

DODGED OUT THE BACK DOOR.

How a Gay Book Agent Eluded an Indignant Husband.

A HASTINGS' WOMAN'S FALL.

Racy Scandal Developed at a Lincoln Boarding House—Various Items of Interest Picked Up About the Capital.

[FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.]

There was an animated scene at a boarding house in this city yesterday that has a racy history. At this particular boarding house a very loving couple applied for board a week ago and gave their names as Cherry Holmes and wife. Room and board were provided them. Aside from their demonstrations of affection nothing was suspected, Holmes giving it out that he was a book agent and that he resided at the boarding house for some time. All moved quietly along until the noon hour yesterday, when a stranger appeared at the door of the boarding house and inquired of the landlady with a vigor that denoted business on his part, if Cherry Holmes and a woman claiming to be his wife were there. He was informed that they were in the dining room, and without further waiting he pulled his overcoat and undersuit and pressed forward to the dining room. When he opened the door to the room the supposed Mrs. Holmes cried out, "My husband!" and Holmes shot out of the back door, with the landlady in close pursuit. The boarders followed out of doors to witness the race, which was for several blocks an animated one, but Holmes proved himself the best runner and escaped. The wronged husband then returned to the house, where the woman in the case had hid, and persuaded her to emerge from her concealment and talk with him. It seems that his name is Dodge, and that with his wife they have resided in Hastings, where the book agent fell in love with his wife and the two shipped. The woman expressed indifference for her husband, and a reconciliation did not appear to be at all probable. The husband seemed to be the most willing of the two for a reunion, but the wife expressed her satisfaction with her new chosen consort. At last accounts Dodge was after the police to put the landlady in their hands, if Holmes, if he kept up the game he was making when last seen, was out of the state by the time the warrant was issued.

At Peace.

A stomach in revolt is an obdurate rebel. Corrected with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, its insubordination to the food introduced into it in unwary moments of appetite ceases. Then it is at peace. Then dyspepsia abandons its grip. Then such fractious manifestations as heartburn, a sinking sensation in the pit of the abdomen, belching, belching and unattractiveness afterwards, flatulence, acid gulping, biliousness, &c., cease to inflict martyrdom. After a course of the national tonic and alterative, the liver and bowels, always more or less disordered during a prolonged attack of indigestion, resume their functions and become regular. Thus not only dyspepsia, but its concomitants, constipation and biliousness, are conquered by the medicine, which remedies their fruitful cause, weakness of the organs of digestion. The epigastric nerve, cellular tissue, in short, every organ that bears a part in the digestive processes acquires vigor and regularity from the benign invigorant.

Robber Routed by a Girl.

New York Telegram: It was a giddy, gushing girl from New York, with an amplitude of bang and a scarceness of vocabulary which showed at once her romantic tendencies. She was traveling in a stage coach in one of the sparsely settled regions of the country. "Oh!" she said to her mother, "I do wonder whether we are going to make this whole trip without even the sign of an adventure. Wouldn't it be horrid?" Her mother informed her that she didn't have much common sense, but the girl didn't seem to mind it in the least. In the course of the next hour, however, the coach stopped suddenly and the muzzle of a pistol was shoved through the door.

"Sorry to trouble you, ladies," said the man whose head followed the pistol, "but if you've got any valuables, there's what we want, and we're a little pressed for time."

"Oh! mamma, at last we have found a real highwayman," said the girl with a delighted little shriek. "You're a real live robber, aren't you?"

"Well, I reckon that's what I'm called."

"And you tell people to hold up their hands, and say: 'Your money or your life to them, don't you?' But I ain't got no time for talk. I'll have to ask—" pistol and was beginning to look apprehensive.

"Do you have to go away and rob somebody?" she inquired naively. "I hope you will not run away, because I am just beginning to get acquainted with you. I always said I would hug the first real robber?"

But the stage door slammed shut and the highwayman had fled.

The Sultan at Prayer.

The sultan stands erect with his face to the east and his feet on his praying carpet, and placing the thumbs of each hand under each ear, he spreads his hands like wings, lifting his ears upwards as if to catch any sound from heaven, and with his hands in this position must turn first to the right and spit, then to the left and then dropping his hands to his side hold them rigid while he bends his knee and then his whole body forward from his knees until his forehead touches the floor three times. He repeats his prayer in this position, and gets upon his feet again without touching his hands to the floor, and again makes wings of his ears and again spits right and left and his prayer is over. Every Turk believes that he has two attendant spirits, one good and one evil, and as he is not sure which side the emissary of satan has pre-empted he spits at both to make sure.

Magnetism and Morphology.

Some experiments have been placed on record, says the London Electrician, in which a number of eggs were hatched out in a magnetic field, with the result that the chickens were all more or less deformed; blind, deaf or lame. A biologist at Manchester, in course of conversation, told us that he had several times tried to repeat the experiment, but with the result that the eggs were always adled. Without professing to expound the physiological or morphological reasons for these singular results, it is at least permissible to suppose that the movements of the protoplasmic substance in the magnetic field set up currents in a magnetic field, which tend to decompose the delicate organic structures of the egg so as to destroy or vitiate its vitality.
