turned over to Forenaugh yesterday morning, to the infinite relief of his whilom keeper. The new double track on the Union Pacitic bridge will be opened to morrow. Trains will be kept to the left instead of,

as is usual, to the right. On October 15 five additional ferry trains will be run through the day and the new wagon bridge will be thrown open for the gratuitous use thereof by those who wish to experiment. 'Squire Biggs in moving his justice office to Main street has made a decided departure from the old customs. For years every justice office has been on Broadway and closely huddled together. This is the first office of the kind with which Main street has been favored. Another departure is in the fact that the office is on the ground floor. Heretofore every office has been on the second floor. The move is therefore a decided innovation. As he is now located near to the new court house, and as the attorneys are beginning to move their headquarters in that direction, it seems that ere long the legal center of the city will have changed a great deal.

Drum Major D. H. Carbee, Mrs "Texas" Baker, and Winters, the colored burglar, were taken to Fort Madison last night by Captain O'Brien, of this city, and Henry Sherbrook, of Neola. The first two go up for two years, and Winters for eighteen months. Mrs. Arnold, to whom Carbee was married through the bars by Rev. Henry DeLong, of the Salvation army, was not informed of the intended move, and the affecting parting scene was omitted. The elastic step of the drum major was somewhat im-peded by the heavy shackles with which he and Winters were fastened together. Mrs. "Tex" was in good spirits, and carried a large trunk on her excursion to the state penitentiary. Uncle Sam's Court. In the federal court vesterday the case of Walter I. Smith, administrator, against the Chicego & Northwestern railway was on trial. This is a suit to recover damages for the accidental death of D. Span-genberg, an employe, who was killed at Missouri Valley. The case will probably be given to the jury this morning. The case of Kimisch vs. Ball and Tink-ham was partly heard and then con-

Brick Street Paving.

There has been some talk of late in regard to using brick for paving purposes, or at least making the experiment. There seems to be a variety of opinion, yet there is a unanimity in the wish that some method of paving could be secured by which the money for material as well as labor could be retained in this city. The following are some of the opinions expressed:

Chris Straub—"I have enquired into the matter somewhat, and think brick pavement would wear as well as any we could get. I put down some at the institution for the deaf and dumb for the carriage drive-way. It was hard burned brick and it works first rate. As a pavement I can't see why it should not work well. We have the right kind of material here and plenty of it. It would have to be burned hard and the very best brick used for the top course. There should be from four to six inches of sand as a foundation, then a course of brick laid flat then two or three inches of sand and the best burned brick then stood on end. It can be laid more evenly than granite and is nearly as smooth as wooden pavement. It is better than wooden blocks for the fillisides as it is not so slippery. It also wears more even than as wooden pavement. It is better than wooden blocks for the hillsides as it is not so slippery. It also wears more even than granite. I would advise a block of it be laid as an experiment, at once.

Harry Birkinbine, of the water works company, who has given much study to such matters, and is one of the best engineers in this part of the world, said:

"I would think we had better get good sidewalk brick before we try to put them in for street paving. Our brickm kers turn out as good work as it is possible from the clay obtainable here, but examine the brick sidewalks of the city and see how many broken bricks you will find. Will bricks that will not stand sidewalk wear do you for streets?" Take the way our bricks are delivered, and contrast it with the way they deliver thom in the east. Here a wagon is unloaded by hand, while in the east they dump the brick right out of a cart, upon a stone pavement, and then have fewer 'bats' than we do here. I predict that should a brick pavement be laid made of our clay it would be full of holes inside of a year. By engineering formula the present stone pavement would carry a load fully three times as great as one of brick. As there are grave doubts as to even securing the least practical success out of brick for street pavements, and we do know that wood, stone, etc., make good and practical streets, why waste any money trying experiments. Will those who are favoring brick for paving tell us why that in the principal cities where there is any great amount of travel, that the old brick sidewalks are used no more? Is it not because they do not stand the wear, and it is found amount of travel, that the old brick side-walks are used no more? Is it not because they do not stand the wear, and it is found to be cheaper to use stone;" "Do you think that it is possible to burn brick hard enough to answer the purpose;" "Not with this clay. I don't believe it can be done."

"Not with this clay. I don't believe it can be done."

"If they were to use brick what would you suggest in regard to a foundation."

"I should lay it on a well rammed gravel bed, and lay the brick dry, and fill the cracks with asphaltum."

"How about the comparative expense."

"I haven't figured it, but my impression is that cedar block could be laid quite as cheaply. But what is the matter with the city utilizing the gravel beds they already own—or at least they are a part of the park property—north of the city? If they want to keep the money for material right here they can use that gravel on the side streets anyway, where there is mainly light travel. About eighteen inches on a street would make a tine road. It should be screened, the coarser being used for the bed, the finer on top."

