Co-Education and Marriage.

Philadelphia Press: "Hotbeds of flirtation" expresses a very usual opin-ion of co-educational schools. As a matter of fact it is curious to note the wide difference in the relation of the sexes that exist in different institutions. There may or may not be schools where the students flirt; there certainly are many as 40 per cent of a certain class paired off to take life's journey together after passing the preliminary barriers of deferential and integral calculus in company, and these mar-riages are said to have turned out well. The mingled rivalry and good-fellowship of the class-room seemed to give good opportunity for that full and fair acquaintance which ought to precede matrimony, better opportunities probably than are offered by the more guarded intercourse wich society sanctions. Young men and young women students become good comrades and they stay good comrades, understand-ing one another thoroughly after they have settled down to life's business together. Such cases as these are not, however, typical. A great majority of the co-educational colleges are more after the pattern of Boston university, where, as one might expect, perhaps, from the non-marrying reputation of the Hub, no attachment, no especially intimate intercourse, not the faintest suspicion of a flirtation between students of the opposite sexes has been known since the foundation of the The after-fortune of every student is accurately known through the full records kept by the graduating classes; and a year or two ago the only marriage that had, within the annuls of the college, taken place between exstudents was that of a daughter of the late Bishop Gilbert Haven, whose acquaintance with the man who became her husband was formed after her successful graduation.

KELLEY, STIGER & CO. Have to offer this coming week some decided bargains in their cloak department. We shall place on sale Monday morning an elegant English seal plush sacque, with light beaver fur collar, and fur down the front; price $50.00. This garment is on sale at other places for $60,00. Our sales on plush sacques have been beyond our expectations and we feel confident from the patronage given us that we offer the best value in plush sacques to be in Omaha at $25.00, $35.00 and $50.00. In short wraps we have made some decided reductions in order to reduce the stock and will offer a wrap at $13.00 worth $18.00. A wrap at $18.00, cheap at $22.50. A wrap at $20.00; other houses are asking $27.50 for this garment. $32.00 buys a wrap in our cloak department this coming week that others are selling at $37.50. $42.00 is our price for a wrap that would be counted a bargain at $47.50. $50.00 is our price for a wrap soid elsewhere at $55.00. Coon, a young republican leader and lawyer, and there have never been so many disappointed and blue young men in this part of the state as to-night. In every town in which Nellie spoke and canvassed during her recent campaign she made scores of admirers. Some of them became very devoted as the canvass progressed, and worked like beavers for her at the polls all day on Tuesday. Mr. Coon, although a strong Fred Grant man and republican, was the very first to offer his services to Miss Cook. and they having been accepted, he threw himself heart and soul into her canvass. He gave up his law practice for nearly a month, and worked day and night for the fair young candidate. He was her confidential adviser, and there's no knowing how many nights he spent in riding over lonely county roads in her interest. While there are several hundred disappointed young democrats and some republicans throughout the country because of Miss Nellie's determination to wed, there is none to dispute Mr. Cook's claim to recognition and favor, and everyone here is offering con-gratelations. is not yet announced.

One day, at breakfast, Archbishop Whately told a remarkable story of a woman who married, when young, a soldier, and was wrecked with him on the coast of India. All the crew and passengers were supposed to have been lost. except this one woman and an officer, who saved her. She was very beautiful, and he educated and married her. In time she became a widow, and re-turned to England. He had left her all his money and she was well received by her relations, being still very charming. One day her maid told her she was go-ing to be married to a discharged soldier. The mistress approved, and asked schools where it is not at all unusual to see him. When he was introduced, for them to fall in love, contract engagements, and in due time get mar-ried. One instance is given where as shawl. "Do you know that shawl?" she "Yes," he replied, "I gave it asked. to my wife when we were married. am your wife!" she exclaimed. She took him back, and he drank away all his senses and her fortune, and finally died, after making her life miserable.

Curiosities of Courtship.

