

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS. OFFICE NO. 12 PEARL STREET. Delivered by carrier in any part of the city at twenty cents per week.

MINOR MENTION. N. Y. Plumbing Co. Reiter, tailor. Fall goods cheap. See Chapman's pictures for Christmas.

The chorus choir at St. Paul's will be entertained to-day by the Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Mackey.

The Congregational church choir sings at the union Thanksgiving services at the Broadway M. E. church this morning.

H. Eisenman & Co. sent out nearly a ton of advertising matter yesterday that made the outgoing mails the heaviest of the year.

The street car track on lower Broadway, between the bridge and Sixteenth street, is being raised to conform with the new grade.

Active work will be begun upon the opera, "Under the Palms," to-day. The children who are to take part are requested to meet at St. Paul's church this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Jennie, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Garzen, died Tuesday afternoon after a short illness. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence on Fourteenth street between First avenue and Broadway.

George Blaxinn, 807 Main street, comes to the readers of the BEE this morning with an advertisement of his business. He guarantees good material and the best workmanship in his goods, which is a sufficient recommendation to command trade.

The paving of Glen avenue will be completed to-day. This will close up this part of the improvement work in the city for the season. The blocks, sand and atmosphere are so cold that as soon as the melted tar touches the ground it is congealed instead of passing into the gravel and forming a solid bed. The best results are desired in this work and to secure them warmer weather must be had.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to Theodore Larson, aged twenty-four, and Anna Peterson, aged twenty-one, and to Frederick M. Wheeler, aged twenty, and Mary E. Harmon, aged fifteen. Wheeler is the popcorn monopolist at the corner of Broadway and Main streets. He was so tickled at his approaching nuptials that he "treated" the clerical force at the county clerk's office to three sacks of popcorn, salted on both sides.

For an elegant birthday gift for Christmas present, a Domestic sewing machine leads them all.

A Narrow Escape. Charles Smith had a little circus all by himself yesterday morning. He was engaged in drawing away the surplus dirt from around the Pacific Mutual telegraph poles, and backed a load up to the bank of Indian creek by the side of E. H. Waterman's new building. When he arrived at the edge he forgot to stop, and wagon, horses, and all went down twenty feet into the creek. Aside from breaking a few straws and the coupling pole of the wagon, there was no damage done. Judging from Smith's personal appearance, he must have landed upon his nose. He was lucky to escape so easily.

GIFTS TO OUR TRADE! Until January 1st we offer the public the very best values in every department of our immense stock. We offer no catch-penny gifts to work off worthless goods, but we do put our gifts into our goods. The best values and the lowest prices at Harkness Bros., 401 Broadway.

Isn't It Lovely. All aesthetic enthusiasts should visit the new patrol house on Bryant street. The acme of high art is shown in the decoration of the doors. Such perfect blending of colors was never seen before except on a barber pole. Red, blue, yellow, green and drab, are all present, but no one can tell which predominates. It would make an angel weep, but as the average citizen of Council Bluffs is possessed of small angel propensities, he walks by on the other side and ventilates his knowledge of "plug-ugly" English.

J. W. and E. L. Squire lend money. District Court. The attention of the district court was occupied yesterday by the case of George S. Damon vs Samuel Weston, for specific performance. The trouble is over some land that was sold during the "boom," and the plaintiff sues for damages. The case was submitted to the jury at 4:30 o'clock. The rest of the afternoon was spent in making an assignment of cases for Monday. The jurymen have been discharged until Monday, and there will be no business of importance during the remainder of the week.

For Sale Cheap—Lots near the bridge to parties who will build at once. Address or call on J. R. Rice, No. 110 Main street, Council Bluffs.

The Musketeers. The comic opera, "The Musketeers," was presented last evening at Dohany's opera house by home talent and was a decided success. There was a large audience in attendance and the liberal amount of applause bestowed was evidence that the entertainment was thoroughly appreciated.

The Ball Opened. The first of the gambling cases was called in Justice Barnett's court Tuesday morning. The parties were not ready to proceed, and a continuance for thirty days was granted. This was expected. It outlines the policy that has been settled upon by these persons. They will stave off a hearing as long as is possible. They are probably hatching up some line of defense. What it will be is a conundrum.

For best quality coal and wood, call on Gleason, 26 Pearl street.

Police Court. J. H. Duncan and Ira Merriam were each fined $7.50, and Thaddeus Stanley $8.10, for an unsuccessful encounter with "tanglefoot."

