Thermometers in various parts of the city registered 15 deg. below zero yesterday morning at 7 and 8 o'clock. People were not anxious to face the bracing air, which resulted in a light attendance at most of the churches.

The stores of the city never presented finer lines of goods for the holiday season than they do now. The finest specimens of art, domestic and foreign, are here and some of the business men are preparing spectacles which will be surprises to the public. Watch the BEE for announcements.

Travel was but little impeded by Saturday's storm. During the early morning hours yesterday the street car lines were bothered somewhat and regular runs could not be made, but after 10 o'clock no difficulty was experienced, except at points where the snow would persist in drifting. The shovel brigade worked during the entire day, and everything is in good shape for to-day's travel.

Rev. T. O. Douglass, of Grinnell, occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church yesterday morning. He made an earnest and effectual appeal in behalf of the state mission work. A goodly collection was taken for the benefit of the churches in Iowa, which are not yet self-supporting. These feeble societies often grow into the strongest churches of the state. Two churches at least, and probably more, in this city, owe their start to mission funds.

The Military Band.

To-morrow evening the military band concert and ball will take place in the Masonic temple hall. Prof. Dalby is a composer of whom Council Bluffs may well be proud, as his music is played by the leading bands all over the country. The band, which bears his name, is a creditable organization for any city to possess, and the public should give generous support to all its enterprises. An enjoyable evening is assured to all who attend. The concert will be from 8 o'clock to 9 o'clock, and the ball to follow. Those who cannot attend should invest in tickets, which can be secured at Moore & Kiplinger's. The band has, through no fault of its own, become burdened with a heavy debt, and the proceeds of the entertainments given by the band this season will be applied in paying off these claims. When once fairly upon their feet, financially, the band will not need to appeal any further for public encouragement and support, as it possesses merit enough to secure engagements sufficient to meet all current expenses.

David's Greatness.

At the Baptist church last evening Dr. Cooley delivered a discourse upon the character of David, selecting as a text: "The Lord hath sought him, a man after his own heart." The sermon was intensely practical, and was attentively listened to by a large audience. Said the speaker: "If we judge of the greatness of men by the space which they occupy in history, David would be placed next to Moses as the greatest human character of God's people. David's life occupies sixty-one chapters of the sacred word, while that of Abraham is contained in fourteen. There is no human character upon which the divine historian delights to linger more than upon that of him who combined in himself the offices of prophet, king and sweet singer of Israel. His career from boyhood to death is traced with loving minuteness. If we should judge men also by the influence which they have exerted upon the world, we should accord David a foremost place among the great actors of human history. He not only founded a monarchy which survived as long as his nation existed, but he also impressed himself on surrounding nations as the greatest warrior and ruler of his age. But this was not all. He instituted, in its perfected form, the religion of his country. He also, as the poet of his people, composed those songs which have become the comfort and heritage of the world. The psalter of David was not only used by his own countrymen, but was, at the very beginning of christianity, adopted into the services of the church. In the first centuries Psalms were sung at the love feasts and formed the morning and evening hymns of the primitive christians. Of the other scriptures, in the fifth century, the generality of men knew next to nothing, but the Psalms were again and again repeated in private houses, in market places, in streets, by those who had learned them by heart, and who soothed themselves by their divine melody. 'When other parts of scripture are used,' says Ambrose, 'there is such a noise of talking in the church, that you cannot hear what is said; but when the psalter is read, all are silent.' Among all branches of the church, Protestant, Catholic and Greek, the psalms form an important part of their public worship. By these spiritual hymns men have often expressed the deepest and holiest emotions of their lives. By them Augustine was consoled on his death bed. Chrysostom, Athenasius, Savonorola were cheered in persecution. With the words of a psalm Polycarp, Columba, Hildebrand, Bernard, Huss, Jerome of Prague, Columbus, Henry V., Edward VI., Xavier, Melanethon and Jewell breathed their last. Even the Savior, in his death struggles, breathed out his prayer to the Father in the words of a psalm. The sixty-eighth psalm cheered Cromwell's soldiers to victory at Dunbar, Lord Burleigh selected the psalms out of the whole bible as his special delight. They were the framework of the devotions and war cries of Luther. No hymns have so affected the world as his. He speaks, and the pent up feelings of millions of christian hearts find expression and a voice. No mere human being, save Paul and Moses, has left so deep a mark on this world's history. Seeing then that so large a portion of the divine word is occupied with the life and deeds of him who was the great progenitor of the Savior of the world, it becomes us to study his character. The space devoted to him by the bible history commands our attention."

The speaker began with the first appearance of David in history as a shepherd boy in the fields of Bethlehem, when Samuel came to select a successor to Saul as king of Israel. He was by his father, Jesse, intrusted with work usually done by his slaves, and was considered of so little importance that he was not invited to the feast of his family. "He was chosen king of Israel, the appointed prophet of God and the father of the promised Messiah." David was described as short of stature, stoutly yet gracefully built, with auburn hair and a bright eye. While he was in hiding from his enemy Saul he developed his love for music and song. He was so proficient in handling the harp and lute that his fame spread throughout the nation. Here he developed his love of nature which he so often expressed in his psalms. "All the sublime imagery of his psalms were taken from the scenes of his youth when he was a shepherd boy.

