Marriage licenses have been issued to J. C. Benyoun and Lulu King of Council Bluffs, and T. B. Greenlee of Harper county, Kansas, and Lizzie O. Woodherne, of this city. On account of the severity of the weather and the absence from the city of some of the members of the city council, that body did not hold a session last evening, as was expected. The jury in the superior court has been dismissed until the February term. Its services have not been required during the present term, but it will be retained for the next two months. The P. E. O. will meet with Mrs. Horace Evans, corner of Sixth street and First avenue this afternoon at 2 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as important business will come before the meeting. By order of the president. Last evening Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Casady entertained a number of friends in a progressive euchre party. The weather was severe, and the contrast of the dreariness without with the warmth and comfort within made the enjoyment of the evening more keen. The revival meetings in progress at the Broadway Methodist church are drawing crowds nightly. The interest is growing steadily and there are many seekers and some conversions alread reported. It looks as though the ministrations of the new pastor would develop a genuine, old fashioned revival. The inter-state commerce law strikes in the Bluffs as well as in other places.

Yesterday can be set down as one of the cold days, as the mercury was below zero during the whole day, being generally about ten degrees below. About dark it began to sink lower and soon reached fourteen, where it rested during the earlier part of the night. There were no street cars running in the city yesterday until afternoon. The company had quite a large force at work cleaning the tracks during the entire day, and the rails were salted from one end of the city to the other. It was not attempted to run the cars with one horse, and on all the runs the teams were doubled. It is probable that the regular runs will be made to-day.

John Allen, of the European restaurant, who furnished the refreshments for the Omaha sleighing party, says that he prepared enough for fully 700 lunches, and as there was but little left, he thinks that about that number of people were supplied. Lunch was served from 3 un-til 6 o'clock, during which time the waiters were kept busy. Mr. Allen is a skillful caterer, and he served the large party most satisfactorily.

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS SUPREME.

Preparations For a Return Sleighing Carnival to Omaha-Doings in Police Court-Other Events in the Bluffs.

After the Carnival. The sleighing carnival of Thursday developed numerous incidents which are of interest. It is the universal expression of the visitors that their entertainment lacked nothing which was essential to their pleasure or diversion. In this fact there is a double honor to the host and his guest. That this hospitality was in a few instances abused argues nothing, except that these individual guests had neither the sense to behave themselves, nor the courtesy to return good will for kindness. After the storm struck, the various lines of communication between Council Bluffs and Omaha were taxed to their utmost to convey intelligence and inquiry. The messenger service was about one-third greater than usual, and there was about the same increase in the telegraph service. After 4 o'clock p. m. the telephone central had 273 calls. They were mainly by persons here to apprise friends in Omaha of their safety. After half past four no messages were received from the other side of the river as the facilities were fully taxed to carry tidings the other way. On account of the severity of the storm no dummy runs were made after 6:45, in consequence of which many persons were forced to remain in this city over night.

When it became apparent that the trip back to Omaha could not be safely made several gentlemen at the Ogder house, the Masonic temple and other placas volentarily threw their homes and stables open for the accommodation of the city's guests, and their teams. Many of these invitations were accepted and the immense crowd was well cared for and entertained. At the Ogden an orchestra was furnished and the tediousness of the hours of the night were spent by many in dancing or listening to the music, as their fancy inclined. During the night there were frequent anxious inquiries from Omaha for the whereabouts of friends. Several accidents to teams, runaways, etc., were reported, and there were many rumors afloat. With the appearance of daylight these messages were renewed and it was not until the day was well spent that all of the visitors of the previous day were accounted for. Now it is known that there were no serious casualties. In this is one of the chief causes for our congratulation. The visitors from Omaha had all returned home by 6 o'clock last evening, many of them leaving their teams on this until the weather moderates sufficiently for them to make the return trip in comfort.

Mr. Crane, of the Masonic insurance company, arrived home Thursday even-ing. On getting off the Rock Island train he could find no hack or 'bus, and started out with two of the railway boys but the storm was so fierce that the rail roaders were knocked flat. The trio returned to the depot and ordered a hack

W. G. Sheiver, of Omaha, was among the visitors. He drove a steady-going animal and would have got along all right had it not been for another of his horses which he let some friends drive. This horse, a brown pacer, would have followed along though, but in crossing a ditch the sleigh was upset, and the pacer became a runner. He cleared himself from the cutter and made good his escape. Mr. Shriver started on his track, but after experiences such as he does not care again to undergo, he returned to the city and took the dummy train over. He was here again vesterday looking up his missing pacer, but was unable to find it.

