Sketches of Life's Sunshine and Shadow in New York.

A BRIEF HOUR IN FRENCHTOWN.

Bogus Blooms and Balms for the Boils of Beauty—Timely Advice on the Subject, "How to Choose a Wife."

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—[Special Correspondence of the BEE.]—One of the news headings in a journal that lies before me says that William E. Brockway, the forger, has been released from a service of three years and seven months in state prison. My first sensation of shock is that I am much older than I was when I first saw Broadway. He was no acquaintance of mine, I hasten to write; and yet I was most politely thrown against him in an assemblage of wealth and fashion. It was at the academy of music on a grand opera night. A party of us were in a box. Into the adjoining one came a tall, venerable looking man, wearing the conventional evening costume of a gentleman. The fact that he was all alone and remained so through more than half the performance served to fix my attention on him. Had he been accompanied by a woman or two, he would have passed unnoticed for one of the many who bought boxes for the occasion. He listened intently to the music and keenly watched the acting. At length a man whom I knew as Chief Detective Birney came along, stopped to talk a minute with the old man and went away. Then I asked a companion who the solitary devotee of music was, and he sought Birney to find out. He soon came back with the information that our next-door neighbor was Brockway, the notorious forger, and that he was to be sentenced on the following morning. He had pleaded guilty on one of a dozen indictments, and had bargained with the government prosecutors to give up a lot of bogus plates, if they would let him off with a single sentence. This was his last day out on bail. He was an ardent lover of opera, and he chose to spend his farewell evening in its enjoyment. And hardly a man in the audience looked more like a solid respectable citizen.

TRROUBLES OF THE RICH.

If the truly good people of New York were to stay even a time they took cover with the wealthy in fashionable places, the town could be chalk full of takers. They had ones and no relatives. Some envious chaps, with a rather artistic pencil, has for a week past annoyed the Astors and Vanderbilts by chalking emblems of the ladies of those families on the door steps of their houses.

"You will observe," he would say, "that the exercise is precisely that of a woman at a wash tub, and I assure you that half an hour a day at this delightful work will give you a health and bloom second to no washerwoman in the land."

Did that recommend it to modish favor? Not at all. It condemned it instantly. Fifth avenue's belles would prefer even the blush of rouge to that of simulating a washerwoman's labor.

THE CHEMISTRY OF COSMETICS.

Ignorance of the chemistry of cosmetics sometimes leads to embarrassment. Some of the bogus blooms are made of materials that will change color under certain conditions.

Bela Lockwood once the world's candidate for president discovered this peculiarity in the compound which had been sent for trial. She had come from an eye-witness, that she was at Mount Clemens, Mich., on a lecture tour, and was to appear in the evening before a critical audience. To save time, she made up her face, neck and arms in the afternoon, intending to wear a decollete rig on the platform. Then she strolled around the place, and visited the sulphur springs. It occurred to her that a sulphur bath would be refreshing, and she determined to sacrifice the makeup. She went in and when she came out, she was colored a purplish black. It wouldn't come off, either. Liberal applications of ammonia and vigorous scrubbing only reduced her neck from full-blooded congo to mulatto color. Powder lent a ghastly pallor to her face, and a high neck dress with a ruffled collar hid the rest. The lecture was delivered, but the new bloom didn't get an endorsement. A similar calamity befell the prettiest girl at White Sulphur Springs last season. She used some cream to give that pale white skin a tint, and when she was to appear in the evening before a critical audience.