W. Holder was charged with forging a check on B. K. Berry, which he had cashed by Jim Wilson. Holder is a newsagent, and Berry is a popular conductor on the "Q." The evidence is not ready and Holder is killing time at the city jail. He will postpone his Thanksgiving until next year.

Money to loan. Cooper & Judson.

WORKINGS OF WATER WORKS. A Trip Over the City to View Its Operations.

OF INTEREST TO BLUFFITES. A Spicy Letter From California—The Tale of a Rattlesnake—Police Court Doings—Minor Mention and Personals.

Pure Water. Through the courtesy of Manager Birkinbine a representative of the BEE was taken over the city and shown the workings of the waterworks system, and inasmuch as the facts exhibited are of interest to the general public they are herein given.

When the waterworks company took the contract to furnish this city with an adequate supply of pure water from the Missouri river the public thought the thing could not be done. It was not supposed possible to take the water of the "Big Muddy" and cleanse it so as to make it fit for use. A scheme was first devised to purify this water. No artificial means could be employed which would do the work and it was decided to do it by natural means, i. e. precipitation and evaporation. The law that water will purify itself by flowing a certain distance was fully and admirably demonstrated.

The place at which the water was to be taken from the river was located about a mile above the pumping works. A conduit, or ditch, was dug connecting these two points. This is large enough to carry the full supply, even should the consumption be much greater than it now is. At the head of the conduit stands the conduit engine, the pumping capacity of which is 15,000 gallons per minute. The suction pipe extends into the channel of the river and only "live water" is taken up by the engine. On account of the treacherous banks, which are liable to slough off at any place and without warning, it was impossible to put a permanent building here, and the house which covers this portion of the works is of the most temporary character. It is of wood, constructed in sections, and huddled together so that, should the necessity occur, the whole thing can be taken down in a very short time and placed at some other point. A lake of considerable size is being formed near the pumping works. Here the water received from the conduit comes to a stand still and precipitation is very rapid. From here the surface water passes into a flume, from which it is taken to the large reservoirs located south of the works. These contain 6,000,000 gallons each. From here the motor is pumped through mains into the immense supply reservoir in Prospect park, with a capacity of 4,000,000 gallons, and from there it is distributed to consumers all over the city. It will be observed that at the lake, the well, and the settling reservoirs the surface water only is taken. Thus the sediment is left behind and when necessary it can be taken away. By this method of purification the consumer gets pure water.

From a personal inspection of many of the cities situated on the large rivers of the west, as well as the east, the writer is safe in saying that no better water is had anywhere, except it be taken from the potsham sandstone by artesian wells; and in the matter of purity the comparison is favorable to the water we have.

The "works" contain three engines and four boilers, which have a capacity of 7,000,000 gallons per day. As the present consumption is only 1,700,000 gallons it will be seen that all the reasonable possibilities of the future as to the growth of the city, etc., are amply covered. About twenty-five miles of pipe are now laid, over one mile having been put down during the past year. Two hundred and one hydrants are distributed throughout the city, and the best and most complete fire protection is secured. Every pipe has been tested to the bursting point, with a pressure, which is more than a double the amount required to do the work they have yet had to do. At a recent test a hydrant on Park avenue, the register showed a pressure of 135 pounds, which is equivalent to an extra pressure of 200. This demonstrates the sufficiency of the system, for every house within the city limits can be reached, with pressure for its full protection.

Now the reader may ask, "For all this are not the waterworks company receiving ample pay?" In the matter of rates, yes. The people are paying all they can afford and enough to get the best service; but the company have not, as yet, received a cent in dividends. The establishment of such a system looks to the future, but it will be some time yet before this company receive even the average per cent, realized from other investments of a private character involving the amount of capital here invested.

Mr. Howarth invites his friends to call and see him.

A Spicy Letter From California. The following extracts from a letter to friends in this city, from one of the many credulous invalids who have sought relief and a renewal of former health in the much extolled atmosphere of California, although not originally designed for publication, will furnish a few facts to the readers of the BEE that may be of interest and future use:

"Dear L— I am getting rested and a little used to dust and climate, but it nearly got me down at first. I will not get the good I wished from the climate, for I despise all I've seen west of Kansas. Nothing but glaring sun and sandheaps, with flies as numerous as the grains of sand, by day, and cold and "sketeers" by night. Uncle Joe and others used to say, 'Can't take cold in California. Lie on the ground anywhere.' You can lie, not on the ground, but on sand, and the other part is one of the worst lies ever told. I know, myself, and have been told repeatedly by Californians, that one takes cold easier here, and it lasts longer, than anywhere else.

