Winter Improvidence.

The approach of winter is hailed with a chuckle of delight by the dealers in agricultural implements. It is not the season for sales but is the seed time for future orders.

Chilly cattle, shivering horses, and cold swine are the destruction of the well-stilled cribs and overflowing mows. Warm stables, sheds and pens pay for themselves a dozen times over in the course of a farmer's life time.

Winter should be the farmer's home harvest. The fields are bare of crops, but there is all the more time to attend to loose fences and shaky gates. The barns and mows and cribs have received their burdens and opportunity is given to repair their sides and roofs by a timely board or shingle or a needed nail.

War Records Threatened. It was not to be expected, after the battle flag experience of the president, that any one would be so reckless as to propose interference with other relics or records of the war, but it appears that some body in the war department has conceived the idea of destroying a portion of the records, and that a committee is really at work examining these documents in order to inform the secretary what records he may report to congress for destruction.

It is not probable that such authority can be secured from the present congress. Granting that some of the records might be found to be of no apparent value, there is no reason for hurrying their destruction. Documents that may seem valueless to-day might be of great importance twenty years hence.

Misdirected Wisdom. The wisdom that discerns as the chief reason for the opposition to Mr. Lamar his course as secretary of the interior toward the land-grabbing corporations and syndicates is sadly misdirected. A Philadelphia contemporary asserts that the "chief opposition to Mr. Lamar comes from senators who are notoriously the agents and representatives of western land-grabbers," and professes to believe that had he "shut his eyes to the spoliation of the public domain the opposition to him in the senate never would have come to a head."

Nebraska Jottings.

The state penitentiary has a population of 334. Columbus boasts that she supplies South Omaha with the best hogs, and has several to spare.

The Norfolk News boasts a universal truth with this four liner: "The telegraph service of Sunday's Omaha Bee was a model of perfection. No newspaper in the west had anything approaching it."

The town dais of Ashland met in extraordinary session a few evenings ago, and celebrated the completion of water-works. Under the mellowing influences of Salt Creek water, the members presented a gold-headed cane to Contractor Richardson, and spent upon the pages of their record resolutions of applause and thankfulness.

Mayor Broatch has received statements from nearly a score of cities giving the number of policemen employed in each and the proportion to population. It is shown that the average is one policeman to about 1,200 inhabitants.

The Illinois Central is erecting at Dubuque a $75,000 depot. Sam Ricker, of Sioux City, has gone to Bangor, Me., for a fortune of $24,000 left him by his father.

Des Moines is taking steps to raise $25,000 as an inducement to the owners of the cotton factory at Jameville, Mich., to remove the same to Des Moines, as they have offered to make such a move for the above consideration.
