Member of the Cloth Raises

$1,500 by Forgery. PREACHING NOT PRACTICING.

The Fall and Disgraceful Departure of Andy Borden-Abandonment of the Joslyn Hotel-Navigating the Niobrasa.

A Ministerial Forger. The directors of the First National bank of Central City, Nebraska, mourn the innocent and childlike confidence which their presi dent, F. M. Persinger, reposed in a sleek looking stranger, Tuesday, and who relieved the bank of $1,500 in currency. Mr. Persinger arrived in this city on the overland train yesterday in pursuit of the willy stranger and in a BEE reporter's ear poured forth the following tale of woe: "Last Sunday morning Mr. Baskweller, pastor of the Presbyterian church in our city, received a call from a fine looking man who presented the following letter of in oduc-

Madison, Neb., Oct. 29, 1887.—Dear Baskweller: This will introduce to you Brother D. B. Browns, a noted evangelist. and who proposes to stay for some length of time in your city. If you can secure him recognition he will, I am sure, be of great ser vice in the cause of Christ and any favors you can show him will be appreciated by yours truly. W.E. Kimball, Pastor Presbyterian church.

"Of course the stranger was invited to partake of Mr. Baskweller's hospitality, and that night filled the pulpit for him. Browns preached a magnificent sermon and impressed every one with his learning and knowledge of sacred history. After the sermon Browns was introduced to myself and family, and inwas introduced to myself and family, and incidentally remarked that he might have some business with our bank on the morrow. The next day he dropped into the bank and stayed about an hour. He was a man of most pleasing address, and my brother and self were quite charmed with him. During the conversation he said that he had just sold his property in Lebanon, Tenn., for $6,000, and had decided to make his home in Central City. He expected the draft every mail now, and would immediately upon receipt of it and would immediately upon receipt of it purchase a house in our city, and send for his family."

"At his request I took him to a real estate Tak his request 1 took him to a real estate man, and during the day Browns contracted to purchase a piece of property, the terms being $1,500 down and the balance on time. Tuesday afternoon he came into the bank with a New York draft issued by the First National bank of Lebanon, Tenn., for $6,000, and said that he wished to open an account with us. He would like to have $2,000 in currency, and have the balance placed to his credit. We talked the matter over for fully four hours, and finally agreed to let him have $1,500. This he accepted took the money and left, as I supposed to make the payment on his purchase of the day before. I then went home. Just as I had got seated to supper my brother rushed in and said: 'He has got us!' It seems my brother had become suspicious and had wired the Lebanon bank and received a reply that the draft was a forgery.

"I jumped up and rushed to the station and telegraph offices. I found that Browns had purchased a ticket from Central City to Col-umbus. I then wired Mr. Blakeslee, conductor on the Union Pacific at Omaha, giving a description of the man, and also to Chief Seavey, of the Omaha police force, asking for Browns' arrest. Mr. Blakeslee replied that the man had boarded his train at Columbus and had paid his fare to Council Bluffs, I was sure he would be arrested here, and came on as soon as possible, only to find that Scavey had not done a thing towards effect-ing the forger's capture. I am now going to Council Bluffs in hopes of finding him there, and if I do it will go hard with him." Mr. Persinger describes the man Browns as a tall, fine-looking man, dark complexion, mustache and high forehead. He wore a black suit of clothes and silk hat.

