SMASHING THE GLASSES.

The First Permanent Injunction Against the Owner of Property.

SOME POINTS OF PIETY.

A Fire Bug Starts a Little Blaze—The City's Expenses—Biographical Sketches of Vags—An Old Den Indicted—The District Court.

A Permanent Injunction.

In the district court yesterday the first real hard blow was struck the saloons. The application for making the injunction against the St. Louis house permanent has been fully argued, and almost every possible legal point was raised by the defense. There was no attempt practically to protect the tenant, Doerflinger, but the owner of the property, Mr. Brown, through his attorneys, fought hard to keep the injunction from being made permanent against him.

He did not want his property held for the costs of the action, and claimed that there was no proof that the building was used for illegal purposes by his consent or with his knowledge. Judge Deemer rendered his decision yesterday. He ordered that the injunction be permanent against both Doerflinger and Brown, and that the costs be a lien on the property, including an attorney fee of $100 for the prosecutor, Mr. Sims.

In giving this decision Judge Deemer expressed the belief that there was sufficient proof that Mr. Brown knew that the property was being used for saloon purposes. There was evidence that it was a notorious fact that there had been a bar there for years. There had been several notices served, and the case had been pending some time, and yet Mr. Brown had taken no steps to get relief from the court or out his tenant. He had virtually appeared as defending his tenant.

The attorneys for the defense gave notice of appeal and supersedeas bonds will doubtless be filed, so as to prevent the sheriff from proceeding to collect the costs, or shutting the house, until the points can be passed upon by some other court. The case and the decision are of special interest, as it is practically a test case involving a score of similar ones.

The prohibitionists are naturally jubilant over the decision, although it was expected, and not one of the more important cases of this nature. It is evident that Judge Deemer will not rule differently in the other cases of similar nature, and there is little chance for further contest in this court.

The content cases which involve some different facts and questions, will probably be sharply fought. They will not come up for a week or two yet, the criminal calendar to be disposed of before they are reached.

Half Hours with Vags.

Judge Aylesworth was nearly an hour late in taking his accustomed place yesterday morning.

An anxious crowd of offenders awaited him. There were a larger number than usual, the principal charge against them being that of vagrancy.

The judge was in his usual good humor and began by calling on Robert Bowen, aged twenty-four, Irish, and a well-to-do laboring man. He had worked in South Omaha at packing for the last eight months. Had paid $4.50 a week for board and only had $2 when he left. Was on his way to St. Louis, expected to take a freight train and when arrested thought he was a mile outside of Council Bluffs. Had no money with which to pay fare. The judge thought it strange a policeman was a mile from Council Bluffs but concluded he'd better hold Bowen awhile. He was let go late in the day, as it was rather difficult for a one arm man to get work.

His honor, begins his cases by enquiring into the character, nationality, occupation and residence of those brought before him. After he has finished with each one, he begins with the first one again and inquires what charge he is in on, and what he has to say in his own defense in order. It is then the fun begins and especially if the magistrate is in a humorous condition.

Yesterday the twelve or fourteen offenders seemed evenly divided between Chicago and South Omaha as their alleged places of residence. Chicago was considerably in the lead at first and after some six claimed that city the judge enquired: "What's the matter with Chicago this morning?" The next man was Fred Rosner and he switched off onto South Omaha as his home, as did those who followed with the exception of one. The judge who had learned that there were other cities in the union besides Omaha and Chicago. One of those claimed Sioux Falls and the other got away off to Toronto, Canada.

A. C. Moore, aged twenty-two, American, smelter. "Did you just get in from Chicago?" suggested his honor. "No," replied Moore, "I got landed and am on my way to Kansas. Why he had come from St. Louis to Council Bluffs to go to Kansas his honor could not judge. The prisoner said "I am out of 'stiff." Had $5 when I got in Omaha. Only had two beers yesterday and still had 15 cents in my pocket. "I thought for three months that the judge had had a cent for beer yesterday, I was treated." "Then this 15 cents is the accumulation of your lifetime," said the judge, "and as you are twenty-two years old now, by the time you get to be forty-four years old you will have, at this rate, 30 cents."

"If you have had no one to support but yourself and have worked the past eight years, you must own a farm or two," said his highness to John Ryan, a South Omaha resident charged with vagrancy. "No, I am sorry to say, your honor, I haven't. I earn my money like a man, and spend it like an ass. When did you have your own mind to that?" asked the judge. Ryan then stated that he had lost $14 while drunk; was arrested here; discharged and in few days was re-arrested. He anticipated walking to Pacific Junction where he has a brother working in the round house and expected he'd furnish him a pass to St. Louis.

John Leighton, you are charged with being a vagrant. In what manner were you being oppressed by capital?" said the judge. "More by the want of it, eh?" Leighton had $5 Friday, had spent it for beer and grub, he said. "Then," replied his honor, "You must have been a awful full. I don't mean of beer—but that amount of money, would buy almost a quarter of beef or possibly a keg of beer. If you've been a section hand since March, you must have saved up quite a little sum of money. Leighton then explained what he had done with his money in the way of buying winter underclothes, etc., until he reached his last $1. He said he had got out of the money. "Previous to this your business seems to have been extremely legitimate," concluded the judge.

