Several of the citizens of Council Bluffs have expressed their intention of being on hand to-morrow to witness the affect-ing meeting of George Rudio and Presi-dent Cleveland. The Royal Arcanum gives its opening dance of the series this evening in its hall. These parties have been ever pop-ular and this season promises to be fully equal, if not superior, to previous ones. The piano to be drawn at the Catholic bazaar has been moved from Voss' jew-

Yesterday at noon the last meal was served in the dining room of the Bechtele house. Mr. Bechtele will continue to keep the hotel open and give the public the opportunity of securing rooms there, but no meals will be served, the dining room being closed until further notice. Mr. Bechtele is one of the oldest citizens, and has done much for Council Bluffs in many ways. He has spent thousands of dollars on improvements, but he says he is through now. He declares that prohibition makes it impossible for him to continue the hotel business longer, and as his bar has been closed, he closes his dining room also.

A Euspicious Trio Arrested For Burglary and Speak-Thieving.

THE DISTRICT COURT DOINGS

Morse on His Second Trial - The Jonathan Jones Murder Case-City Council Doings-Little Bits of News.

Bagged for Burglary,

George Monroe, Charles Turner and James Wilsey are the names given by three men who are awaiting trial this morning on several charges. Wilsey has been identified by W. A. Maurer's servant girl as the burglar who was in her room Saturday night. The trio also stole an axe from Cole & Cole, and a rubber coat from M. Marcus, both of which articles they sold for much less than their actual worth. At Mr. Maurer's residence the girl was awakened by someone striking a match, and seeing a man in the room asked, "Is that you, Mr. Maurer?" "Hush!" was the reply, and the light was immediately extinguished. A loud scream immediately extinguished. A loud scream from the girl awakened Mr. Maurer, who rushed from his room just in time to see the fellow take a flying leap the whole length of the stairs, jump through a window and run like a deer. About 3 o'clock Sunday morning Officers O'Brien, Stevens and Covait saw the men on the street, and after watching them for an hour, arrested them as suspicious chargeters and placed the charge of vagrancy against them, pending further developagainst them, pending further develop-ments. The result shows the correctness of their suspicions, and the cases will come before Judge Aylesworth to-day.

The District Court.

The trial of criminal cases in the district court was resumed yesterday. The case of Jonathan Jones, charged with the killing of David Roberts, was set for the first case. Colonel C. R. Scott, now of Omaha, but formerly of this city appeared for the defense. This case has been long in the courts, and the contest has been a hard one. Colonel Scott secured a new trial, and that is to take place at this term of court. He was not quite reatly yesterday to proceed with the trial, and the case was set for Thursday, when the trial will commence.

A special venire of thirty jurymen was secured, and although they were summoned for the Jones case especially, yet they were told by Judge Deemer not to leave, although the case had been continued. He thought they might be wanted as jurymen in some other case. The case of William Morse, Rothery's partner, was then called. In securing a jury most of the afternoon was taken up. The regular panel was exhausted, and some of those summoned by the special venire were put in the box. The attor-neys for the defense objected to this, but their challenge on this ground was not deemed sufficient cause by the judge. Morse will be remembered by many on account of his connection with the sensational Rothery case. Rothery and Morse were arrested for stealing a diamond from Mrs. Burhorn's jewelry store. Rothery was found guilty, but jumped his bondsmen at the last moment. Morse also skipped, but was brought back and tried. The jury disagreed, and now he comes on for a second trial.

Lightning at Loggerheads. The Iowa & Nebraska Telephone company is endeavoring to procure an inunction restraining the Electric Light company from crossing their electric cables on the same side of the street now used by them. The claim set up is that the efficiency of their lines is destroyed by induction, the electric light current being so much more powerful than that of their own system. The cables are to be fastened about ten feet above the wires of the telephone company, the poles and cross-arms being now in place. This distance, it is claimed by the com-planant, is not sufficient, and at least thirty feet is asked to be the minimum distance of separation. The application for the injunction will be argued to-night before Judge Deemer.

The impression prevails that the in-junction will not be granted for evidence will be introduced to show that at certain places in the city the two wires have operated well with only two feet separation. The struggle is mainly on upper Broadway, and should the injunction be granted it will effectively bar the electric light company from going to many places desired to be reached by them. They will, at least, be forced to the alternative of running their cables under-ground, for it is impossible to maintain a distance of thirty feet between the two

GOLD IN CHINA. Mines to Be Opened in the Celestial

Kingdom. While people are wondering what to make of the new Arabian Nights' Enter-tainment by Count von Mitkiewicz, a little expedition is departing from this port which may effect more for the Americanization of China than the day dreams of all the counts that have ever been counted. Among the passengers who sailed the 21st ult. in the City of Pekin for Yokohama were Mr. A. M. Ellsworth, a mining man of experience; Arthur E. Roberts, assayer; Frank J. Niel, machinst; Mark J. Lidstone, millman; Niel Diven, mining foreman, and Charles Taylor, prospector. All these are in the service of the government of China, engaged under special contract to reopen and work the gold and silver mines in the province of Shan Tung.

To understand the new departure it is necessary to go back a long way. Gold and silver mining was at one time a flourishing industry in China. There is reason to believe that the Chinese used gold coins at a period anterior to the date of those Greek and Parthian specimens which form the delight of numismatists. They are said to have been cubes without inscriptions. However this may be the art of mining died out. This was due to several causes. In mining, as in other mechanical pursuits, the Chinese reached a certain distance and no further. They learned how to mine ore and to separate mineral from rock, but they never discovered how to pump water out or pure air into underground workings. Hence in all their mines there came a time when foul gases and water drove out the miners.

