A special from New Haven, Conn. tells the following story: No social epi-sode has ever occurred here that creoted such excitement as that which fol-owed the announcement made to-day that the reason Thomas Walker Chastanie, of Virginia, and Charles F. Dodge of New York city, were recently expelled from Yale university was because the young men had engaged in a game of poker, the stakes being the privilege of paying exclusive attention to a young New Haven heiress with whom both men were smitten. When Dodge and Chastante were suspended, some weeks ago, is was announced that they had violated some of the rules of the college, but the numerous friends of the young men here supposed they had engaged in some harmless frolic in which wealthy young Yalesians are oftentimes participants. From an intimate friend and classmate of Dodge, verified by the faculty, the Globe-Democrat correspondent learns the correct details of the affair, which was exceedingly racy. Two of the wealthiest young men in the class of '86 were Dodge and Chastanie. The former's father is a retired banker of the metropolis, and young Chastanie's parent is reported to be several times a millionaire. Both young men belonged to the exclusive circle of wealthy stu-dents at Yale. These young men were sought after by the society young ladies of the Elm City, and they soon became favorites, affable and gentlemanly, as they were. It was at the last year's

From being fast CHICAGO SHORT friends they soon became separated. It soon began to be whispered about among the student friends of the young men that they had had a quarrel over something. The fact that it was over the good will of the handsome Miss Williams, whom every one admired as she promenaded Hillhouse avenue, or held the lines over her favorite pony as she speeded along the boulevard on pleasant afternoons, was not suspected. Those in the secret hoped that there would be no serious outbreak, and did everything in their power to prevent anything which might create scandal. A meeting was arranged between the two young men, when it was suggested that they both come to Chicago. St. Paul. Clinton, some understanding about the matter. They at first refused to listen to the Elgin, proffered advice, preferring, they said, Belolt, to let Miss Williams choose the man she desired. A friend then told them that the young lady had forseen the coming storm and had informed him that she could not, or, what was more, would not choose, leaving the matter to be decided by the young men. Various suggestions mere made as to how one of the suitors should put a stop to the other's paying further attentions to Miss Williams once and for all. The agreement was to be an inviolate one and sacredly kept. The meeting was arranged for and took place in Dodge's suite of rooms, which were among the most elegant in the college, costing $5,000 to furnish them. Seven students, all high-standing men and wealthy, were the only ones, outside the Dodge captured the ante chip and three more with it, on three deuces against tens up. "She's mine," he cried, "I always win when 1 rake the first pot." Chastahie's southern blood was up, and he became greatly excited. If it were not for the intervention of the other students the pair would certainly have come to blows at this juncture in the game. Chastanie played a hard game. He was wary and care-ful, and he wou for a time, but again luck turned against him, and his chips melted into the hands of Dodge.
