In the Commons.

LONDON, Sept. 13 .- In the commons this evening John Philip Nolan, home ruler, asked if it were true that William O'Brien was confined in a cell 9x4 feet, and if Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, meant to order reasonable accommodations for the Balfour had no knowledge respecting the nature of the cell occupied by O'Brien. Of course it was his desire that O'Brien be comfortably confined and the rules provide that untried prisoners should have reasonable accommodation.

Noian hoped the government would relax

Noian hoped the government would relax the prison rules applicable to a political offender in Ireland and especially urged a modification of the degrading duties enforced on common criminals.

Balfour was unable to see that the offenses of persons arrested under the crimes act differed from offenses under the ordinary law. All prisoners should be treated alike. Regarding prison discipline, he was alike. Regarding prison discipline, he was unable to concelve how the Irish members could make any difference between prison people and persons under arrest for inciting people to crime and outrages and that giving those under arrest for committing crimes and outrages. O'Brien had only himself to thank for being in custody.

John Morley said the action of the Irish members was due to the nature of an exceptional law forced on their people and their country. He urged the government to reconsider their refusal to grant an inquiry into alike. Regarding prison discipline, he was sider their refusal to grant an inquiry int the conduct of the police at Mitchellstown. Parnell said the government tried to strike terror into the hearts of their opponents by terror into the hearts of their opponents by treating political prisoners like criminals of the basest type. Parnell said the govern-ment reporters were never molested at meet-ings in Ireland. The police acted like cow-ards and were a part of the system which was a reign of terror within prison and murder without. Instead of conceiving Ireland's without. Instead of conceiving Ireland's right to manage her own affairs, the government has taken her by the throat and was trying to strangle her. In conclusion Parnell said he wished Balfour well outside of his job. "My only fear is," added the Irish leader, "lest some men become so exasperated as to commit wild acts of revenge.

will continue, however, to urge my country-men to patient endurance, wrong and suffer-ing until they get home rule." (Irish cheers.) The appropriation bill passed a third read-ing, and the house adjourned until Friday next, when parliament will be prorogued.

CHICAGO'S MAN AT THE CRIB

The Light House Keeper on Lake Michigan Hopelessly Insane.

THE ROMANCE OF HIS LIFE.

Born in Finland He Weds An Irish Lass-Love in the Lonely Tower -A Noble Wife's Devotion.

Lost His Mind.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13,- | Special Telegram to the BEE. |- Captain Charles Kallstrom, who is widely known among the vesselmen of the great lakes and the people of Chicago as the "Man at the Crib," was taken to the insane department of the county jail last night, a hopeless maniac. His story is a peculiar one. The captain is a native of Finland and met his wife, who was an Irish lass, during a trip to the Green Isle on a merchant vessel, of which he was captain. They were married and a few years later journeyed to the new world. They found themselves in Chicago and Kallstrom received the appointment of keeper at the "crib," a light house some miles out in the lake, where the tunnel ends that supplies the city with water. Through storing weather and fair there they were guarding the great wells and keeping the lights burning in the tower above. The half million people who drank the filtered water never stopped to think of the lonely little couple at the other end of the big hydrant. In winter and summer it was the same, save at rare intervals, when curious visitors arrived to see what sort of a looking box the crib was. One day the incident occurred that made the names of the couple almost famous. The captain in a rowboat had been to the city after provisions and a storm overtook him on his journey back. He managed to reach the crib, but his wife was alone and had to raise the boat with the windlass by herself. A hurricane was lashing the waters into foam and the stout-hearted woman worked at the windless for her life. She partially hoisted the boat, then put her hands on the railing and leaped below to secure it. A spike caught under the gold wedding ring on her finger and as she dropped her finger was torn from its south than the land of the second terms of th on her finger and as she dropped her finger was torn from its socket and hung on the rail above her head. With the blood flowing in a stream from the hole she secured the boat and then bore up while the wound was wrapped. Had she faitered for a moment her husband's life would certainly have been the forfeit. So strong an incident attracted general attention, and whenever Kallstrom came ashore he was much sought after to tell and retell the story and many a flowing bowl was quaffed to his brave wife. Kallstrom's visits to the city became increasingly frequent and his associates less and less desirable. Urged by fool friends he determined to build an excursion boat, which, on its trips, would touch at the crip and allow on its trips, would touch at the crib and allow a sight of the heroine and the lonely life of the lighthouse. It was at this time the Kallstrom was drinking most heavily, and often Mrs. Kallstrom was alone tending to the crib in a storm. He had had a fall from the mast to the dock of a vessel when a boy, and that, taken with the drink, affected his brain. He began to imagine queer things, and one day accused his wife of flirting with the visitors accused his wife of flirting with the visitors who came, especially the aldermen and mayor. She knew he was not right in his head, and kept her troubles to herself. It is now known that he has made frequent attempts to slay the brave little woman whose unexampled fortitude saved him from the waves. He is laboring under the hallucination that not his wife alone, but everybody wants to assassinate him, and he is utterly unmanageable. Mrs. Kallstrom is nearly broken-hearted.

