There has been some talk about the steamer C. E. Mayne, being taken out of Lake Manawa, by way of the outlet. Some of these interested in the lake did not want to have the steamer go out that way, for it would be necessary to con-tract the channel, and cause a lowering of the water in the lake. To prevent this the old huli of the wrecked Manawa has been taken by Keller's steamer, and crowded into the channel as far as possible, and there sunk, so as to prevent the C. E. Mayne from going out that way. Those interested say site shall go out the way she came in, on trucks.

The Fifth Regiment Band Scores Capt Messimer - Few Offenders For the Police-Building on Bottom Lots-A Serious Fall.

The home of J. J. Stork, No. 114 North First street, corner of Washington avenue, was yesterday entered by a burglar during the absence of the family.

It appears that the servant, after washing up the dinner dishes, left the house, intending to be absent about a week. When she went she left the kitchen door open, but Mrs. Stork, before going out to spend the afternoon, discovered the door open and closed and locked it.

open and closed and locked it.

This was about 1 o'clock. About 1:45 o'clock Hugh McMacken, the owner of the building, arrived to look after some repairs to the well. He discovered the family absent and the rear door bursted open. Shortly after Charley Liebold, who runs the saloon, No. 529 Broadway, appeared and had two bracelets belonging to Mrs. Stork which he had just purchased from a man.

The two last named hunted up Mrs. Stork, who on returning home found her husband's clothing had been ransacked, but nothing else was missed.

Liebold said a man entered his saloon and wanted to sell the gold bracelets, as well as a gold bangled bracelet, to him for $4. He said he wouldn't pay $4, but offered $1. This was accepted and he took the bracelets. Shortly after he ex-amined them closely and found Mrs. Stork's name in them. He immediately repaired to her home and turned them question was in court vesterday morning. The city attorney, with the mayor, city marshal and others, were there to bring to a close, if possible, this trouble that has been continually hanging fire.

Special Officer Williams testified as to having gotten up at 3 o'clock in the morning, and "I make me a oup of coffee before I go on watch," and to the seeing of manure being dumped on the banks of the beautiful and ever fragrant, "the Lousy," as it, in days gone by, was behalf and explained how he had left the city on a Tuesday, not returning until Friday, and finding his manure pile had not been hauled away. Attended to it as soon as he could on Saturday, but didn't get up as early as the special offi-cer did who arrested his help.

The city attorney said he thought the defendant, Wise, guilty of violating both ordinances. One for throwing rubbish upon the banks of the creek, the other, into the creek, and he wished to test these two ordinances. If the defendant was not found guilty after the cases made out against him, the city attorney thought that would end this kind of cases so far as he was concerned.

Judge Aylesworth then reviewed the testimony, and thought the defendant was only guilty of piling manure upon the banks of the creek. He withheld fine

The city marshal stated that Theodore Bray had left a plea of guilty under both ordinances, and the judge instructed him to go for all the other offenders, includng laundries, butchers, etc, etc.

Under all circumstances the safety of the passengers will be made the first consideration.

The venerable "Sport" Miller received a $7.60 sentence, after the judge had enquired "how long do you think you'll have to stay here before you can stop drinking."

THE KING OF THE BONIN ISLAND. Romantic Career of a Massachusetts

Adventurer. Boston Globe: In 1824 Savory, born in Massachusetts, sailed for the Sandwich islands, which he believed, as he wrote his family, offered the best opening in the world for an enterprising young man. Kamehameha III. had just young man. Kamehameha III. had just come to the throne, and was thought to be favorable to Americans, while his liberality was proved by his changing the despotism of his ancestors into a constitutional government. His subjects had voluntarily discarded their idols—a movement, perhaps, unparalleled in the world's history—and they were now literally without a religion, and ready, as the event proved, to accept American missionaries and American trade, New England rum and other demoralizing influences included.

England rum and other demoralizing influences included.

