Jailer Miller's Lincoln Guests.

Since their confinement in the Douglas county jail, the mayor and aldermen from Lincoln have suffered untold miseries While they are not absolutely chained to prison walls, the cruelty of their master, Joe Miller, has already began to tell upon their systems, and if his rigorous discipline is continued for a few days more, even Colonel H. H. Dean will be reduced to a shadow, or rather, he will not be able to produce a shadow in the brightest sunlight. Colonel Dean usually tips the beam at four-teen stone, but since Monday he has lost no less than one-sixteenth of ounce in flesh. No little apprehension is felt by his fellow "convicts," that the genials city father will fill an early grave. The smile that was wont to do considerable hovering about his rubicund do considerable hovering about his rubiculid countenance—when the gleaming shekels were raked in from the festive jack-pot has entirely disappeared and only a look of melancholy can be seen in his eyes that peer over his gold-bowed glasses.

Mayor Sawyer is but a nightmare of his former self. The kind expression of his face has given way to a look of melancholy. The care handsome features now are wrinkled.

once handsome features now are wrinkled and in his eyes misery and despair shine forth. His manly bosom does not heave with the heaviness of other and happier days, because it lies nearly three inches back of his alabaster shirt front. Even Major Billingsly is trying to "keep even" with the wasting away process. The natty silk smoking jacket that rested so gracefully upon his stalwart shoulders now appears at least three sizes too large for him, and it is rumored that a tailor has been commissioned to build him another one suitable for a child. When he passes around the box of Reina Victorias there is a marked absence of that genial hospitality for which he is celebrated, apparent in his far-The rest of the gentlemen show signs of

Last night several of the "condemned men" attended the play at Boyd's and afterwards saw Omaha by gaslight. This recreation was prescribed by the jail physician and it was hoped that the misery of poor Annie Meadows in "Alone in London" would by its contrast prove a balm to heal the wounds of the dispairing "convicts."

Many friends of other days sent valuable and appreciated gifts to the "convicts" yesterday. Mr. S. S. Felker sent a huge hamper containing wines and brandies. The trial of William Barada, the half-breed Indian who is arraigned before the United States court on the charge of murdering Pete Ditier, another half-breed, commenced about noon yesterday and consumed the rest of the day. The greater part of the testimony on the part of the prosecution is now in. There are seventeen witnesses for the state, but the only persons who actually witnessed the fatal quarrel were Paul Dijier, a brother of Pete, and William Neff, near whose house the kill-ing took place. The Neffs have been at outs for some time with the defendant, but the testimony given by them agrees throughout with the story of Barada published in Mon-day's Bre. They say that Dijier commenced the quarrel, was the first to strike a blow, and when he pulled his knife Barada fied: Dijier received the cut from the hatchet and the deadly blow from the club while pursuing Barada. Both of these weapons were produced in testimony yesterday. The club is a heavy piece of well-seasoned oak and weighs about forty-five pounds. In the hands of a powerful young man like Barada it was a Barada has the reputation earful weapon. of being a peaceable fellow, rather avoiding than courting a quarrel, but when forced to fight he is a dangerous man to deal with. MORTUARY MATTERS. BURKHARD

The remains of Vincent Burkhard were uried vesterday in Holy etery, the funeral taking place from the residence of his parents, 1213 North Eighteenth street. . '

The funeral of John McGovern, one of Omaha's oldest and most respected citizens, took place yesterday from his late resi dence on Convent street. The remains were borne to St. Peter's church on Leavenworth street, near Phil Sheridan avenue, where requiem mass was celebrated, and they were afterwards interred in St. Mary's sepulchre, in the southern part of the city. The fun-eral was one of the longest that has ever taken place in this city. RUTHERFORD.
The remains of the late Dr. Rutherford were forwarded to his brother in Utica, N. Y. Notwithstanding the fact that there was nothing to show about the person of the deceased either during the time he was laboring under the effects of the morphine or after his death that he had premed tated suicide, there is a strongly entertained opinion by many who knew him that the doc-tor's death was not entirely accidental. One of these, yesterday evening, detailed a circumstance to a BEE reporter which warrants that belief. Some time ago Dr. Rutherford had an office in the building an the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Davenport streets, where he frequently received some of his professional bret hren to chat away an evening on professional and other subjects. At these meetings the feeling some times became quite warm, espe-cially when there was clashing of opinion as regards the methods of opposing schools of medicine. At the time the doctor's practice was far from being encouraging and this fact tinged his discussions, and at times, his de tinged his discussions, and at times, his de-meanor with bitterness. Soon after the sec-ond or third of these warm though not hos-tile discussions, a friend went into the doctor's office one evening and found him lying on his lounge groaning with pain. His salutation to the vis-itor was: "Oh, go away, let me alone; let me die." Another physician was called, and an ometic was administered and the discouremetic was administered, and the discour-aged physician's life was saved. A few months later, the doctor was found in almost the same condition, and similar means were resorted to save his life, and with the same degree of success. He was thus twice saved only to be successful doubtless, on his third attempt. The property bought by him is in South Omaha, the money having been sent here by his family in the east.

