Hon. Patrick Eagan's Opinion of the Proclamation of the League.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT LIED.

Districts Where the League Was Established Distinguished For an Almost Eatire Absence From Crime-Lincola.

[FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU. | The interest was universal in Lincoln yesterday when the BEE furnished the complete report of the proclaiming of the Irish National league by the English government. At this city are located the headquarters and offices of the Irish National league and in this city is the home of Hon. Patrick Egan, who in both Ireland and America has been in the front ranks in the league organizations and in the struggles of the Irish people that have engaged public attention for years. What the proclaiming means and how the Irish people on both sides of the Atlantic regard it and its ultimate effect are questions familiar to Mr. Eagan and are questions familiar to Mr. Eagan and upon which he can express an intelligent opinion. To present Mr. Egan's views in detail to the Bee, that gentleman was called upon yesterday and the question discussed at length.

Mr. Egan said: "The proclamation is based on a lie. The lord lieutenant goes on to say, 'Whereas we are satisfied that there exists in Ireland an association known by the name of the Irish National league, and that the said association in parts of Ireland promotes and incites to parts of Ireland promotes and incites to acts of violence and intimidation and interferes with the administration of the law, etc.' As a matter of fact, the league, instead of inciting to acts of violence and intimidation, has always been the strongest guardian of peace and order. Wherever the league was strong and active in a district or county, there was to be found an almost complete absence of crime, but wherever the league was weak, there you would find house-burn-ings and landlord-shooting. The fact is the government have no need of this coercion policy for the purpose of dealing with crime, as that term is understood in America, because there is less of it in Ireland than in any other country in the world. Its real purpose is to coerce and intimidate the down.trodden tenantry and to aid the landlords to collect their rack rents. Nothing but the blindest infatuation and the most ingrained stupidity could have impelled the tories to enter on such a policy. This step has done more to advance the home rule cause than all that the friends of the movement could achieve if left to their own resources during the next five years. stood in America, because there is less of own resources during the next five years. It has insured the early and complete tri-umph of the policy of Mr. Gladstone. Its effect in Ireland will be to heal up any differences that may exist in the na-tional ranks and to unite the whole country as one man against the infamous at-tempt against public liberty. In Eng-land it will convert the wavering liber-als to the standard of Gladstone, in America it will strengthen and conform the rapidly growing sympathy for Ire-land amongst native Americans, while it will be the means of uniting and inciting Irish in America to renewed and more vigorous exertions in behalf of the old land. Proclaiming the league and suppressing it are two different things, as the tories will very soon find out. The league in Ireland will be compelled to carry on its organization on other lines, and I know from long experience that there is a charm for our people in secret organization which will stimulate them to any amount of work or sacrifice that may be necessary to defeat the government. In 1881 the Gladstone government proclaimed the land league, and the experiment taught them such a lesson that Gladstone and nearly all the leaders of his party have become home rulers. I do not anticipate the conversion of the tories, because, like the bourbons, they are incapable of learning anything, but I do anticipate that within three months of the opening of the next session of parliament they will be completely and ignominiously routed by the champions of Irish home rule. Already

From the liberal unionists.

Now that the government have committed the blunder of proclaiming the league, they must, of course, take steps to enforce their proclamation, and to do that they will be compelled to imprison considerable numbers of the people, in-cluding, no doubt, many of the promi-nent leaders. This will undoubtedly stir up the passions of the people and as many of the more active and desperate amongst the younger men of the move-ment are in no frame of mind to tolerate trifling these will, I very much fear, be bloody work rivaling if not surpassing the deplorable scenes of other coercion times and the responsibility will be placed by all thinking men where it properly belongs, on the shoulders of the stupid and truculent tory government of England."

Since the calling of the republican county convention for the 3rd of September county politics have assumed active proportions and the different candidates e as active as beavers each in his own individual interests. There are three or four candidates for each office and the prospects for lively primaries is refreshing. Among the latest candidates in the ing. Among the latest candidates in the field is Tom Carr, of the first ward, who is running for sheriff. It is not developed yet whether the Journal has commenced its former policy of turning over subscriptions for work in the wards but the ancient machine will undoubtedly try to run things notwithstanding that it was democratic four months ago.

PAVING IN PROGRESS. A large number of curious citizens have enjoyed the past few days looking at the workmen laying the concrete foundation for pavements. Monday the work of laying blocks will begin and a force of 100 men will bush the work hencefourth, providing the stone contractors act reasonably decent in supplying the material for curbing. The prospect of lifting the city above the fearful mud that it revels in, in rainy times, is a spectacle that every man in the city enjoys and it will be a boom of immeasurable good to the

THE PIREMEN'S EXCURSION. At 10:30 yesterday the members of Stone Ballast lodge, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen of Piattsmouth, accompanied by a large number of friends, passed through Lincoln en route for Mil-ford for the day. The engine, 105, han-dled by Charley Simpson, was gorgeously decorated and five coaches accommo-dated the excursionists. A lifteen-minute halt was made at this point and the B. and M. band of Plattsmouth serenaded the depot force in elegant style. A member of the BEE staff was keeping a fatherly eye over the merry crowd and picknicked with them during the day.

