The Fairchild Case.

In getting at the bottom facts of the alleged kidnapping case, a BEE reporter learned yesterday that a lady calling herself Mrs. Douglas Fairchild, visited Chief of Police Seavey, at his office last Thursday morning and said that she had come after her little daughter Stella, who was attending school here, and who had, with an elder sister, been taken by her husband from their home several years ago. The lady was plainly but neatly dressed, but was at once recognized as a person of refine-ment and education. She was of medium height, with a fair complexion and light hair, and about forty years of age. She told the chief that her husband had abandoned her for another woman, with whom he had been living here as his wife She said the past four years had been one uninterrupted period of sorrow and mourning to her, that the deprivation of her beloved children had come well nigh crushing her. Recently she had necertained that her eldest daughter had married and was residing in some Interior Nebraska town, but the youngest, Stella, was here and going to school. The chief proffered all the aid within his power, and leaving her address, Utica, N. Y., she departed. That she succeeded in securing her daughter and left for the east has all been detailed in these columns, yet a lingering doubt remained, in conse quence of the many conflicting stories rife, of the woman's identity, many intimating that she was not the girl's mother at all, but a woman who had mother at all, but a woman who had enticed the child away for sinister pur-poses. The reporter, however, has sifted the matter thoroughly, and is enabled to refute all the uncharitable versions of the affair. The woman was Mrs. Douglas Fairchild and the mother of the little girl, who was delighted at being restored to her loving care and protection. and in the happiest state of mind left with her for her eastern home. In corroboration of this statement, Mr. John W. Russell, with whose family little Stella has been residing for the past four years, appeared at the central station yesterday and told the chief that in case he communi-cated with Mrs. Fairchild, he should inform her that the girl's cloth-ing that she had left behind her at his house was at her dimension and if the house was at her disposal, and if she would write for it it would be expressed to her. Mr. Russell said that he was perfectly satisfied with the condition of things, and that the lady in question was the child's mother.

To satisfy himself Chief Seavey went to work to look up the former life of Fairchild himself, and he discovered that Fairchild did reside here, at 712 Marcy street for the period of one year and with a woman whom all the neighborhood believed was not his lawful wife. He was then a clerk in the furniture store of M. F. Martin, but is now traveling as salesman for some Kansas City house. And so, after all a very dark mystery turns out to have been no mystery at all.

The production of the receipts, however, has satisfied Mr. De muth that Hall had been untrue to his employers. Consequently these unhappy mothers must be separated, by fifty-four miles, from their children, which is equivalent in view of their small means, and the necessity for spending all their time in work, to total banishment from them. Children who are old enough will be taught to work, by the kinter-garten methods, which amuse, while instructing, and it is hoped that we will eventually be able to establish, as a branch of our work, a training school for those servants and serving-women school for these serving women, so that the elementary instruction given to the young children may be followed up by training which will fit them not only to sup-port themselves, but to be such blessings in the households they enter, as only thoroughly competent servants can be. We also expect to become acquainted with the mothers whose children we care for, and to visit them in their homes, where, as cir cumstances suggest, we may assist and encourage them.

Our work will be thoroughly unsectarian, founded on the common humanity which underlies and margins all creeds and conditions To gentlemen of your intelligence it is unnecessary to point out the results of such a system faithfully carried out. It cannot but diminish, not only pauperism, but crime, since pauperism and idleness are fruitful pa-

The largest amount that I ever knew to be procured was 214 pounds, and this was divided among two vessels the Franklin and the Antarctic, each vessel making more than $22,000 out of the catch. Ambergris is valued at $225 a pound, and is being used in pertumery, incense and also for alloying gold. A prominent drug house at Boston con trols the market on this product. All of the whalebone that is being procured finds a market in New York, and from there it is sent to all parts of the coun-try. A large proportion of it is shipped to Europe. In closing the captain was asked there would ever be a dearth of whalebone. He believed that there would not, but he thought that the whales of to-day were becoming more shy than they have been in the past. NOTICE.

SHOTWELL'S SHENANNIGAN.

James A. Shotwell, who was arrested Tuesday night, charged with having forged a promissory note, was arraigned yesterday morning before Judge Berka, and pleading not guilty he was held in the sum of $1,200, and his preliminary hearing set for next Saturday afternoon. Appended is the note which Shotwell is charged with having forged:

Sixty days after date, we, jointly and severally, promise to pay the Merchants National Bank, of Omaha, or order, one hun-dred dollars for value received at the Mer-chants National Bank, with interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum from maturity until paid. JAMES A. SHOTWELL, WILLIAM MCHUGH, A Due April 26th, 1887.

A BEE reporter interviewed Shotwell in his cell yesterday, and he stoutly denies having committed forgery or any other crime whatever. He says that the bank brought suit against him in the district court on this very note and two others, one for $40 and one for $45 and got judgment and that McHugh paid the two lesser notes. He also says he was bookkeeper and clerk for Mc-Hugh & Robinson when they were in the pile-driving business and is familiar with most of McHugh's business transactions, and was frequently authorized to sign McHugh's name to cheks, notes and the like. He says that on the dissolution of the firm Robinson brought suit against McHugh for $3,600 on settlement. Mc-Hugh claimed that his books had been lost or carried off and that there was no way in which the standing of the firm's accounts could be reliable obtained and refusing to settle, Robinson resorted to the law. Shotwell, it seems, has a copy of McHugh & Robinson's accounts and has been subported as a witness by Rob-inson in the trial which has been set for next week. On learning of this fact. Shotwell claims that McHugh has been instrumental in sending parties to him with offers of money in case he would leave the city. This he refused to do, and his refusal, he claims, has instigated the suit against him for forgery for the purpose of preventing him from testifying in the Robinson-McHugh suit. He further claims that he can produce several reputable witnesses who will testify that they have seen him on divers occasions sign McHugh's name to checks, and that they had always been recognized at the bank and "O. K'd" by McHugh. He denounces the forgery business as a piece of malice, and nothing more, and prophesies his prompt acquital. How-ever, the affair has an ugly look at the How-best and Shotwell's reputation is such that his word will not be taken without some doubt.
