready formed a coating on the bottom of the boiler, is floated on the surface of the water and continues to rise with it. When the boiler is filled, it will be found that every part has received a thin coating of oil on its dry surface. The water can then be drawn off. After dripping has ceased at the outlet pipes, remove the man-hole plate and look at the boiler. It will be found "well greased."