"Latest born of Jesse's race,
Wonder lights thy bashful face,
While the prophet's gifted oil
Seals thee for a path of toil.
Go and mind thy flock awhile;
At thy doom of greatness smile,
Bold to bear God's heaviest load,
Dimly guessing at the road—
Rocky road and scarce ascended,
Though thy foot be angel-tended.
Double praise thou shalt attain
In royal court and battle plain.
Then comes heartache, care, distress,
Blighted hopes and loneliness.
Frowns from friend and gifts from foe,
Dizzied faith and guilt and woe,
Loftiest aims by earth defiled,
Gleams of wisdom, sin-beguiled,
Sated power's tyrannic mood,
Counsels shared by men of blood,
Sad success, parental tears,
And a dreary gift of years.

"Strange that guileless face and form
To lavish on the scathing storm;
Little chary of thy fame—
Dust unborn may praise or blame—
But we mould thee for the root
Of man's promised healing fruit."

"David's life at this time was full of hair-breadth escapes." The speaker followed his life from his occupation of the throne. "The first of his race." His love for his parents and brothers was described at length. His wonderful love for his erring and rebelious son Absolam Christ was not ashamed to be called the son of David, David the sinner and yet the penitent. He is more closely bound up with the sympathies of mankind than if he had never fallen. Hear what Carlyle says of him: 'David the Hebrew king has fallen into sins enough, blackest crimes—there was no want of sin, and therefore the unbelievers sneer and ask: Is this young man according to God's own heart? The sneer, I must say, seems but a shallow one. What are faults? What are the outward details of a life if the inner secret of it, the remorse, temptations, the often baffled, never ending struggle of it be forgotten. David's life and history as written for us in those psalms of his I consider to be the truest emblem ever given us of a man's moral progress and warfare here below. All earnest souls will ever discern in them the faithful struggle of an earnest human soul toward what is good and best."

A Sunday School Tribute.

Yesterday noon the Congregational Sunday school was presided over for the last time by Mr. D. A. Judd, who has served as superintendent for four years past. Mr. Judd and family leave tonight for California, intending to remain there this winter, and possibly make that their permanent home. Should favorable business opportunities present themselves, it is not unlikely that Mr. Judd may return here in the spring, as his preferences are for a location here, but this is uncertain. At the close of the class study of the lesson yesterday, the following resolutions were presented and adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, Mr. D. A. Judd has been superintendent of the Sunday school of the Congregational church of Council Bluffs, Ia., for four years; and,

WHEREAS, We, the officers, teachers and members of the Sunday school have learned with deep regret that he and his estimable wife have decided to remove from here, with a probability of making their home in the golden state of the occident, therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby express our sorrow at parting with our beloved superintendent, whom we will miss from his accustomed place, and the hope that in the new field to which he is going he will find christian work which he will be able to perform with as much satisfaction to others as that he has done here.

Resolved, That we desire to express our high esteem and great confidence in him, not only as a Sunday school worker but as a Christian gentleman, and while we will try to profit by the lesson he has so earnestly taught, we will ever remember him in our petitions to the throne of grace, and will pray for his continued spiritual and temporal prosperity.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our school, and that a copy, properly engrossed, be presented to him.

Death of Mrs. Geise.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock Mrs. Conrad Geise passed away from this life, aged forty-two years. She had been for a year past an acute sufferer from a dropsical affection of the heart, but she had been seriously ill only four weeks. Her death was not unexpected, but it is a sad blow to the family.

She was the daughter of Mr. Horn, formerly proprietor of "Horn's Park." She was joined in marriage to Mr. Geise about twenty-five years ago. She was a devoted wife and mother and highly esteemed by the very large circle of friends in which she moved. Her husband and seven children are left to mourn the loss of wife and mother.

Two of the boys, Fred and Edward, are well-known in business circles. The remaining children, five in number, are younger. Three are of such tender years as to imperatively need the loving care and attention of a mother.

The sympathies of the community will go out to these stricken ones in this hour of bereavement. The funeral service will be held to-morrow, Tuesday, afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the family residence on Frank street.

St. Andrew's Brotherhood.

One of the most practical systems of organized effort which has been developed in latter years is that known as the St. Andrew's brotherhood. It is of the same order as the White Cross movement and the Y. M. C. A. It combines all that is good as to methods and aims at securing the best life for the man, i. e., morality in all that the term implies. Its field is exclusively among men. The reason why the field is limited at all lies in the necessity which everywhere exists for active work in behalf of young men. The hope of the future is in the character of the men this generation produces, hence the necessity of saving the young men from the influences of bad associations and habits.

A number of the Omaha brotherhood will visit Council Bluffs next Sunday evening and a religious service is arranged to take place at St. Paul's church, conducted entirely by them. Several good speakers will be here and an interesting meeting is promised. The objects of the order will be fully explained and an attempt made to organize a brotherhood here.