The report that C. E. Mayne's team was lost proved to have little foundation. Mr. Mayne and friends got over all right, having a little accident by which a whiffletree was broken.

There was one spot which caused most of the tip-overs and accidents. It is where the new street has been opened through the Omaha addition. There was no snow on this new made street, and it became necessary to turn out and cross a ditch at the side of the road. By striking this squarely one could get over all right, but the least deviation resulted in a tip-over or a break down. It was here that Mayne and Shiver and others met with mishaps.

H. C. Irey, one of the Omaha visitors. lost his horse in a runaway while here and the police are on the lookout for it. The sleigh was capsized by running into a rut, and the occupants thrown out. The animal cleared himself and has not been heard of since. He is described as a dark chestnut sorre pacer, weighing about nine hundred and fifty pounds; had on on harness and bells, and light colored quarter boots in front. By notifying the police of his capture the animal can be speedily returned to his owner.

A Sound of Deviltry By Night.

"I tell you, I didn't sleep much last night," remarked one of the roomers at the Ogden house yesterday. "About 10 o'clock in the evening I looked in to see the Omaha visitors dancing, and there saw what appeared to be a fine set of ladies and gentlemen, and I went up stairs congratulating myself that peace and happiness reigned supreme, and I would get a good night's sleep. I went to my room, on the third floor, and after reading an hour or so, went to bed and to sleep. I was awakened by the most unearthly noises I have ever heard in a hotel. There was smashing of glass, and breaking of commandments evidently. One fellow was kicking at the door of one of the rooms, and shouting, 'Honest to God, if you'll let me in 1 won't do anything. No, I wont throw any water or beer, or anything of that sort. Let me in for heaven's sake. They've thrown beer all over our bed, and we can't sleep there. Let me in!" The kick accompanying the request sounded as if it would smash the door down, but the occupant of the room refused to admit the noisy intruder. This incident, in substance, was repeated several times. Then there would come a crash, such as might result from a beer bottle thrown against a door. Then laughing and whooping and swearing. It was pandemonium let loose. This sort of thing kept up until at least 3 o'clock in the morning. I got up, lighted the gas, looked at the time, and then consoled myself by smoking a cigar. I don't know who they all were, but it was a scene which would have disgraced a bawdy house. In the morning I found the hall looking as if the fellows had tried to break up the house. There were several transoms broken out completely, and one was twisted clear out, frame and all. The glass and bottles and chamberware were scattered all around the hall, and water or beer or both spilled over everything. It was a hard looking sight."

Another of the regular roomers stood it as long as he could, and then slipping on his pantaloous he stepped out into the hall. There was a crowd of about eight or ten, in all the crazy doings of drunken fools, playing base ball with crockery which ought to have been allowed to remain in some quiet corner of the rooms. The indignant roomer yelled at them in a voice of thunder and told them that if they didn't let up he would throw the whole of them out of the window. The irate warning might have had some effect, but one of the party recognized the roomer and cried out "Hello, there's Mac." He hurriedly locked himself in his room, while the crowd went yelling froom door to door in that vicinily, kicking the panels shaking the knobs, and demanding that

'Mac' should come out and join them. Ting-a-ling went the telephone at police headquarters about 8 o'clock.
"Hello! send a policeman up to the Ogden house to take care of some drunken fellows."

Officer Brown responded to the call and on the way was joined by Officer Martin, of the merchants police. They hurried to the third floor of the Ogden house, and arrived just in time to see a man pushed out of one of the rooms into the hallway, his shirt torn from one end to the other, and his only other garment, a pair of drawers, hanging around his ankles and tripping his at tempted steps. A number of the gang rushed about him, while one began to pour something out of a bottle down his back. In another part of the hallway was another portion of the gang scuff ing and yelling. It was such a violent outbreaking of anti-prohibition that the officers were about to arrest the most enthusiastic of the rioters, when they were informed that they were not only Omaha visitors, but city fathers. A the promise was made to quiet down, the officers were lenient, and staggered down stairs under the weight of respecfelt for the city officials of so large a city as Omaha. No record was made on the books at the police station.