BRIEF ITEMS. "The growth of the residence portion of the city is marvelous," remarked a Lin-coln resident yesterday, and the remark was entirely in order. A gentleman whose business takes him about the city estimates that a thousand new residen are now in progress of construction, but many believe the estimate entirely too

How O. B. Selden Was Murdered Yesterday Alfred Selden received a letter from his father D. J. Selden, who is at Lusk, Wyoming, attending to the disposition of the remains of O. B. Selden, who was shot dead a mysteriously last Sunday night. In describing the murder Justice Selden say it happened about 9 o'clock in the evening while the victim was seated at a table casting up accounts. Two shots were fired through the window; the first piercing his heart and killing him instantly. In falling he extinguished the lamp, so that the next shot which evidently was meant for Mrs. Seldon, missed its mark and struck the wall above her head. The The lamp was re-lighted, and the form of the prostrate man was lifted and placed on the sofa when to their horror they discovered he was dead! No trace of the murderer could be found. The course of the second bullet was traced through two plaster partitions, to the ceiling of thence to ceiling of the summer, and thence to the floor where a plain indentation was made.

The ball could nowhere be found, however, and it is thought that one of church had quietly thrust it into his pocket. This has aroused strong suspicions that this person, whoever he is, is guilty of the murder. The town of Lusk s greatly excited over the matter, but no clew whatever can be discovered as to the identity of the murderer. It is thought that the perpetrator of the deed meant first to kill Mr. and Mrs. Selden, and then make way with the money and other valuables in the house. It is also thought the deed might have been prompted by proprietary troubles. At the post mortem examination the fatal minie ball was found lodged near the spine of the deceased. As the ball did not have sufficient force to go entirely through the body it is thought it must have been fired from a shotgun, or some other weapon in which the ball fitted loosely. The inquest was held Friday. Yesterday the body was taken to Manville and temporarily interred. Mr. D. J. Selden will possibly return to Omaha the latter part of this week.

During his brief stay in the city he was entertained and shown the-sights by Messrs. J. R. Clarkson, P. H. Allen and O. H. Gorden, a committee representing the Omaha rowing club. Society in Omaha,

The summer season is on the wane, and shortly the swallows will be homeward flying, and society will again hold full sway. The present season at the seaside and in the mountains has been a very gay and brilliant one, which leads connoisseurs to predict untold good things for the approaching autumn and winter season. A lively summer invariably presages a resplendent winter, and the programme at all the inland and seashore resorts during the present season has been one uninterrupted round of the most recherche events and brilliant festivities. Dancing, riding, yachting. archery, tennis and hunting parties have been indulged in with a frequency and magnificence unrivalled in years past, and the hosts of all the resort hotels are reveling in the luxuriance of prosperity. For Omaha, as well as other cities which keep up with the times in society matters, the coming season promises to be one of uncommon esprit, and the early autumn air is full of engagements and weddings, hops, parties and receptions, until the feminine heart is all awhirl with anticipation and expectancy.

SICKENING DOUBLE SUICIDE.

A Daughter and Mother Prefer Death to a Mad House. NEW YORK, August 20 .- The door in the room in the tenement at Si Charles street, occupied by two women-Mrs. Payne and her daughter Anna-and from which a sickening stench issued, was broken in by the police to-day. Both women were found lying dead on the bed, which was spattered with blood, and their bodies in an advanced state of decomposition. The women had been lying dead since Monday. A rezor and empty laudanum bottle were found on the chair beside the bed. They had cut the arteries in the elbows and ankles and bled to death locked in each others arms, but death had unloosened their grip and they lay facing each other when found. Letters were found on the table beside the bed sprinkled with blood, one of which was addressed to Miss Weed, daughter addressed to Miss Weed, daughter of the late Thurlow Weed, and who was known to be an old friend of the Paynes. The letter asked that they be buried in Albany Rural cemetery, in oaken caskets. Another letter said: "We are both of us, my mother and I, insane, and dread the mad house. We want to be with our family. Tell our relatives where we live." It then went on giving the names of several of their relatives. Mrs. Payne was sixty years old, and her daughter was thirty-five and was a teacher in the East Side public school. It was not known by neighbors that there was Stanley's Latest Letters.

LONDON, August 20-In letters of Henry M. Stanley, written at Gambuya, near the rapids of the Aruwimi, June 19, the explorer says the natives evacuated the place upon the arrival of the expedition, owing to the fright produced by the virorous blowing of the steamboats' whistles. They returned afterward, evincing very amicable dispositions, and promised to supply the ex-pedition with provisions. They informed Stanley there were other rapids higher up, more difficult of navigation, and that further progress by the river would be impossible.