ANDY BORDEN. A Few Facts Relating to His Sudden

Disappearance. The BEE two weeks ago published a paragraph referring to the fact that Andy Borden. local passenger agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, had mysteriously disappeared, and none of his friends seemed to know anything of his whereabouts. He was last seen at the transfer in Council Bluffs one Sunday evening previous to the time above specified, and in company with an Englishman named Wolsey, who claimed to be a brother of Sir Garnet Wolsey of military fame. It was stated that this stranger had became fascinated with Bor-den and offered him the luxury of a trip abroad, the expenses of which need not trouble Borden. It is still held by many of the latter's friends that he accepted the invitation and has gone abroad. Wolsey bought his ticket to New York in the St. Paul office and also his steamship passage, both of which were sold him by Borden. Several other theories as regards the man's disappearance were advanced, but nearly all of them have been aban-doned, and the sentiment now enter-tained by nearly all of Borden's friends is that whether or not he has gone to Europe he will not likely re-appear in Omaha. Hi effects at his room in Karbach block have been taken possession of by some of his friends and a few of his claims have been satisfied. It is not known that he is in correspondence with any person here, and it is pretty generally be-lieved that he has not informed his wife of his act and certain that he has not joined her in New York. Borden was a member of all the prominent secret organizations of the city and in some of them held exalted posi-tions. On the day he left here, he sent $50 dollars to his wife. She was then as she is now in New York, endeavoring to secure a position on the stage. Borden's fin-ancial affairs were in a bad condition. He leaves an indebtedness of at least a thousand dollars, some of which was fraudulently obdolars, some of which was fraudulently obtained from banks and friends. This was done to satisfy the cravings of his wife, who, while possessed of a certain type of beauty, was cursed by a craving for notoriety and fine apparel entirely beyond the means of Mr. Horden to supply. When the woman went on the stage, the infatuation more strongly impelled her to make greater demands upon her husband's resources, mands upon her husband's resources, to keep her in fashionable attire. This demand at length drove Borden into the adoption of dishonorable methods, which have been discovered now that he has gone away. Since his departure his wife has writ away. Since his departure his wife has writ-ten here, sending by express $110, to get some diamonds out of pawn. It was found that the diamonds had been taken out, but the name of the party who redeemed them could not be learned. As a consequence, the money was returned to New York. Mrs. Borden's reputa-tion has not been improved by her connection with the stage and it is a moral certainty that she will not be over anxious to again be she will not be over anxious to again be

DON'T WANT A HOTEL. The Joslyn House will Never be Built. One year ago there was a good deal said in the papers and by citizens generally of the proposed Joslyn house which was to be erected on the corner of Tenth and Farnam streets. It was to be a marvel of excellence, rival in appearance the Palmer house of Chicago and in proof of this the beautiful plans drawn by Mendelssohn & Lawrie were dis-played in the windows. When the excava-tion was made the histelry seemed assured, but to-day all that may be seen of the hotel is that same unsightly excavation. A Brg re-porter yesterday met Mr. Joslyn, after whom the hotel was to be named, and asked him when the building would be erected. The reply

"It will not be built?"

We've put our money into real estate. We heard that the union depot was not going to be built-at least not on Tenth streetthat it was going to be moved farther west.

That stopped us. We did not want to build away from the depot, and because of the delay which has since taken pince in locating that structure, we did not want to have our money lie idle, so we have put it into some thing else. We were not incorporated. We had only formed a partnership. I wanted a days in Washington, Louisville and St. Louisville hotel then. I was going to manage it. But I don't want one now."

"What'll you do with that hole on the corner of Tenth and Farnam streets!"
"I don't know.

Under the present system, the paying the members of council by the year, it has been a difficult matter to get a quorum together. It has been suggested by some of the members that this method be changed and that of allowing members a certain amount for each meeting be substituted. The side tracks leading into the buildings of the Swift packing house are nearly com-pleted. It is stated that operations in this house will begin about November 20. It is also said that as soon as the structures now under way are fluished work on a hog house will be begun and pushed as rapidly as possible until completed. At present N street between Twenty-Sixth and the Exchange building has an elbow or jag of nearly half a block. A petition asking the council to change its course and make it a direct one is being circulated and is receiv ing numerous signatures. In all probability the prayer of the petitioners will be granted. Should it be so decided the railroad crossing near the old ticket office will be abandoned and a new one constructed.

THE COURTS.

What Was Done Before the Judges Yesterday. A suit was begun yesterday in the dis-

Johnson, to recover possession of a parcel of land in Capitol addition. The case of Michael O'Hern vs. the Union Pacific railway is on trial before Judge Wakeley. The claim is for $595 for injuries trict court by Elias M. Emery vs. Samuel R.

The First National bank brought action tion against Nellie McNamara and Dennis Cunningham to recover $1,400 with interest on promissory notes; also against E. E. and E. M. Finney to recover $300 and interest on a promissory note.

The case was given to the jury last evening and they will report their verdict this morn-

In the district court yesterday Josephine C. Flanigan stipulated that she was divorced from her husband, William Ma Flanigan, in the county court of Huron, state of Ohio, March 7, 1876, was granted temporary all-mony in the sum of 8500 and the costs of the court amounting to $81.85, which added to other alimony allowed at various times by the court amounts in all to $1,370.90. Since the divorce and alimony were awarded Flanigan has been a non-resident of Ohio, and has not met the requirements of the court. Therefore his late wife wants to reach him through the district court.

UNITED STATES. Judge Dundy and a jury were engaged hearing the case of George Snively, et al, interveners, vs. Manning, et al., which is an action brought for the purpose of trying the legality of certain attachments made by the defendants against the goods of Daniel B. A PREPOSTEROUS CLAIM.

