Improvements Planned.

The Rise In the Missouri Closely Watched-New Enterprises in View -Death of Mrs. S. H. Foster-A Flat Case of Burglary.

Sale of the Motor Line.

It seems there are two or three Kansas City men who have looked the ground over very thoroughly during the past two months and have finally concluded their plans. They have begun to show their hand and in consequence, if the plans they have arranged are allowed to be worked out, a big scheme will be de-veloped which will boom their own purses as well as ensure the future prosperity of that old chestnut, the motor

Few people know, but several suspect, that the Manawa motor railway which, it is alleged, was built by J. K. Graves, of Dubuque, is about to be, in a few days, sold to these Kansas City men.

As is known to the disgust of many, the motor line is still in the same condition it has been all summer. This is without doubt, due to no one except J. K. Graves. He has repeatedly stated that "it is all right, and the crossings will be put in, in a short time," but these crossings are not yet in and it is asserted by several that these "well worn" crossings have never even been ordered.

All this is known to these gentlemen and in the face of it, they have been con-stantly working with Graves in the hope hat he would sell.

There has been numerous back sets and it has been with much difficulty they have succeeded thus far. F. C. Reed, one of the three gentlemen, has been in the city for a number of weeks. All preliminary work has devolved upon him while the other gentlemen interested, one of whom is J. E. McElroy, are in Kansas City.

Mr. Graves is once more expected to arrive in this city, either to-day or to-morrow to complete the arrangements.

Should everything be settled satisfactorily the motor railway will, it is hoped, be "pushed to completion," once more.
The citizens have every reason to believe, if the sale is made to these gentle-men, that it will be worked for all there is in it, for they are said to be rustlers and not hable to allow it to remain dormant. "Get there Eli," was the motto Mr. Graves inserted in a letter once in regard to the motor line when he began to lay rails. Since then he has probably for-gotten there ever was an "Eli," but it is hoped he will "get there" on the transfer of the line and give someone else a show. Should the line change hands, and it is quite positive the transfer will be com-pleted within a few days, several other transfers will shortly after follow.

It is stated that it is the purpose of the purchasers, in order to derive all the financial benefits possible from their en-terprise, to extend the line from its present terminus at Hotel Manawa, across the mouth of Mosquito creek to Manhattan beach and there erect a hotel that will surpass Hotel Manawa, as they be-lieve the beach the proper place for the location of a hotel. It is also their intention to control the sand and ice privileges as well as those of the boats and the beach. By thus consolidating the interests and having it backed by abundant capital Manawa, next season, will do a larger business and much more satisfactory than ever. A Stolen Diamond.

The trial of Herb Rothery, of Omaha, on the charge of larceny was the drawing card in the district court yesterday, and was not completed. The prosecution introduced evidence to show that Rothery stole a diamond stud from Mrs. Burhorn's jewelry store. Rothery and a companion named Morse were in the store looking at goods, and immediately after they went out the diamond, which was in the tray they had been examining, was discovered to be missiug. The officers were at once put after them, and they were found with others in the Tremont house bar room. Rothery and Morse were arrested, and Rothery imme-diately asked for the clerk, who had pointed them out, and who had been showing them goods, what the price of the diamond stud was. He replied $25, and Rothery at once tendered that amount of money to make the loss good, with the understanding that he would be over the next day and see about it. He was in a great hurry to catch the dummy train, and did not want to be detained. He was taken to the station, however, neither the clerk nor the officer wanting to take the proffered money. At the station the two men were searched, but the diamond was not found. C. Burhorn, a nephew of Mrs. Burhorn, was the clerk who waited upon them, and Mrs. Burhorn, who was in the store at the time, also noticed some suspicious moves while the two men were looking at the trays of the two men were looking at the trays of jewelry. Neither of them saw Rothery take the diamond, but the position in which he stood, and the immediate discovery of its being gone, caused them to be very positive that he took the little gem. The defense introduced Jacob Rogers to testify that young Burhorn had told him that the stud was worth less than $9, but young Burhorn denied that he ever told Rogers any such thing, and that the only conversation which he ever that the only conversation which he ever had with Rogers about the matter was one day when Rogers came into the store and tried to get the matter settled, and advised him to take money for the diamond and let the case drop.

Rothery will probably go on the stand in his own behalf to-day. The evidence against him is circumstantial, and yet it is quite strong thus far. What his ex-planations will do toward weakening it remains for to-day to develop.

The River's Rise.

The Missouri river rise has been three feet six inches since Sunday morning, the highest known at this season of the year. The rise at Sioux City on Saturday was thirty-four inches and it is reported as doing much damage in cutting away the earth. It is now within a foot of being as high as during the June rise in 1886, at this point, and is about on the stand. It is now at the gumbo line and will have to fall before the cutting in process begins, if there is to be any.

China Wedding. Avoca, Sept. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. J. C.

Hetzel entertained their friends Monday evening, September 12, in honor of their twentieth anniversary, or china wedding. At an early hour, despite the rain, their parlors presented an animated scene. Earnest congratulations, handshaking and well wishes for a continu-ance of another twenty years as happy as those passed were extended the happy pair.

