The New Government Building Prepared For Cold Weather.

Chatting About Abstract Making - Jim Snoderly Arrested For Arson - New Guests For Christmas Dinner in Jail.

Uncle Sam's House.

The work on the new government building is going on but slowly, and it will probably be a year before it is ready for occupancy.

The heating system is now in running order and will be started up as soon as water connections can be made. The final connection with the city mains will probably be made Monday. The lower part of the building is to be heated by hot air, and the remainder by steam.

The air furnished by a fan and passes through three coils of pipe, where it is heated. These coils weigh about 1,200 pounds each, and contain 10,000 feet of pipe.

It is impossible to form a correct idea of the great amount of piping used in the building without seeing it. The basement in particular seems filled with it. Valves have been placed on the different lines so that any particular length can be taken out and repaired without interfering with the workings of the rest.

A large tank is placed in the cellar to receive the water from the boilers, thus avoiding the necessity of blowing it into the sewers, which not only makes a great strain on the sewer walls, but produces a bad effect in the way of sewer gas, from the hot water and steam. The boilers are three in number, two low and one high pressure. They are so arranged that they can be used separately or jointly, either for heating purposes or to furnish power. It is intended to use both of the low pressure boilers for heating the building, as two boilers will furnish more steam from the same amount of fuel than one. A pressure of five pounds will be sufficient to do the work in ordinary weather. The limit allowed in government buildings is from five to fifteen pounds. The steam and hot air pipes throughout the building will be covered with a thick wrapping of asbestos felt, to preserve the heat. Arrangements have been made that power can be furnished for elevators and dynamos at any time, without making any alterations. The work of plastering will probably be commenced in about two weeks.

Jim Snoderly Once More.

Jim Snoderly is again in trouble. For some time he relieved this city of his presence and has been living in South Omaha.

Thursday night he appeared here again and about the same time there came a request from Omaha to have him arrested if he could be found here, as he was wanted for arson at South Omaha. The officers had little difficulty in finding him, and Jim was soon in his old place behind the bars. He refused to talk about the matter, and was quite firm in his avowal that he would not go back across the river without a request. It is said that Snoderly got into a quarrel with his wife in his mad desire to get even with her for setting him free. Jim has run quite a career here. It used to be quite the thing to do to arrest Jim for any and every sort of a crime committed within the city limits, and occasionally for some beyond. When the officers could not learn who was the perpetrator, they were quite apt to run Jim in on suspicion. He has been arrested more than a dozen times, and found guilty less than any fellow in this neck of the woods. Jim always laid himself open for suspicious to stick to, and such was the cause of his being noticed here. At one time Jim got religion, and when he takes anything he takes all he can get. He was enthusiastic, and a wonderful worker. He cleaned up, got his bible, and went the rounds of the saloons, talking earnestly and honestly to the boys. It lasted but briefly, and soon Jim got married and went back to the bad.

The Police Court.

Business was very good in the police court yesterday morning. The usual grist of drunks came up smiling to take their medicine. Billy Carroll was fined $8.10 and George White balanced his account for $7.60. William Ransford, a dirt hauler, paid $2.00 for not providing proper edgates. William Farrell, a drunk and vag, was sent to the county jail for fifteen days. The case of John Burns, charged with vagrancy and larceny from the store of Spelman Bros., was continued. It seems that Burns wanted a coat, so he stole a couple, dummies and all, and carried them to an alley. They were secured to the dummy by a chain and he was unable to free them. While he was loitering about the place he was arrested on suspicion. The stolen goods are of sufficient value to make the theft a penitentiary offense.