We got here when what they term a "norther," had just set in. The wind comes through the pass in the mountains, north, comes over the desert, and the air is full of sand, as you ever saw it, of snow. A man can't drive facing these "northers." They last about three days. The air becomes hot, and everything burning up. We have seen several men die in three weeks that we have been here.

There is no place on earth that is landed like California. It is done principally by real estate agents. This place has one dry goods store, two groceries, one bakery, and forty real estate agents. They meet you at the train, most large-hearted fellows—"We don't wait for introductions in California"—take you riding, and show you their list. If you say, "No money," they say, "Good day."

The only good that can come to anybody here, is the constant outdoor life that he can lead in a dry atmosphere. But it is bilious here, and in the summer the days are exceedingly hot, and the nights are very cool. I wish I had a little health in such extremes in twenty-four hours. I am going to Los Angeles in the morning, to get something for my throat. I am nearly choked all the time.

It is barely possible that a few years in this climate might do you good, but I will not influence you to come. It was well I would not stay here twelve hours longer. Perhaps I have given you the dark side. I wish it had been given me, then I would not have been so disappointed. I think that if you can settle in Kansas or Iowa, you had better do so. But if you want to see this country, now is a good opportunity. We pay $12 per month for a room and $9 per week for board.

It seems to me that there is more sickness here than in any place of its size in Indiana. Not simply invalids who have come here, but the stout and apparently able-bodied. Some of our friends left pleasant homes in the east, and are living here without comforts and wishing for the homes they have left, yet possessing here an abundance of climate, for they have forty steps of stairs between earth and home, and have to "climb it" for daily food. Write soon. L."

There is certainly food for reflection in the above letter, and parties who intend to dispose of their stock of this world's goods in this part of the moral vineyard, and seek that priceless boon, health, in that "wonderful Eden" on the Pacific coast, will do well to pursue their investigations a little farther before making a change. There are many sections of the country that are now being "boomed" for all they are worth, and nearly every net thus spread catches its full share of "suckers." It is but a few days since a covered wagon drawn by a horse and team, passed through the city in an easterly direction. A few months ago the same wagon, drawn by four fine mules, passed along the same road in the opposite direction. On the outward trip the promised land was in anticipation, and the return trip the city in an easterly direction. A few months ago the same wagon, drawn by four fine mules, passed along the same road in the opposite direction. On the outward trip the promised land was in anticipation, and the return trip the city in an easterly direction.

On general principles, the real estate man is doubtless a truthful and honorable personage, but when it comes to him to take a tract of land which he has the agency, his veracity may be compared to that of a deacon in a horse trade. But the truth must be known sooner or later, and Iowa in general, and Council Bluffs in particular, plainly shows, from the time they are born, that they wish to enjoy every advantage, natural and artificial, they should remain where they are and "let well enough alone."

Be Thankful. This day has been set apart officially as a day of thanksgiving and praise. This does not mean that we shall be thankful officially or that we shall render our praise through our officials. It does mean, incidentally of course, that the average business man would forget that he had anything to be thankful for and would lose his voice for "praise" entirely if a day were not set apart as a reminder. Men are rather peculiar. A horse gets along the year round bearing its burdens day after day; eating its meals, when its fortunate enough to get any; sleeping when its day's work is done; and taking little interest in the matters that otherwise pertain to it. It recognizes no responsibility; obeys no master but its appetite and the whip and finally lies down to die. Again man is peculiar. He isn't a horse, and yet his life is somewhat after the same order. It is safe to assume that many people will cause the necessity that forces them to lay aside the business of the day. A horse gladly welcomes a playday. No, a man isn't a horse. Other men never consider the serious side of life and recognize the fact of responsibility to any power higher than their stomachs. A monkey does the same. But man is neither a horse nor a monkey and yet, what a similarity.

Have you anything to be thankful for? Look over the past year and see that. Have you prospered in business? Be thankful. Have you been blessed with health? Be thankful. Have your family and yourself been sick, and are you burdened with the bills of the doctor and the lawyer? Be thankful that you are not dead. Find something to be thankful for, and be thankful as you can. It may be a change from your usual methods, but it will be a healthy one.