Mr. James Wickham—"I believe brick paying is just the thing. It won't rot out like

Mr. James Wickham—"I believe brick paving is just the thing. It won't rot out like the cedar blocks, that's certain. I know that selected bricks can be had right here which will stand any amount of hard travel over them. When they get to paving Fourth street I am going to put in some brick paving there and try it. We've got 150 feet there and the council says we may pave with brick. If you want to see how brick will stand heavy travel just look at a little spot on Broadway, between the American express company and the First National bank. I did that myself when the street was paved. The top of a cistern there is bricked over. It is right between the railway track, and there has been a good deal of travel over those bricks. Go and see how they have stood it. Yes, I believe in brick paving, for then every dollar of the cost of such improvement would be left right here at home, instead of being sent away. The wooden paving will soon begin to rot out and be full of pitch holes, as in other cities. The brick will stand if properly put down. Two layers ought to do. The bottom one could be laid flat and the upper one on edge. With a good foundation the brick, if hard burned, would stand for many years. It might cost a lile more than the wooden blocks, but would last enough longer besides leaving all the money right at home."

Sewer Assessments. Yesterday was the last day for filing protests against the assessments as pubished for the construction of the Fifth avenue sewer. There were several filed, and it is probable that the city council will have no little discussion and difficulty in settling upor some plan for an equitable distribution of the expense of the improvement. It appears that the sewerage system in the Fourth ward starts in the center of the city, where there is valuable property, and increases in size as it extends towards the less valuable portion, where there are less building improvements and iess need for sewer. By the present plan of assessing the cost to the adjacent property it comes to pass that a lot located near the sewer ditch has to pay three times as much for its has to pay three times as much for its sewer as a much more valuable lot in the very heart of the city. Of course it is necessary to increase the size of the sewer as it extends out, as it has more to carry, but those complaining assert that this extra size is for the benefit of others beside those in front of whose property it chances to be laid. Most of the council and some of the city officials admit that there is a seeming ministice in this mode. and some of the city officials admit that there is a seeming injustice in this mode of assessment, but whether the assessment can be made legally in any different way is a matter of doubt. The legal questions involved are being looked up, and will be presented in full at next Monday's meeting of the city council. If it is possible to give any relief to those in front of whose property the large size sewer is laid there seems a disposition to grant it. disposition to grant it.

A Nine-Round Prize Fight.

At an early hour yesterday morning the police received a telephone message from Omaha notifying them to be on the lookout for a prize fight which was going to take place at daybreak on the Iowa side of the river, and the principals with the spectators were to cross the river from Omaha at early dawn. For some reason or other, little credence was given the matter and it was not until about 9 o'clock when one of the principals, Thomas H. Brooks, was seen upon the streets with his knuckles and face spotted with court plaster, that the "tip" was thought to be a correct one. It was then learned that "Tom" Brooks, of Council Bluffs, and "Charlie" Laird, of Omaha, had a nine-round bare-nuckle of Omaha, had a nine-round bare-nuckle fight shortly after day break at Judson's sand bank, just above the city limits. in the presence of some twenty-five persons for a purse of $50. The men stripped weighing 135 pounds eash, and the first round Brooks was knocked off his pins three times by his opponent, but finally in the ninth round got even and retaliated by giving Laird three falls caused by heavy blows. In the tenth round Laird failed to come to the front when time was called and Brooks was awarded the $50 stake money.

For his trouble Brooks now wears a patch of black court plaster an inch and a half square on his left cheek, a couple of pieces upon his forehead and all of the knuckles upon both his "dukes" are similarly decorated, but he got $50 for it.

Brooks has previously had the reputation of being a fair boxer, but this is the first ring contest he has received credit for.

Cupid Needs No Tongue. Last evening there was a peculiarly interesting marriage ceremony and a most enjoyable social gathering at the residence of Mr. D. J. Smith, on Madison street. The happy man was Prof. F. C. Holloway, of the institute for the deaf and dumb, and the bride was Mr. Smith's daughter, Miss Minnie B. Smith. Prof. Holloway is a mute, whose old home was in Centerville, Ia. He was graduated from the institution in which he now serves as teacher, and also from the National Deaf Mute college at Washington, D. C. He is a thoroughly cultured gentleman, a valuable member of the corps of instructors since 1879, and a young man who wins and holds friends. The worthy lady whom he has thus won is also a graduate of the institution here. She is a semi-mute, having lost her hearing when about ten years of age, and retaining her powers of speech. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Crofts, pastor of the First Congregational church. Prof. Wyckoff interpreted it in the sign language. The coremony was watched language. The ceremony was watched eagerly by the company of friends there gathered, and at its close there was an equally eager and honest proflering of well wishes. Among those present were Superintendent Rothert and wife and others connected with the institution. The other invitations were confined to the relatives and immediate friends. The young couple were also substantially remembered with numerous and elegant

More Saloon Cases.

Several new saloon cases were started yesterday. One was a petition asking that Mr. Peter Bechtele, whose hotel is so well known, and who is himself one of the oldest citizens, be brought before the tar to answer to the charge of contempt in not having obeyed the writ of injunction issued some time ago, by which he was forbidden to longer have a bar in connection with his hotel. There were several petitions filed for writs of injunction to be issued. Among them were F. McAdams, H. Wegener, George Hansen and Gus Grote. The new petitions show Stone & Sims as attorneys for A. Overton, who is the relator in these petitions, as the representative of the prohibition prosecution. Heretofore Mr. Sims has been alone in these cases, but now his partner is to take hold also, and thus add strength to the prosecution, if strength was needed, which those who have watched Mr. Sims' vigorous prosecution will hardly admit.