James Simons, aged nineteen, had worked in a quarry at Sioux Falls where they got paving stones for Council Bluffs and Omaha. His home was in Charleston, S. C. He left home when but twelve years old and went to New York city where he made a couple of dollars a week and got on as a stevedore that ran to Providence. Didn't like the work; left job; went as messenger boy for the Western Union; taken sick; got in charge of a mission; was sent to Minneapolis on a farm. "Then he got out of the 'git' after he had put in nine months; went to Sioux Falls; got fined; reached Omaha; worked a week or so till Wednesday. Couldn't get pay until Thursday. Came to Council Bluffs Friday, placed under arrest as a "rag" two hours after arrival and before his honor on Saturday.

"It won't take long to graduate you," said Judge Aylesworth as he passed the case. John Murphy was again before the court, the second time as a vagrant in a week and once upon suspicion of robbing Vernon Treynor of a silver watch.

John Smith, an American butcher, charged with intoxication. He came from Chicago to Omaha to work in Swift's new packing house when it opened.

John Corroll came from South Omaha to Council Bluffs to get a coat and vest he left when he was arrested a week ago. He'd been at work ever since he got out, so the judge let him off.

William Reiley, aged twenty-two, and a moulder, had a peculiar left eye, it being almost a half inch higher up on his head than his right eye. He'd been in the navy and all over the union, and looked tough for one so young.

Ben Stocks, a vag, had had colic and cramps for three days. "Did you come as the judge put in?" He sent a man up town to purchase a scalper's ticket to Des Moines, but as the man didn't return he was left broke. He didn't know if the scalper hid his friend up or the man had him up, and the judge thought, "The latter the case and he concluded to hold Stocks 'until your friend comes back.'"

There were several others tried, the drunks with one exception pleaded not guilty, and as he was booked as a case of "dead drunk," pleaded guilty and paid $8.10, which included his ride in the patrol wagon.

The Criminal Cases.

The trial of the criminal cases begin in the district court on Monday. The calendar is as below, all the cases will be tried in the order given.

- No. 1632—Casey. No. 1764—Adams. No. 1765—Green. No. 1767—Ashin. No. 1768—Hough. No. 1769—Hough. No. 1781—J. B. O'Brien. No. 1782—Carbe. No. 1783—Carbe. No. 1784—O'Brien. No. 1787—O'Brien.

Breaking a Bargain.

The grand jury have found an indictment against Richard Baker, the colored "Tex," as he is known, and yesterday his racket on Broadway, below the North-western track, was raided and his newly-made wife, with two other female inmates, were taken to the county jail. It has been known as one of the vilest dens of vice in this part of the country and has been a disgrace to the community. It is to be hoped that this may end the existence of the "Tex's" gang of colored wrecks who have fastened the neighborhood of the Northwestern depot for years past.

The City Wallet.

Disbursements of the city for the current expenses of the present month of August, 1887:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Includes Fire department, Police and marshal, Streets and cleaning, City engineer department, Salaries of officers, Printing and supplies, Street lamps, Miscellaneous, Intersection grading, Total general expense, Special levy public library, Special levy old sewers, Total.

Small Incendary Blaze.

Fire was discovered yesterday afternoon in the barn and wagon shed of John Clauson, in the rear of his store upon upper Broadway. By the time the fire department arrived the building, which was a frame structure, was well carred. That it was of incendiary origin there is little doubt. George B. Gillison claims that he was sitting in a saloon near where the fire originated, and a short stout man told him that he was going out to set fire to something if it was the last act of his life. Gillison doesn't know the man's name, but claims to be able to recognize him out of a thousand. The fire was light and would not exceed $100, including bay and all.

Aylesworth's Court.

Judge Aylesworth opened court last night. The judge has a heart in him, and not wanting any one to remain in the city jail who could pay his fine, he concluded to give them a chance to get out.

Another thing, the judge didn't want to be the cause of the absence from church this morning of any prisoners. He gave them a last chance, but no one took advantage of it.

At 8:30 o'clock Otto Eisenblatter, booked as an unknown drunk, was brought from jail. He pleaded guilty. "If you please and trust me, you say, would you like to buy you and I got no some money's just now. I get you and come quick by here and give you $7.00." But his honor wouldn't have it that way. Ed Ross, a colored porter in a gambling house, had a racket on Pierce street with a "dannel mouth wench," as he expressed himself to the judge. He admitted having a customer, but thought "she" was a sport he had a right to. The judge told him if he could get a friend to put $10 for his appearance on Monday he could go. A change of one prisoner came over the colored gentleman as he put on his hat to depart, but when the city marshal told him he'd have to go to jail until his friend appeared, the money was forthcoming, down went the darkey's chin and his hands went deep