Chicago Tribune: A California miner, having amassed quite a fortune, was re-turning by ship to New York to revisit old friends and to find himself a wife. A young woman on board the ship, serving in the capacity of nursery governess to the family of a merchant on board. pleased him much by her neat and modest appearance. He therefore introduced himself one day, and broke the ice of his purpose with one reckless plunge: "Madam, my name is ---, my parents and family reside in New Hampshire; I have property amounting to $200,000, and expect to engage in business in --.. I am a perfectly tem-perate man, and I can give you good reference to testify to my general upright character. I am unmarried, and want a wife; will you marry me?" The lady took in the character of her suitor at once. "Thank you," said she, "I will," and on landing they were forthwith married. How the Princess Louise of Savoy ever recovered from her humiliation after having offered herself in marriage to Charles, Duke of Bourbon, only to receive a grave but positive refusal, few women can understand. Ladies, however, are permitted to assist a bashful wooer when Either he fears his fate too much Or his descrittoo small, Who fears to put it to the touch

And win or lose it all. Such was the case with the young lady who assured her lover that she could make a beautiful cake, all filled with

More shrewd still was the young lady and more daring-who told her ad mirer that she was a mind reader, and could read what was going on in his mind at that moment; that he wanted o propose to her, but did not know how to do it, which, of course, relieved the young man from his embarrassment per

He Thought She Proposed to Him.

New York Sun; There is a great deal of fun in every nook and corner of Cornell university, New York, just now over an incident which occurred here this week. At the beginning of every term an alphabetical list of students i issued by the registrar, giving the residence of each person enrolled in the university. Occasionally a mistake is found in the list. Several days ago one of the Sage college ladies, of prepossessng appearance, in looking over proofs of this year's list of students, detected a slight error in her name, and hastened to the registrar's office to correct it.

"Are you engaged just now?" was the first question asked the registrar, who was in blissful ignorance of the lady's mission, and whose mind evidently was wandering in matrimonial channels. 'No, indeed," replied the gallant official with some little emphasis, his face at the same time becoming the very embodiment of great expectations and easant anticipations of the approaching leap year. Well, then, I should like to change my name," said the fair visitor, with a bewitching smile on her face. "Oh, you would!" gasped the young man, his countenance radient beyond all expression. And then the young lady undertook to explain matters more in detail, much to the great discomfiture and mortification of the assistant, whose hopes biossomed, bloomed, and were blasted in the short space of a minute. An Aged Bridal Couple.

San Francisco Chronicle: Mrs. A. C. Freed, a wealthy relict of Dr. Freed of Kansas City, aged sixty years, and an octogenarian named Hector McLean, engaged in the real estate business, eloped a few days ago and were mar-ried in Los Angeles. The woman is worth about $100,000 and McLean has nothing. The widow married him under the belief that he was wealthy. He gave as a bridal present a $40,000 check, signed by himself, which, it is needless to say, is worthless. The couple returned to-day and will go to housekeeping in the palatial home of the wife.

Marriages With Japanese Women.

Philadeluhia Record: "The marriage of an American or an Englishman to a Japanese woman is not so rare an occurrence as the critics who have been writing about E. H. House's novelette seem to think," said a diplomat who spent years in Japan. "A number of such marriages have occurred in the past ten or fifteen years. I may instance as conspicuous examples that of one of the secretaries of the American legation to a Japanese girl of noble blood, and still more striking, perhaps, the marriage of the sister of

A Halo of Romance.

New York Star: There is a halo of omance over the marriage of the niece of the late President Arthur, Miss Ellen Botts, of Savannah, to Mr. J. H. Blaikie. The excitement of the earthquake injured her eyes so much that an oculist declared there was a certainty of her losing her sight. She immediately sent word to Mr. Blaikie, who was in Scotland, releasing him from the engagement. He refused to accept it. and came here by the next steamer to urge an immediale marriage. This ex pression of his fidelity produced a ner-vous reaction in Miss Botts system which ended in the restoration of her eyesight. The young couple go to Scotland next month.

The Marriage Fee.
Concord (N. H.) Monitor: "What do you ask for marrying a couple?" asked Manchester business man of a wellknown clergyman of that city the other day. "I leave that to the gentleman," replied the divine. "It is $5, $10 and sometimes more when the groom feels especially generous." "I'll give you $3 and that sall I can afford," was the merchants final offer, to which the clergyman said: "All right," and the time for the ceremony was fixed. At the appointed hour the man presented his intended at the parsonage, but before the trying ceremony was begun as tonished the minister by saying: My woman here is pretty sharp at a bargain, and she thinks $2.50 is enough for this

DID A CURSE REST UPON HIM?

The Strange Tricks Nature Played at the Home of Jas. O. Stevenson.

A FAMILY OF CURIOUS FREAKS.