Investigating the Sioux City & Pacific. CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Hon. David T. Little, of the Pacific railway commission, this mornng began an investigation into the affairs of the Sioux City & Pacific railway, which was subsidized to the extent of $1,500,000. This road was absorbed by the Chicago & Northwestern railway some years ago. It is deired to ascertain if this road is in condition to liquidate its indebtedness to the United States. It is shown that the road has pard current expenses and earned a surplus of $410,000 over and above the amount due the government for interest, but no payment has been made to the government. President Hughlit and Comptroiler Kirkham did not make it clear to the commissioner just what disposition had been made of the money, Hughitt said that the road would probably not be able to pay the debt; that it had been crippled by competition; that the alleged deficit was used for necessary improvements, and that it was impossible for him to state the probable action of the stockholders regarding future payments. The total sum-called into question is $250,000.

Men Who Know the Count Deprecate the Attacks on His Character.

More About Mitklewicz. WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 .- [Special Telegram to the BEE. ]-A well-known gentleman who has spent the greater part of his life in the diplomatic service said this morning: "The Chinese concessions which have been granted to the Mitkiewicz-Barker syndicate mean almost countless millions of dollars in the pockets of American merchants. It is no wonder, then, that England should throw obstacles in the way of the consummation of this grand American-Chinese scheme. I learn, too, that the English legation people in this city have been instructed by their home government to spend any amount of money to thwart Count Mitkiewicz. plot will fail, as the Chinese The are shrewd enough to see through the whole thing. What bothers me, however, is that Count Mitkiewicz, who has undertaken a herculean job to open up a trade between this country and China, which, as is said, means countless millions in the pockets of American and Chinese merchants, should be opposed by any portion of the American press. The press in abusing Count Mitkiewicz has evidently been deceived by wicked people who have no desire to see the country benefitted. Every paragraph in the press of this country which reflects upon the count simultaneously appears in London and Tien The opponents of Count Mitkiewicz are doing everything they can to villify his character, which is generally admitted to have been somewhat compromised by his earlier career. Prof. L. J. Boeck, of Philadelphia, was preceptor to the count when he was a child and familiar with his career. Prof. Boeck said that he entered the service of Russia as a professor of education many years ago at Warsaw. There he met the present count's father, who was general postmaster of Poland and one of the richest men in the capital. At this palace he met the most scientilic and learned men in the capital. He was appointed some time later preceptor to his three sons, Eugene being the youngest. He held young Eugene often in his arms and saw him grow, from babyhood to boylood. Subsequently he went to Berlin and had a variety of adventures until hecame to America, having been forced to leave Paris on Napoleon's coup d'etat. In 1833 he met young Mitkiewicz in New York. The young man, fresh from the trammels of Russian oppression and without moral training, finding that he had full freedom, began to sow his wild oats. His money eventually gave out, as he was naturally free-handed, and he became immersed in debt and trouble. career. Prof. L. J. Boeck, of Philadelphia, and he became immersed in debt and trouble. Prof. Boerk continued: "Although I cannot excuse him, I could not blame the boy. His bringing up was bad—it always is for young bringing up was bad—it always is for young Russian nobles—and he had no moral stability. There is no doubt as to his noblity, but his father died too early for his son's welfare. Eugene, I know, married a Miss Lester, of Rochester, N. Y. She has been dead for some time and he has to provide for seven children. For a long line of years I have known his family, which is among the greatest and most honored in Poland. I am sure has a groot man to send out on the Chilese est and most honored in Poland. I am sure he is a good man to send out on the Chinese expedition, and that Wharton Barker's selec-tion is wise, but the count needs a very strict watch kept over his actions."

