

CLANDERS AND HOG CHOLERA

Some Information Regarding Their Symptoms and Treatment.

AN IMPORTANT DOCUMENT.

State Veterinarian Gerth's Circular--Commissioner Leese Wants Free Railroad Passes Abolished and Passenger Rates Reduced.

(FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.)

A short time ago the Live Stock Sanitary commission instructed Dr. J. Gerth, Jr., state veterinarian, to prepare a circular concerning the diseases of animals. This circular has been prepared, approved by the board and in a few days will be ready for general distribution. That it will be of great value to stock owners as a class, and of direct value to the commission in prosecuting their work is self-evident. The circular cites much of the law relative to how contagious diseases shall be reported, what indemnity is paid, and how it can be obtained. This, however, is a secondary matter and of record in all the statistics. The discussions in the circular on glanders and hog cholera are timely and to the point and of interest to the stock owner. The circular gives the following

DESCRIPTION OF GLANDERS AND FARCY.

Glancers and farcy are defined as a contagious disease peculiar to the equine family. It is transmitted to man and all domestic animals except cattle. Glancers and farcy are only different forms of the same constitutional disease affecting horses. If a sound animal be inoculated with the matter of glancers or farcy, it may produce either one or both. The disease, although usually chronic, will frequently terminate in acute glancers before death. The infectious element of glancers has a fixed character and, as experience proves, it may be rendered in the atmosphere. This explains the rapid communication of the disease from animal to animal in a stable, where the air is not properly ventilated and imperfectly drained stable, where the air soon becomes loaded with the infectious principles by means of the expired air from glancered horses. In open fields and pastures the disease does not spread so rapidly, and is rarely communicated, except by direct contact, because the contagion soon becomes diluted as to become harmless. In this, as in other contagious diseases, a small percentage of the exposed animals will become infected. This may be dependent upon the violence of the glancer poison, or upon the general condition of the animal at the time of exposure. Animals in good health do not seem so susceptible to infection as those that have had their constitution weakened by improper care, feeding, exercise, etc. The infectious element of glancers is dispersed through the system by means of the blood. The virus of glancers may, under favorable circumstances, retain its activity for a long time. Boiling water, fire, chemicals and certain disinfectants will thoroughly destroy its activity, when brought into actual contact with them. It is also claimed that putrefaction will have the same effect.

The period of incubation in glancers varies from three to six days, to as many weeks. Glancers in its chronic form may continue for months and years before terminating in death, while acute glancers may cause death in from five to fifteen days.

THE SYMPTOMS.

"The symptoms of glancers are inaugurated by a scanty, rarely copious discharge from one or both nostrils, as mucus at first, afterward glazing and assuming a brownish yellow color. The discharge, intermittent at times, is usually continuous. It is of a sticky, gummy nature, and occasionally streaked with blood. It adheres to the outer edge of the nostril and sometimes clogs up the nasal air passages to such an extent as to cause difficulty in breathing. The discharge is not offensive, except when ulceration has taken place, to such an extent as to destroy the cartilages and other tissues in the head, or when there is necrosis of the bones of the head, or a decayed tooth present also. The discharge is said to be most frequent from the left nostril but I have seen it as frequently from the right, and from both nostrils as the left. The discharge is the most common carrier of the contagion. The submaxillary glands or glands under the jaw bones are enlarged, hard and painless to the touch, gradually becoming adherent to the bone, and do not show any disposition to separate or disappear. There is also tumescence of the nasal cavities and swelling of the lymphatic glands of the head and legs. Frequently also an accumulation of whitish matter in the corner of the eye, on the diseased side of the head. The principal symptoms, however, that leave no doubt, to the existence of glancers is the formation of ulcers on the lining membrane of the nose."

HOW TO EXAMINE FOR GLANDERS.

"To examine a horse for glancers, place him in a stall facing an open door, cause an attendant to raise his head, so that the light will shine up his nostril. He should be so positioned that a light side, and with his thumb and first finger dilate the nostril so that the mucus of the nasal cavity may be exposed to view. Ulcers, if present, can easily be seen; if not, any nodosity can readily be detected by passing the fingers over the lining of membrane of the head and legs. Persons with wounds or excoriations on their hands or face should have nothing to do with the examination of a horse suspected to have glancers or farcy. Distemper, catarrh, nasal gliosis are diseases sometimes mistaken for glancers."

DISINFECTANTS.

"Stables in which glancered horses have been kept should be thoroughly disinfected. All refuse fodder and litter should be removed, the walls scraped, and the floor should be destroyed and six inches of dirt removed beneath it. Mangers, boxes, brushes and pails should be burned. The barn should then be cleaned with a solution of sulphur on an iron dish, setting it on fire and then leaving the barn closed for three hours. Other disinfectants are given by the doctor, but this is claimed to be within the reach of all practical."

HOG CHOLERA.