A Three-Legged Lamb, a One-Eared Colt, a Three-Horned Calf, and a One-Legged Boy-A Supply for a Dime Museum.

"The old adage that "lightning never strikes twice in the same place" is at last disproven, providing the story of a farm laborer named George Evans, who for the past week has been staying at the St. James hotel in this city, is true. Evans bears the reputation of honesty, and while his tale is a strange one, there is no reason to doubt its possibility. His story is as follows: Evans stated last night to a BEE re-uorter that for the past three years he has been employed by Mr. James Q. Stevenson, a well-to-do farmer living in Iowa, about seventeen miles south of Council Bluffs. During that time nature has dealt unkindly with his former employer, and the rules of generation have been most culpably disobeyed inasmuch as no less than four freaks and possible candidates for dime museum fame, have first drawn breath on his farm. During the spring of 1885 a lamb was born having only three legs. It was a healthy animal and straightway became a great favorite with Mr. Stevenson's children and was given the ex-aulted position of the family pet by unanimous consent. The animal, now a full grown sheep, hobbles around on hi two front and one hind leg in a state of perpetual enjoyment. Even his wool, up to the present time, has been consacred and he will not be sheared until he is three years of age.

During the following summer a grey mare was delivered of a foal, well formed with the exception that nature had forgotten to supply her with but one ear. The hide one the right side of the head was as smootly drawn as on the body and there was no hole to even mark the spot where that ear should be. While this coincidence was the subject of considerable remark in the neighborhood, nothing particular evolved from it except the giving of a nick-name to Mr. Stevenson, who to this day is known by the sobrioquet of "one Limbed Steve. But the superstitiously inclined, in the neighborhood found renewed cause, during the following fall, for announcing their belief that a curse rested upon the house of Stevenson. This new fire brand which caused the idiotic wisdom of believers in things supernatural, to loudly explode and added many new converts to their ranks, was the birth of a calf during the spring of the present year which shortly after developed into a freak of the first magnitude by the disoevery that it had three distinct horns. The third horn was exactly in the middle of the new impetus was given to scandalmongers eight weeks ago, to continue them in their previous opinions and openly expressed belief in the interference of supernatural powers to cause their neighbor humiliation and suffer-This event was nothing more nor less than the birth of a male infant having but one leg. The child lived but a few hours and was buried on the farm. The tongues of the gossips wagged furiously, and it was even intimated that Mr. Stevenson was receiving punshment at the hands of God for crimes committed in the past. Finally one old tea table gossip felt herself called upon to inform "Sister Stevenson" that a curse rested upon the home of her husband, and so worked upon the fears of the lady, who was in most delicate state of health, as to

Notwithstanding the near approach of winter, when deals in realty and building operations are supposed to cease for a while, the business in Omaha continues steady and the cold weather makes perceptible difference so far as dickering in dirt is concerned. Of course, it is to be expected that there would be little or no building done, and yet permits were issued last week aggregating over $50,000. Architects and contractors all express the opinion that the building operations during forehead and grew just below the eyes. | the year 1888 will far exceed those of 1887. After a time the gossip subsided, but a The great trouble this year has been the scarcity of competent workmen. Excellent wages have been paid and there has been no application from good men to obtain work refused. Skilled mechanics have been in great demand, and there has been an abundance of work for the common laborer. It is estimated that builders are at least $800,000 behind their contrats, and work will be re-sumed at the earliest possible day next spring. Are now held by the Life Insurance Companies of the United States as banking or investment portion of premiums paid by the policy holders of these institutions. A large part of which sum, says Commissioner Tarbox, of Massachusetts, in report for 1884. "has no just relations to life insurance," and further says, "if insurance and investment are the object, each can better be got in its separate place than by a combination which impoverishes the investment and does not IMPROVE or CHEAPEN the insurance.

THE PROVIDENT SAVINGS LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF NEW YORK. SHEPARD HOMANS, President.

(Eighteen Years Actuary of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of New York.)

Is the only regularly incorporated company in the United States that does a strictly life insurance business unmixed with investment features; it is thus enabled and does furnish life insurance at more than 50 per cent less than it competitors. The security is unequalled, no company in the world showing as large ratio of assets to liabilities. The company is endorsed by the leading actuaries in the country, and its popularity is attested by the fact that only four of its competitors wrote as large a business in 1886, three of these do not confine their business to the United States For further particulars call on or address,