GARRETT BROKE THEM. Ives Tells the Story of His Firm's Fail-

NEW YORK, Sept. 13,—(Special Telegram to the Bee. i—The World publishes over a page, giving what is claimed to be the first authorized statement from the head of the wrecked firm of Ives & Stayner. The most Interesting part relates to the Baltimore & Ohio. According to the story Ives had a re-markably long head, and succeeded in getting a grip upon half a dozen railroads, and then reached out for the Baltimore & Ohio, which, with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Day ton, Vandalia & Dayton, Ft. Wavne & Chicago, would form a vast system not secured even to the Pennsylvania railroad. The contract with Garrett did not show a mere option, but an absolute purchase by Ives & Stayner, and an absolute sale by Garrett. The matter progressed favorably until two days prior to Garrett's sailing for Europe, when, to the consternation of all, and the great surprise of Ives & Stayner, the famous letter of abrozation appeared in all the morning papers. This was the first intimation Ives & Stayner had received of such action on the part of Garrett. Garrett sailed for Europe with $220,000 in cash, a certified check for $100,000, and $158,000 of preferred stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton in his pocket, given him by Ives & Stayner as part payment of the account of their other purchase of his stock, which stock he himself held and failled to deliver. Ives says his assignee will certainly be able to recover the securities from Garrett. Two contracts with Garrett are quoted in full.

Ives was asked: "Have you an expression of opinion to make as to the action of Garrett?" with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Day

Had we purchased 3,000 shares of St. Paul or Reading, would that have been considered reckless and unbusinessike? Surely all our transactions were well protected."

"Did not Garrett's action cause or precipitate your assignment?"
"Mr. Garrett's outrageous breach of faith

"Mr. Garrett's outrageous breach of faith in writing the letter to the Philadelphia Record rendered further negotiations impossible, and his departure for Europe with nearly $200,000 of money and securities belonging to us, and for which we had received absolutely nothing was the direct cause of our embarrassment."

our embarrassment."

The record was sent back to the referee to be amended. In giving his decision the referee exceeded his powers in examining witnesses and expressing his opinion during examination. Ives' counsel has served notice of appeal from the order of Judge Bookstayer directing the continuance of the reference. BROKE A DEATH-BED OATH.

Fate of a Kentucky Man Who Married Again, BETHEL, Ky., Sept. 13 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE. j-Two years ago Caivin Stower's dying wife placed a small iron ring on the third tinger of his left hand, and extorted an oath that he would never marry again. She said that if he broke his word she would haunt and ruin his wife. On Tuesday he was married to Emma Brickel, to whom he was engaged before his first marriage, .The bride took the ring from his finger, saying that it was superstitious to reand the wish. Within two hours the bride-groom's left side was paralyzed, beginning in the left finger that had worn the ring. The ring couldn't be restored to its place, being much too small, whereas it had been before amply large. The bridegroom is terror-stricken, and has apparently lost interest in his new wife.

Condition of the Western League. The condition of the Western league is very unsatisfactory, but there seems to be no remedy for this season. Next season an entirely new league, to be known as the Western Association, will be organized, and measures taken to insure its remaining intact throughout the season. In this scheme the cities of Omaha, Kansas City, Des Moines, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee will be included. No more Wichitas, Emporias, St. Joes or Hastings—these villages will get the cold shoulder. In the Western league the Topekas made a clean sweep during the past week, and thereby increased her lead on her only possible commetter has a strong hold on second place, and Denver comes third, with Kansas City looming up and not many points behind.