Savory speedily ingratiated himself with the king, who gave him some sort of tenure of the island of Mowee, about 500 square miles in extent, the arable portion of which was tilled by native tenants. He was one of the first to introduce, on a large scale, the raising of sugar. In regard to his domestic life there is some conflicting testimony. It was generally believed by his old acquaintances, nearly all of whom are gone, that he married the daughter of one of the chiefs of the Sandwich islands, the sovereignty of which he inherited. This is a corrupted version of subsequent transac-tions at the Bonin islands. The truth would seem to be that according to native custom as well as that of the old bible patriarchs, he "took" a daughter of the hereditary chief of one of the islands, who was in the retinue of the queen's ladies. She had a daughter who became queen of Kamheameha IV. Savory had been on the islands three years, when in 1827 some complications in his former business recalled him to India. The English ship Blossom, Captain Beechy, was at Honolulu bound for Canton, and in her he took passage. Nothing occurred to break the monotony of a Paoccurred to break the monotony of a Pa-cific voyage till one morning in n. lat. 26° and e. long. 142, land was discovered by Savory, not laid down on the chart, which, on making harbor, was found to be the northernmost of two islands now known as Peei and South islands, or collectively the Archbishop or Bonin islands. Having arranged his matters in India he returned to colonize the newly discovered passed for beauty, fertility, delightful climate, fine and abundant water and excellent harbors. And he was determined in spite of England to take possession of hem and exercise, at least, squatter sovereignty.

He persuaded a hundred natives and a respectable number of Europeans and Americans to join him on his first voyage, for which he purchased a large and well-found ship. Such glowing accounts were sent back by the colonists to their friends in the Sandwich Islands that quite a tide of emigration set in.

He took possession of Peel Island, which he found entirely uninhabited, and it was not till after his arrival from the Sandwich Islands with his second installment of colonists that he visited South island. This, to his surprise, he found inhabited by a tribe similar in form, complexion and features to the Sandwich Islanders, they were by estimation 1,000 in number, and were governed by a despotic chief. The discovery proved of great and permanent import-ance to Savory, and caused an entire change of programme in his plans for the

He considered that his hold on Peel is-land would be but weak if England should think it desirable to exercise jurisdiction over it, while she would hardly presume to trouble South island, over presume to trouble South island, over which ownership and sovereignty were already established. Accordingly, with the consent of the king, who had a string of names, the first of which was Hugolo, he, and a few of his trusty followers, came over from Peel island, a distance of about one degree of latitude, and settled down as loyal subjects of his copper-colored majesty. Savory at once bent all ored majesty. Savory at once bent all his energies, backed by his great wealth to civilize the natives and improve their condition in every possible way.

Meanwile, our future king was rapidly gaining favor with old Hugolo, and, gaining favor with old Hugolo, and, almost as as a matter of course, married his daughter, his only child, and heiress to the fee and sovereignty of the island. This, however, was vested absolutely in her husband. The death of her father, about 1840, gave Savory the title, which he ever after bore, of "king of the Bonin islands,"—the plural being justified on the ground that Hugolo always claimed nominal jurisdiction over Peel island, and exercised some authority, through Savory, over the colonists there, most of whom were induced to remove to South island after his accession. ¿ In 1855 or thereabouts our king sailed ¿ In 1855 or thereabouts our king sailed again to the Sandwich islands, leaving a trusty friend, an American, as regent. There he met Walter M. Gibson, Kalakaua's late prime minister, whose life had been as eventful and romantic as his own. Gibson was a Mormon, and went to the islands as a delegate and missionary from Utah with plenty of the saints' money in his pocket. This he concluded to use for his own advantage rather than Brigham Young's. He and Savory concocted the magnificent scheme of uniting all the Pacific islands under one government, the machine, of course, to be run by themselves; and they actually fitted out a vessel and spent a year their captors. After a time he married another native, woman, a relative of his first wife, by whom he had three children, all daughters, who are still living, or were at a recent date, though we presume all claim to royalty has lapsed.

Indeed, ten years before his death Savory saw that the old native despotic forms were not in accordance with the forms were not in accordance with the feelings of his subjects, nor with the spirit af the increased civilization of the natives, and of his own notion he gave them a representative government and the privilege of buying their land hold-ing in fee. He became very wealthy, thus fulfilling the prediction he made when he left home as a cabin-boy, that he would yet be able to drive with a coach and six. His last letter home pro-