At 9:30 refreshments were served under the management of E. Bremer, the caterer of Davenport, Ia., comprising the delicacies of the season. After this cards, music and dancing were engaged in and not until the short hand on the clock pointed to two little straight marks on the dial did the friends turn homeward feeling it was well to have been there.

Death of Mrs. Forster. Yesterday afternoon death released from further suffering Mrs. J. H. Foster, She had been ill for about two weeks, and for days her anxious friends have been hoping, despite their own judgment and that of physicians. Blood poisoning had set in with accompanying com-plications, and death came swiftly and surely. Mrs. Foster was a woman of many sterling traits of head and heart. Her husband, who is one of the best known business men of the city, has the tenderest sympathy of the community, in which the family have so long lived. There are two children also, one a son of about ten years of age, the other a little daughter aged about three years. It was but recently that they lost one child, a daughter, and the shadow had not passed away before this deeper one set-tles on the home. The funeral services are to be held Thursday forenoon, Rev.

"Plane" Stealing. Thieves broke into the new Ament flats during Monday night and stole some carpenter's tools belonging to the men in the employ of C. Bosen. Among the tools stolen were an iron block plane which has before been the cause of sending one man up for eighteen months for stealing it. Should the one who stole it this time be caught he will probably be sent to keep the other eighteen month's man company.

National Museum.

MAN AND HIS JACK-KNIFE. A Peculiar Collection of Blades in the Chicago News: Prof. Otis Mason, of the National museum made an appeal to the public at large through the Wasnington Star the other day for an eighteenth century jack-knife. That evening before the professor finished his dinner, a gen-tleman brought to his house a rusty and broken old knife dug up on the battlefield of Ticonderoga-found side by side with the flint blade of an Indian knife. Then some one signing the name of Benjamin Franklin, sent the professor the knife with which, it is claimed, Franklin fash-ioned the sticks of his kite. It is not a jack-knife, but a penknife of very modern manufacture, having as some modern pocket-knives have, a little pair of cissors in it, in place of one of the biades. Another gentleman, whose official position has given him opportunity to make such collections, has promised to give to the museum, not a jack-knife of the eighteenth century, but a collection of Asiatic knives. The Ticonderoga knife is rusted and the blade is broken. It was a long, slender knife of one blade, and originally the blade turned on a hinge or but it is rusted stiff now.

Every boy knows what a jack-knife is, and there are very few American boys who have not owned one. What a great museum wants of a jack-knife, though, may puzzle not only the boys but some of the older folks, too. Therein lies spring so that the knife could be shut, of the older tolks, too. Therein lies hidden the prime idea of the National museum, which is so planned and arranged that when the grand scheme is fully perfected it will tell the story of a man in all his relations. It will tell, in object lessions, how he was cradled, what he played with when a child, how he was dressed, what his occupations in man-hood, how he went to war, how and what he worshipped, what ceremonies attended his marriage and funeral. It will tell the story not only of one man, as he is known and seen to-day on Pennsylvania known and seen to-day on Pennsylvania avenue, but of primitive man, of the red man, the African, the Esquiman. His social relations and his employments will be illustrated. All things laid under contribution for his use or amusement will have full exposition. And the jack-knife tells something of this great story. The jack-knife, Prof. Mason says, is properly a knife of one blade. It derives its name from the French Jacques, which is a name given to low, illiterate fellows. Their knives had but one blade. When a man learned to write he had to sharpen man learned to write he had to sharpen his pen, and carried a penknife with two or more blades. To tell the history of the jack-knife or one-bladed knife would require a large case in the National museum. Prof. Mason has the materials scattered about the shelyes a. drawers

in his laboratory at the National museum He has the rude stone blades of the paleolithic and neolithic man, the rude paleolithic and neolithic man, the rude savage that lived with the beasts before perhaps Atlantis sank beneath the wave, in ages so far back that even Hindoo chronology can hardly supply a measure for the time. Then he has a long and slender blade of bronze from Etruria, from the men who lived and wrought with exquisite skill in Italy before Romulus' and Remus time, and who have left beautiful memorials of their existence, and inscriptions which no man have left beautiful memorials of their existence, and inscriptions which no man has ever been able to decipher. But the most complete part of the collection is that illustrating the Indian jack-knife, which the Indian used for every purpose. Blades of stone, flint, or slate were bound upon a hasp of wood or bone. The edges were chipped or ground till they were sharp and pointed. Then when the Indian or Esquiman came into contact with the white trader their knives began to have iron or steel blades. One Esquiman knife is made out of an old canopener.

In the Whole Hideous Catalogue Of diseases, there were none which, previous to the discovery of Hostetter's stomach bitters, offer more formidable resistance to the old fashioned modes of resistance to the old fashioned modes of treatment than the group of maladies which, under the collective name of malarial disease, afflicted entire communities that suffered hopelessly. Chills and fever, dumb ague, ague cake and billious remittent were once regarded as well nigh incurable. Now it rejoices the hearts of thousands who reside in districts periodically subject to the visitation tricts periodically subject to the visitation of malaria, to feel certain that in the bitters they possess a certain defense against the scourge, a sure means of expelling its poison from the system. To the settler in the far west, the new emigrant thither, and to travelers and tourists by land and sea, the possession of this pleasant safeguard is a guaranty of safety from diseases which they might vainly seek from any other source.