That Is What President Yates Declares the Arraignment of National Banks. A special telegram to the BEE from Washngton states that a card has been published in which national bankers are charged with having maintained a conspiracy during the past five years for the contraction of circulation with a view to decreasing values and increasing discounts, and that the circulating medium has been reduced during that time from $400,000,000 to $167,000,000.

President Yates, of the Nebraska National bank, was shown the dispatch yesterday and asked for his opinion on the subject. He said: "Any such claim as this is preposterous, it is absurd and the author of it displays the most profound ignorance. Why, a child can easily see how foolish it is. For every $90,000 a national bank puts into circulation the gov ernment must be secured with $100,000 in United States bonds. Now, say these bonds cost $110,000, there is then $20,000 tied up and the rates of discount must be made to include this idle money. Therefore you can plainly see that the more money a bank issues the discount account must be increased in proportion. By contracting the circulation money is tied up, and we have more to loan at a smaller rate. Several other bankers were seen, and every one expressed himself precisely as did Mr.

THE SAND-BAR STREAM.

Lieutenant Kennon's Experience on the Wayward Niobrara. The BEE of a few days ago mentioned the return from his lonely trip along the Niobrara and Missouri of Lieutenant Kennon, aide-decamp to General Crook. He had been gone about fifteen days, a short time comparatively speaking, but sufficiently long to afford him experience enough as a voyageur to last him perhaps a lifetime.

The lieutenant left Fort Niebrara with

Captain Ray, judge advocate of this department, embarking in a light boat about twelve feet long with the intent of riding by water to this city. This was about the time the first cold days of the season were experienced. There was little water in the Niobrara and a great deal of sand bar. The boat became quite intimate with the latter after it had been but a short time on the journey, necessitating the voyageurs to jump out into the remnants of the stream and pull the skiff along until water could be found to the skiff along until water could be found to float it. During the first day between float-ing and rowing and pulling and pushing, the travelers made about eight miles. Consider-ing the nature of their work, they were pleased with the progress they had made and were confident that they would reach Omaha in time to make their New Year's calls. They registed to reat that expaning with calls. They retired to rest that evening with the hearty feeling that thes had earned their slumbers, though by no means grateful for the wetting their paddling in the stream had occasioned. The next day their experience was almost a duplicate of the first, slightly varied by meeting a mill-dam, which tested their appreciation of a portage, which necessitated a packing on their shoulders of their boats, provisions, clothing, tenting outfit, fireplace and kitchen stove until they were again able to reach the river below the dam. More exposure in the water together with the severe cold, prostheir slumbers, though by no means grateful water together with the severe cold, pros-trated Captain Ray, and for two days, in the untrodden solitude, on the banks of a fickleminded stream, they camped and the latter was at length enabled to return to Fort Nicbrara. Lieutenant Kennon, however, con-tinued on his journey. Rain succeeded the cold snap at night, and cold succeeded the cold snap at night, and cold succeeded the rain fall in the morning. But the navigator was kept comparatively warm lugging his boat and outfit to the intermittent spoons of water which dotted the channel. His method of progression with his over-water Nautilus was, after the manner of a carpet salesman using a yardstick and as a consequence, the lieutenant is stick, and as a consequence, the lieutenant is now able to tell the distance between this and Niobrara to the fraction of a foot. He toiled along in this way, day after day, until one morning when he awoke, his boat was about one hundred yards on the bank. The stream had taken a notion to play a joke on the gentleman, and left him and his boat high and dry while it scampered off to the other side to have a run in the sun. This unpleas-antness had to be overcome by pulling the boat to the water, but she had scarcely started out when she struck a snag, overturning her throwing everything, even her captain into the water, and then starting off herself like mad. She was overtaken, however, by the lieutenant after he had secured his provis sious and outfit on a sand bar, but imagine his surprise as he returned with the craft to re-load to see the quicksands of the stream had conceived a relish for his bacon, butter, coffee and biscuit and was devouring them with the relish of a famished Piute. Some mornings, the skiff would be frozen in the river and this necessitated cutting out, an exercise in which Lieutenant Kennou indulged ten times. At length be reached the Missouri, some parts of which he found cov ered with geese. He also discovered ducks some swans and a few pelicans. He passed the Ponca and Santee agencies, gallantly sa-luting some of the dusky Mononas who waved their cologne-scented kerchiefs as he glided by their ancestral acres. Later he found a couple of aborigines, held up with their boat by a sandbar, and to them the licutement tendered his hearty sympathy in their native tongue. While on the stream be made about sixty miles a day, forty of which he attributes to his own rowing, which has given him an arm as hard as iron. When he reached Sioux City he went to a hotel to re-ceive some letters and dispatches, and when he was escorted to his room the bell-boy bade him good night and admonished him very carefully to not blow out the gas, an admonition which the garb in which the lieutenant appeared at the time rendered highly neses-sary. The trip comprised about four hundurance, though Lieutenant Kennon seems to have survived it with much physical advantage and a great deal of information, one feature of which is that his recommendation will be to the effect that the Niobrara will not do as a stream to transport troops or provisions in any emergency. Railroad News. The Merchants' National bank on the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Farnam streets expects to be able to move to its new building on the corner immediately east by the first of next January. This move will bring to a close a residence in the old structure at present occupied of nearly fourteen years. The bank will be succeeded by the Missouri Pacific railway company which proposes to open a general ticket office with headquarters for its local passenger and freight representatives. The rental paid for the corner, a space of 22x60 feet is claimed to be $6,000 a year or $500 per month. The lease for the new occupants lease for the new occupants reads to the effect that they shall fellow in possession as soon as the place is vacated by the Merchants' National bank. A rumor upon the streets was to the effect that the corner had been secured by the Union Pacific road as a local ticker office, but it was known that the arrange