Tuesday evening at 9.450 clock Ada E. Patterson, wife of A. W. Patterson, secretary of the Phenix Live Stock Insurance company of this city, died at her late residence Nineteenth and Cuming street, after a very short illness. The deceased was but twenty-four years of age.

Army News. Captain C. A. H. McCauley, depot quarter-

The captain has filled the position he now relinquishes here for the past four years and with so much ability so much kindness to subordinates and associates that his departure is a source of regret to all who have been asso ciated with him in the performances of his duties. He was the second quartermas ter at the present depot, succeeding Major Furey, and admirably accomplish ing which that gentleman had commenced. The captain had not expected to be ordered to Chicago, but the disappoinment will be to Chicago, but the disappoinment will be appreciated, especially because his family resides there. Accompanying the captain from this point will be Frank Imman, for four years the chief clerk of Quartermaster Dandy, who will act as chief clerk in Chicago. This gentieman Tuesday evening was presented with a chony gold-headed cane by his former associates. The pleasure experienced, however, by the acceptance of the gift was marred by the receipt of sudden and painful news of the death of Mr. Inman's mather, in New York, and of her sister, in Philadelphia, on the same day. Mr. Inman is a nephew of Commodore Imman. Captain McCauley's successor is Captain Simpson, who for the past four years Captain Simpson, who for the past four years has been in San Antonio, Texas.

OYSTERS AND RELIGION. The Salvation Army Combine the Two

at Their Barracks. The Salvation army were hilarious last night, and to-day, if the heads of the principal soul-savers and their able assistants assume the proportions of a well inflated balloon, their stomachs display a longing tendency for siedlitz powders and other sedatives and they express an abhorrence for anything that begins with an O, let not the Philistines judge them wrongfully and intimate that they have fallen by the wayside. Should such a state of affairs among them exist as just described, let it be attributed to oysters, night these champions of religion indulged in a feast of the seductive bivalves, which were served at the barracks in all the approved styles of the culinary art.

There were oysters fried and raw. Oysters baked, oyster stew, Oysters seasoned with cold slaw, Oysters big as ever grew.

These particular oysters referred to were duly advertised on hand bills, and the addi-tion of a few extra horns which were duly aired as the army made its usual evening perambulations through the different thoroughfares. This strange combination of oysters and religion attracted large crowds to the barracks, and though it may strike the average unbeliever as impos-sible, it is a fact nevertheless true that peo-ple were induced to come over from Council Bluffs to take in the feast, all for the paltry sum of 25 cents.

Shortly before 8 o'clock the feast began, and if Beishazzar had a merrier time he should be awarded the belt. There was a jolly crowd in attendance, and the melody of jolly crowd in attendance, and the melody of the band helped the digestive organs. The collected savage who could not put his whole soul in the singing of "You must be a lover of the Lord" to the accompaniment of the "Little Brown Jug," or the doxology to the tune "Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane," has very poor appreciation of what com-prises melody. The oysters were dished up by the attentive, pretty and fascinating by the attentive, pretty and fascinating female portion of the army in a satisfactory manner and preved them to be adepts as table waiters as well as in the soul-saving

As remarkable as it may seem at this time f the year, there is an ice gorge in the river between this effy and Florence, and the difference in the depth of the water at these wo points is just thirteen feet. For a time the waterworks people were apprehensive that the gorge was going to materially shut off their supply of water, but by taking the matter in hand promptly all probability of this has been obviated.