MUELLER MUSIC CO.

Changes at the Ogden.

During the past five months the Ogden house has not been fully opened for business, and yet has held its leverage upon its old time patronage by furnishing lodgings. This time of partial inactivity has been fully utilized by the owner, M. S. Stout, and the entire building has been thoroughly overhauled. Heretofore considerable trouble has been experienced in keeping the house warm enough for comfort. The steam fixtures have been examined and found to contain lime incrustations to a depth sufficient to almost entirely close the pipes. This difficulty has been remedied. The painter has been at work wherever needed and the house is now in complete shape. A great deal of work remains yet to be done. The kitchen and dining room are to receive attention at the hands of the mechanic and decorator. The hotel will probably be ready for opening in three or four weeks. Until the formal opening Mr. Stout will attend to the business of the house assisted by Mr. G. S. Eastman. This latter gentleman is well known to the traveling public, having been for years connected with the best hotels of Omaha. The Ogden will present a new face when it is ready for public inspection.

Every one making a cash purchase o 25 cents at T. D. King & Co.'s cigar store gets a chance in the annual prize drawing. Twenty elegant prizes.

A Hay Dealer Skipped.

Ike Cogle, a Mondamin citizen, has been setting the tongues of that quiet little place wagging lively. He and W. F. Garner had been making hay on the bottom lands east of there, and were partners in this enterprise. Mr. Garner went out to the hay ranch to look after matters there, and, as soon as he was out of sight, Cogle started for Council Bluffs. He here drew $200 from parties to whom they had sold hay and then returned to Mondamin. He there took Mr. Garner's mule team and wagon and drove away. No trace of him could be obtained, and Mr. Garner is still on the search. Cogle is described as a man of about forty-eight years, six feet tall, wears a moustache and chin whiskers, a little grey. His hair is dyed brown.

Coal for the Schools.

The school board was not satisfied with the bids received and opened some time ago. The dealers in coal were strangely uniform in their bids on hard coal, the price in each case being $11 a ton. There was a little more variation on the soft coal bids, but there is also more of a variation in qualities. The board rejected the bids, and concluded to readvertise. At the meeting held later, the board let the contract for soft coal at a higher price than the previous bids named. Hard coal has got even beyond the reach of the school board. In consequence soft coal will be used so far as possible.

Diamond Cutting in London.

London Times: The public are probably not aware of the extent to which diamond cutting has been revived in London. Nearly two hundred years ago Englishmen were the finest diamond cutters in the world, the trade being nearly all carried on in London, and at the present time old English-cut diamonds will always fetch a very high price, as the cutting is still so much prized.

Through religious persecution they migrated to Amsterdam, where they have since remained. At the time when the African diamond fields were discovered there was only one diamond cutter in London. Dutchmen were accordingly engaged to work in London from Monday morning till Friday sunset, and they were to receive £10 a week each man. They struck several times successfully for higher wages, but when they demanded £18 per week each man they were discharged, and English gem cutters were put at the work.

At first the Englishmen were only able after a deal of trouble to cut a class of diamond in one month which they could now cut in about four days. As soon as it was clearly proved that Englishmen had once more gained the art, the Worshipful Company of Turners decided to give English cutters every encouragement, and have, with the valuable assistance of the Baroness and Mr. Burdett-Coutts, offered money awards in competition against the Dutch for the best-cut diamonds. After several contests the Englishmen gained the first prize and most of the others.

Up to the end of 1835, out of four of the principal mines of South America—namely, Kimberley, DeBeers, Bultfontein and Du Toit's Pan, no less than 33,000,000 carats of diamonds (or more than six and a half tons' weight) have been extracted, realizing about £40,000,000. The diamonds now discovered are nearly all found in British possessions—namely, Africa and India. Yet the vast majority of the stones are still sent to foreign countries to be cut and polished, which every Englishman should consider ought not to be. As one of the treatest secrets connected with the grade consists in the one word patience, there is an immense field for the employment of women. As a nation, the Americans are the finest judges of diamonds in the world, and it is to London that America goes for her finest-cut monds. The last official report published was that America took about £3,000,000 worth of cut diamonds annually from England.

Edison on His Phonograph.

Electrical World: "I was so overcome with the success of my first instrument finished about six weeks ago, that I doubted whether I could make another equally good, and I went to work at once to do sor my second instrument works as well as the first, and I have forty workmen employed in making the tools for the first 500 phonographs. They will cost $60 apiece."

The amount of talking which can be recorded upon the phonographic sheet is so much larger than what can be printed upon it that the phonographic book or newspaper of the future need not be half the present size. About the only thing that the perfected phonograph will not be able to do will be to give pictures. The cost of running the phonograph, according to Edison, will be no more than the cost of maintaining two cells which run the little electric motor—perhaps 50 cents a month. Three sizes are now being made, one size for the pocket, which will write 300 words on its sheet, another size for letters of 800 words, and a third size for 3,000 words.
