Had Their Laugh First. Three spruce young men, not boys, were having a merrier time Halloween night than such a trio generally has.

They were not content with the ordinary gates, but concluded it would be much funnier to take a buggy which was in a yard in the Fourth ward. There was a five-board fence in the way, but this was nothing, and they actually lifted the buggy over the fence, and away they went down the street at a run, drawing the buggy as lightly as if it were a featherweight.

They were suddenly accosted by two officers, Anderson, of the merchants' police, and Stevens, of the regular force. The officers insisted on taking the three young men to jail, despite their pleadings, their begging for the sake of their family name, their positions in society, and all that.

The officers sternly insisted that they should take the buggy back to the place where they got it and then go with them to jail. There seemed no other way, and the trio began hauling the buggy back several blocks. The officers rode, and the load seemed heavy. When the fence was reached it was found to have grown several feet during their absence.

They were heavy hearted and the buggy still heavier. Their strength was shaky, and it was only by the assistance of the officers that they were able to get the buggy over the fence again. Then they were told that if they would get right home they could escape the noisome dungeon. This announcement called forth the first snarl that had been perceptible since the gray trio were surprised by the officer.

Kid Grant was before Squire Biggs yesterday for a preliminary hearing on the charge of grand larceny. Mr. Tingle appeared as prosecuting attorney, in the absence of Colonel Daily, while Colonel Whittlesey served as the attorney for the defendant. Grant had sneaked into the Mergen house, on lower Main street, and had visited several of the rooms, helping himself to two overcoats and other articles.

As he was coming down the stairs he was seen by Mr. Mergen, caught, and made to unlock the house, two hats on one of which belonged to Captain Hayes, one of the boarders. He also had on one of Hayes' shirts, and underclothing belonging to Mr. Lindsey. The overcoat which he had on belonged to Prof. Hewitt, another boarder, and another overcoat, belonging to Hayes, he dropped from his arm when caught. Grant had little to say to these accusations, his chief indignation seeming to be directed at the way the information had his name, as "Kid" Grant. He wanted it distinctly understood that he was no "kid." His name was Christian Grant, and he called himself "Kid" for short—not "Kid." Colonel Whittlesey tried to get a confession, but his motions were overruled, and when he found that other objections to proceedings were likewise of no avail, he declared that he would close the case right then and there, for he saw that the court was bound to assume that his client was guilty anyway. Judge Biggs then was hot, and resented such an insult. The colonel declared he meant no insult, and the case came to a finish by the "christian kid" being bound over to the district court in the sum of $500. He was not quite ready to furnish this amount of bonds, and so was taken to the Hotel O'Neill. Grant seems to be a slick sneak, but this time he was not quite slick enough.

Aylesworth's Griet. There were seven names on the police docket yesterday morning—two drunks and five disturbers of the peace. Charles Conley was fined $7.50 for his little spree, and John Hayden was charged 50 cents extra for the additional luxury of a ride in the patrol wagon. William Matlock, John Lewis, William Reeder and J. Wheeler had their ears boxed in grand shape, and the first three were taxed $9.60, and the latter $10 as a guard against excessive exuberance in the future. Josie Smith had deposited $10 for her appearance at 9 o'clock but evidently concluded that she would not get off for much less, as she failed to materialize. The parties were all short of money. The only one who could pay his fine was Matlock, and he had to travel in an officer's company quite a while before he could secure the necessary amount. The other five were tucked into one of the cells of the city jail to christen the new flag flooring.

Mrs. Paddy Smith appeared before the judge and was given permission to go down and clean up Mr. Paddy's house, with strict injunctions to refrain from any former demonstrations of pounding his head with the broomstick because he wouldn't hold the duster. The trial of the hotel sneak thieves was set for Friday. Mr. Ludwig Thomas, who was one of the losers, will remain in the city as a witness against them.

J. W. and E. L. Squire lend money. "Let Her Go Gallagher." "Little Boss." Best five cent cigar in the city. Troxell Bros., agents.

Common Council. Last evening the common council met in special session. Present: Aldermen Lucy, Danforth, Keller, Hammer and Metcalf. In the absence of the mayor Alderman Keller was elected chairman pro tem. Mr. John Lindt was heard in relation to the paving of a certain portion of Fourth street with brick. He objected to it on these grounds: The work is to be done as an experiment to see whether brick paving is as satisfactory as block; one side is to be paved with brick, the other with wood, the wear would come upon the wood paving, as the teams would choose that side in preference to the other; that the wear and cost would come upon the property owners adjacent to the wood paving. He suggested that the test be made upon intersections.

He also protested against the assessment for sewerage on Fourth street, as the property owners on the west side were paying for sewerage in the alley immediately back of them, and had no connection with the street sewer pipe. Protest of Holst & Spetman against assessment for sewerage. Also protest of J. M. Phillips and several residents on Harrison street on the same matter. Filed.

Petition of Henry Boecraft for a remittance of taxes for improvements on his homestead. Referred.

Petition of property owners on Harrison street for the completion of paving and curbing on that street this fall. Referred.

Petition: That Stutoman street between Bloomer and Leeper streets be put in a condition for travel. Granted, and work ordered done immediately.

Petition: That driveway to boulevard be put up to grade within five days. Granted.

Resolution: That the Western Union Telegraph company remove their poles at the corner of Eighth and Broadway to some other place. Adopted.

Resolution: That Ninth avenue to the Union Pacific bridge be put up to grade and property owners remove obstacles. Adopted.

Resolution: That Vine street be curbed and paved and sidewalks laid, and that property owners be ordered to do work about on the property. Adopted.

Bids for grading lower Broadway were opened: Mr. Callahan, 33c and 35c; H. E. Owen, two bonds but no bid; Lee & Kline, from 33c to 55c; Wells & Rieley, from 35c to 53c. All referred to committee on streets and alleys and city engineer, with orders to report at next meeting. These bids cover different portions of Broadway from Twelfth to the river.