"Whether the disease of hog cholera," says the circular, "can be cured by inoculation is still very questionable. It has never been satisfactorily demonstrated that any benefit can be derived from this method. Nor does it seem probable that inoculation can be made practicable. If, therefore, farmers and swine raisers desire to protect their animals from this disease, the best rule as are herein suggested, they would be able to reduce their losses to a minimum and cope successfully with the disease. If an outbreak exists, separate all the infected hogs as soon as possible. The healthy hogs should be removed to a new and uninfected pasture or pen, and carefully watched by an attendant. Should any that have been thought well become weak or appear to be sick, allow or offer their, take them out and kill them. At disease they should be killed and cremated as soon as possible. Section 1, chapter 5, laws of 1885, entitled 'An act to prevent the spread of hog cholera,' makes it the duty of the owner of swine dying from hog cholera to either bury or burn them within twenty-four hours after death, on his own premises. If neighbors would in the enforcement of this law they would in all probability save themselves frequently from serious losses, and would do the public a great service. If swine are healthy, it is advisable never to allow new hogs to intermingle with them in the herd until after having been subjected to a strict quarantine of at least seven weeks. Never to allow any hogs to be taken into a herd until they are visible or safe to allow anyone to go into hog pens after returning from an infected place, without first changing their boots. There should be but one attendant to look after sick animals, who, during such service, should not be allowed to leave the place. Hogs should never be washed at a stream if it comes running from where the disease is known to exist. Dogs or other animals belonging to infected farms should not be allowed to roam about at will where hogs are kept, as they may carry infection with them. If these rules are carefully observed there need be little fear of hog cholera causing any serious loss, or spreading to any alarming extent. The circular is made official with the signatures of the members of the live stock commission. They are printed for general distribution and to assist in educating people on these very prevalent diseases. The sheriff of the different counties will be supplied with the circulars, and they will be forwarded gratuitously to all who desire them, to assist in enforcing the law. Commissioner Leese, of the board of transportation, has submitted his suggestions to the secretaries of the board for their consideration."

port upon at the meeting of the board January 5. The preamble recites that abuses existing in the mode of collecting the passenger fares; that persons who are obliged to pay 3 cents a mile for traveling are charged an amount over and above the actual cost for such service as is rendered to the railroads for carrying those that now ride free. That under the present system of 3 cents a mile rate and free passes to those who are required to pay it is unjust and unreasonable, and therefore unlawful, and that all may be treated alike, the following resolution is presented: Resolved, That an order be issued to all railroad companies doing business in the state to cease and desist from issuing any passes to any person or persons in this state, to the end that no person will be allowed to ride free. Resolved, That all railroad companies be further ordered to take up and cancel outstanding passes. Resolved, That a further order be issued by the board of transportation to each and every railroad company, doing business in this state to so reduce their schedule of passenger rates to a just and reasonable charge, and to charge no more than a fair rate for traveling over their roads, and no more, instead of the 3 cents as now charged. Provided, that this order shall not apply to or include any person who is in the actual employ of any railroad company at a specified compensation and carried on the companies' books as an employee, while traveling on business for said railroad company.

TAMING A SHREW.

Antoine Byoke Fires the Old Man and Woman.

Antoine Byoke, who resides over a harem on Fifteenth street, near Capitol avenue, was arrested yesterday charged with beating his mother-in-law. He stood up before the court and said it was all a mistake. In the first place he said his father-in-law, Benak Battollo, came into his house and accused some of his boarders of robbing him of $45. This made Antoine "madderish he never before was," and he fired his father-in-law out into the beautiful snow. A few moments later and his mother-in-law swooped down upon the house and declared herself. Finally she got so loud and so mad, and that Antoine thought it was time to have a bad idea to throw her out, too. But when he laid hands upon her, oh my! For a few moments the boarders thought a cyclone had struck the man, and fled to their rooms in wildest terror. No so with Antoine, however. He tackled his mother-in-law with a valor unexampled, and with one blow of his fist he not only closed her left eye, but knocked her over the kitchen stove. She then took her departure and her next procedure was to have her underfoot, and have arrested. Out of a mass of jargon the judge fished out sufficient evidence to justify the levying a special tax on Antoine of $10 and costs, which he paid and departed, no wiser, or sadder, but just so much "oud."

LOOKING BACK

Upon the year just closing we cannot help expressing our deep gratification at the result. It has been the most satisfactory since we are in business, and has far overreached our most sanguine expectations. We pride ourselves that this result is mainly due to our style of doing business and to our efforts to give the people at all times the most value for their money. Perfect satisfaction must go with every sale made in our establishment. If we have failed to please in a single instance, we are always anxious to repair. The people should know that they can come to us with the utmost confidence and rely on being treated fair. Our advantages are many and our methods are right, and cannot be excelled. The steady growth of our business from a small beginning to its present vast proportions proves that the people appreciate such methods. We are thankful for past favors, and are sure to give more every year.

Prior to our annual inventory, we will offer this week, several notable bargains which we can confidently say will be the greatest we have offered during the past year. Some of the best goods in the different departments, which have not moved so freely, will be marked down regardless of cost in order to close them out before stock-taking.