Still more fatal to the mining industry was the superstition of the Feng Shin. The Feng Shin were underground demons who were quiet and well behaved enough so long as they were unmolested in their subterranean abode, but became troublesome and malignant if their rest were disturbed. It was discovered that epidemics and famines followed the workings of certain mines, and it was de monstrated without difficulty that the visitations were due to the justly irritated

Feng Shin.

The controversy lasted some years as such things do in China. But it ended in the issue of an imperial rescript absolutely prohibiting the prosecution of driftmining under penalty of death. This edict is supposed to have been issued about a century ago before the discovery of America by Columbus. It has never been strictly enforced. Mining has always been prosecuted to some extent in Shan Si Yunnan and Honan, On the Yangste Kiang and its confluents, is the stream of Sze Chuen, and throughout Mgntchooria, grave mining has always been followed as a business by a portion of the people. Al-lusions to the mineral output of the empire are scattered through the works of Pumpelly, Davis, DeCarne, and others. More recent writers, such as Williams and Von Richthofen, mention the fact that the precious metals are produced, without entering into details. Still, the disappearance of gold and the absence of gold currency, show that the absence of gold currency, show that the edict, though not strictly carried out, had the desired effect of putting a stop to mining as a regular industry. It is only within a few years that the Chinese government resolved to reverse its policy in this respect. The frightful strauts in which the empire found itself during the French war was satisfied its leading men that China could not hold its own in the family of retirements it provided itself with a gold currency. It was resolved to reopen the mines.

Gold, like coal, is found in every one of the nineteen provinces of China. But the largest and most accessible source of supply is to be tound in the range of hills which divides the losss prairie of North which divides the loess prairie of North.
Central China from the ocean slopes.
Those hills can be traced from the shore of the Gulf of Pectuli, in the province of Shan Tung, down into Quang Tung. It is quite likely that they are mineral-bearing throughout. Mr. Ellsworth told the Herald correspondent that Americans could form no idea of the quantity of gold in China; there was far more there than here.

If a few score mines in the foothills of Shantung, Kiang Su, Che Kiang, and Fo Kien should begin to output $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 of gold and silver per year through American management and with the aid of American machinery the event could not but be followed by important commercial and political conse-

Not on the Pay-roll.

"You would be surprised," said a rail-road man to a Chronicle reporter yesterroad man to a Chronicle reporter yester-day, if you should learn how much money the Southern Pacific company is spending every month to maintain its service. Of course the greater number of men, and women too, of this class, are employed by the operating department, and particularly in the passenger line. Most of them come under the head of 'spotters' although they are sometimes 'spotters,' although they are sometimes spoken of as 'stuffers.' By the regular employes of the line to whom their attention is chiefly devoted, they are known by another name, but as it wouldn't look well in print, I won't give it to you.

"What are the duties of these people?
Well, they are engaged in various ways.
One man may be particularly bright in detecting the 'knocking-down' methods of dishonest train men, and be able to report the exact sum sequestered from the revenue of the company by a given man during a given period.

"Others develope an aptness tor discovering whether friends of the trainhands are allowed to ride without paying fare. "Then there are those who are set to watch ticket-scalping operations. Not long ago there was a big list of these sharp-eyed individuals on the Southern Pacific company's lines, and their labors resulted in the ejectment of many persons from the trains of the company, and the taking up of their scalped tickets. This is not an easy task, as you may believe, but one in which great shrewdness is essential. It is by no means a pleasant duty, either, and is one in which a sympathetic or compassionate man cannot very well engage. Besides there are great risks and responsibilities, for in putting off a man whose ticket you suspect has been purchased from a scalper, you may eject a person who is perfectly innocent of such an action. Scalpers like to put up jobs on spotters and train agents by leading them to believe that tickets have been sold through their agency, when in reality they are perfectly straight, hav-ing been bought at the regular ticket office. In the case of an ejectment under such circumstances the spotter does not escape censure for bungling, and as the company sometimes has to settle damage suits on an expensive basis, it behooves the spotter to exert the utmost caution.

"There is a class of spotters who are assigned to the rather uncertain business of detecting cut rates. There is a great deal of this sort of business going on now-I mean rate-cutting and in order to get proof of it the company sends out its spotters and stuffers on the streets and on the road to inquire into the matter. A party of a dozen Portuguese was ticketed to Boston one day this week at $55.50 a head. The regular rate is $64.50. The tickets were sold at an outside office having no connection with the Southern Pacific, and the rate was, of course, a profound secret, as the ticket-sellers did not wish to run afoul of the inter-state commerce law. A spotter employed by the company secured an interpreter, went aboard the train and in a very short time afterward came back to headquarters with full information regarding the cut, and it has created a row among the passenger agents that is still very far from being quieted.

"How are spotters paid? Well, as their services are of a transitory character, their remuneration is not very great, depending, as a rule, upon the value of the difficult to say what they do get. tell you one thing, however—their names never appear on the pay roll, and the money used for the payment of their services is all drawn on general vouchers. If it were otherwise, the sympathy between the hundred odd clerks who handle the youchers and accounts and the railroad men whom the spotters are set to watch would nullify the object of the whole system of secret railroad service. At least the department officials think it would, and for that reason the spotters remain nameless on the records of the