"What about the trouble last night on the third floor?" inquired the BEE reporter of the clerk who was supposed to be on duty that night.

"I don't know anything about it. I don't want to know. The less I know about it the better. The matter had better be dropped. You know when the boys are out on a time, they do queer things, but it's all right." "Room 24 is oh the third floor isn't it?"

"Yes, just as you turn around the corner at the head of the stairs." The registry was inspected and showed that there were the following booked for that room: M. Lee, T. J. Lowry, F. E. Bailey, William F. Beche and Pat Ford. "Rather crowded in that room. wasn't it?" "I guess so. I don't know who all was up there. There were eight or ten fellows having a good time, but better not say anything about it."

"Who settled for the damage done to transoms, beas, furniture, walls, etc?

"Oh, they'll look after that all right. There's no use asking me questions, don't know anything."

An Omaha man who chanced to be over on this side, though not one of the aproarous party, briefly pictures a scene which was not down on the bills. He says the president of the body was laid completely out, stiff, and the rest of the gang going to the rear windows of the hall looking out upon the roof, gathered up a quantity of snow and liberally sprinkled the prostrate form of the tired comrade, and then secured a number of candles which they placed about in "wake" form, and then with this as a center for merriment poured forth and poured in libations.

In fact the scene from midnight till or 4 o'clock was one of the most disgraceful that ever characterized a ntght at the Ogden. The managing proprietor of the hotel was away from home, and the clerk is said not to have been in a condition to stay the revelry and deviltry.

The leniency shown by the police was rather remarkable in view of the fact that not many years ago the Omaha po-lice found a Council Bluffs alderman upon the streets of that city just a little off, and insisted on locking him up, without giving any opportunity to give bonds, or even stop on the way to speak to a friendly merchant. It would have been no less than fair play to have treated the noisy Omaha visitors in like

Among the Railroaders. As the BEE man made the tour of the railroad offices of the city yesterday in search of information as to the whereabouts of belated trains, he found it to be the unanimous opinion of the railroad men that the blizzard of Thursday night was the worst that has ever visited this section. Freight traffic was entirely suspended and on some of the roads the passenger trains were abandoned until the storm should cease. The incoming trains on Thursday evening were from one to five hours late on the different roads. Yesterday morning the Burlington and the Northwestern were the only trains leaving on time. The Rock Island left the transfer at the stated time, but proceeded no further than the Main street depot, when it was backed to the transfer to await the arrival of the snow plow, and finally left an hour and twenty minutes late. On the Milwaukee there was neither an arrival nor a departure during the morning, but the evening train left on time. The Wabash pulled out as usual in the afternoon. Owing to the great irregularity of the trains, the mails are in a general mix up. Some of them now go out nearly on time, but it will probably be two or three days before they are all running as usual. Some of the mail that arrived last evening was twenty-four hours late. Business is contracted on all the roads and the effects of the storm will be felt for some time. Local traffic between this city and Omaha was entirely shut off for a period of sixteen hours. The dummy train left at 6:45 o'clock Thursday evening, but that was the last trip until 10:30 o'clock yesterday

Before the Bar. Judge Aylesworth yesterday sent joy to the hearts of three vags by giving abnormal inclinations upon his afflicted them each thirty days in the summery atmosphere of the county jail. They have been longing for such a sentence for some time, and the judge had not the heart to refuse them. In order to make sure of a sentence they had stolen some shoes from a Broadway boot and shoe store, and when their present sen-tence expires they will be tried for larceny. They are the same three who have been lodging in the jail every night, for some time past, and begging on the streets during the day. They bear the historic cognomens of James Doyle, John Kelly and Thomas Whalen. The only thing to be regretted is that the judge did not order their diet to be of bread and water, as that would do much to lesson the attractions of the county bastile for these wandering vagabonds. There was a meeting at the club rooms last evening for the purpose of making arrangements for a return sleighing carnival to Omaha. Did Not Know He Was Shot.

Tombstone Prospector: John Aston he well known cattleman, and W. H. Hartson, superintendent of the Copper King mine, in the Cananeas, left Ochoaville together vesterday and rode down to the custom house, Aston having some business to transact. After Aston had arranged affairs the two started back to Ochoaville. When about seven miles on the other side of that point a flock of crows was noticed near the road, and both Aston and Hartson took shots at them. The birds rose and, circling in the air, alighted on the other side of the road, Aston going between Hartson and the crows. Both men concluded to take another shot apiece, and Hartson, not wanting to fire across his companion reined in his horse and fell behind Throwing his hand to his pistol, Hartson pulled it from its scabbard, in doing which it was discharged. Mr. Hartson states that he has no recollection of cocking the weapon, and does not think that he could have done so without remembering it.