The railways leading from Chicago con ceded on the sixth of last month, the third class rate from that city to Omaha in what is technically known as cotton-piece goods, but for some reason at present obscured have no-tified merchants in this city of an advance which was to be made yesterday to the old figures, which places the goods in question in what is known as the first class. The freight bureau of the Omaha board of trade expected to appear before the railroads on this point at Chicago on Friday next, but have since been advised that arguments will be heard by the western classification com-mittee, which is composed of the general freight agents of the road interested. This commission will meet at St. Louis on the 9th of this month. It is understood that a strong delegation of the board of trade will accompany Commissioner Griffits to St. Louis when he goes to represent the tureau, and aid him in making a vigorous presentation of the case, in which all our dry goods men are so warmly interested.

MORTUARY MATTERS.

GRACE MCMANUS. This young lady, well known in the city, although only sojourning here, died yesterday morning at 4 o'clock at the Paxton hotel. She was a niece of the Messrs, Kitchen, and was educated at the Mount Auburn Sem-inary, Cincinnati. She came to this city at the close of the last session of school, when her health it was noticed was failing. She remained with her uncles for some time, and then spent several months in Denver, returning here some weeks ago. She has been confined to her bed for about six weeks. Clow's Start in Omaha.

John P. Clow, the boxer, who is training in Minneapolis for his contest with Frank Glover of Chicago, told a St. Paul Globe reporter that he has great confidence in the infallibility of newspapers to do the right and honorable thing. When there was a considerable bickering as to who should referee his match with Pete Nolan at Cincinnati, he effered to accept any sporting reporter of any reputable paper and agreed to abide by his decision. "I have posted thousands of dollars," he said last evening, "with reperters all over the country and I never lost a cent by them. There is no class of men whom I would trust so quickly class of men whom I would trust so quickly and implicitly. It was a newspaper man who put me in the business, or rather made a boxer out of me. I was at a picnic in Omaha when a big row started and I took a hand. They got me in a corner where I had to fight, and I laid out a dozen of 'em, I guess, by the time I got through: There was a sporting reporter present, and he came to me and asked if I had ever boxed. I said 'No,' and then he advised me to do so. More than that, he paid for a course of lessons for me out of his own pocket and used to personally couch me. I can honestly say that I owe my prosperity to him, for it was his advice and encouragement that taught me how to earn a living with my hands." living with my hands.

Of customers in our store every day tell the story of the business we are doing. We are determined to keep it up, and the more the public favor us with their patronage, the more will we show them that we appreciate their confidence, and will strive to retain it. Just now Overcoats are in great demand, and are going off like hot cakes. The styles and prices take. But as fast as the piles are disappearing from the counters they are replenished by new and choice arrivals, which our buyer is daily sending us from the east. We have new styles to show every day and the prices we mark them at must be very tempting, as the people buy them so quick. Evidently there must be a great difference between our prices and those of other houses.

Other departments that are booming are Gloves, Underwear and Ho siery. Our corner window this week gives you a small idea of what we are doing in the latter lines. BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocon. Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicated y flavoral beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of det that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. It undreds of subtil maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fath shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly hourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