As the weapon was directedly in line with Aston when it was discharged, Hartson immediately asked, "John, did I hit you?" To this Aston replied: 'No," Hartson still not satisfied, said, "Vre you sure?" Aston laughed and again assured Hartson that he was not hit. After riding a short distance further Aston turned to his companion and said, "By George, I believe you did hit me." Getting down from their horses an examination was made and the painful fact elicited that not only was Aston shot, but that he was mortally wounded. The ball from a forty-two calibre had struck him in the small of the back, to the left and about midway between the spinal column and the side passing completely through the body. Hastily binding Aston's wounds, which bled but little, denoting internal hemorrhage, Hartsom mounted his horse and started back to the custom house to procure assistance. Proceeding about a mile he met a wagon cor taining four Americans, and notifying them of the accident, they made all haste to the wounded man. Placing Aston in the wagon, two of the men took the horses belonging to Aston and Hartson and rode ahead to notify Mrs. Aston of the sad affair and send for a physician. Hartson remaining with Aston and ministering to his comfort in every possible way. During the trip into Ochoaville the stricken man suffered a great deal and expressed the opinion several times that his wound was a mortal one. Arriving at Ochoa ville, Hartson at once procured a fresh horse from the Aston herd and started for Tombstone to give himself up, although there was no necessity for it, as the shooting took place in Sonora and of course the authorities of Cochise county have no jurisdiction in the matter. Mr. Hartson is very much depressed over the matter, not only for what will probably prove the death of Aston, but for the additional reason that himself and Aston were the warm-est of friends and had been so for a long

Saved From Death.

Chico Enterprise: On Christmas day an accident occurred at Forest Ranch which for its lucky results reflects credit on the bravery of a gallant young man and saved a young lady from meeting a terrible death by being dashed on the rocks, 200 feet below, in Chico canyon. Sunday afternoon a party of young ladies and gentlemen from Chico, who were visiting friends at Forest Ranch were out on the bluffs just above the house, and among them was a young eastern lady, Miss Nona Ratcliff, of Greenville, O. They were standing on the edge of the bluff, which at this place is about 200 feet high and from where they shelved onward and onward and down for about thirty feet and then abruptly broke into a perpendicular fall to the bottom of the canyon. Miss Ratcliff was out on the extreme edge peering over when her foothold gave way. grasped the edge of the rocks but could not stop herself, and began rapidly falling to what her companions thought a terrible death. She rolled ar far as the shelf of rocks when her dress caught, and she hung there over the vawning gulf almost 200 feet below, expecting death at every moment. Her companions, who were much frightened, at onee realized her alarming position, and the thought of saving her quickly entered their minds. Dispatching one of the young men to the house for a rope, Henry Epperson took off his coat and slowly and cautiously made his way to where the young lady lay. She was pulled from the edge of the bluff, and when the rope came was taken to the top and home. Miss Ratcliffe suffered a spaained ankle, her arm was badly wrenched and she was otherwise bruised. The rescue was a brave and fortunate one, and we congratulate all parties on the escape from a horrible death.

A Hangman's Tale.

London News: James Berry, the public executioner, has confided to a reporter a number of particulars regarding himself, his family and his profession, Berry, we gather, stands No. 14 in the list of twenty-nine children. It will hardly surprise any one to learn that his friends did not approve of his choice of a profession, but all rightfeeling persons will be shocked to hear of the indirect effects of James Berry's relatives. Questioned on this delicate subject, he replied, mournfully: "It killed my mother and brother." Then, with an apparently morbid pleasure, in harrowing details, he went on to say: "When Marwood died I was appointed in his place, and directly my mother knew of it she was taken ill. My father's solicitor then wrote to the home office, informing the authorities of this. result was that I gave up the position, and Binns got the appointment. My mother died soon afterwards, and then, when I saw the way in which Binns was going on, I came to the conclusion that he would not hold the place long, and I again wrote to the home office, stating that my mother was dead, and that there was nothing now to prevent my accommodating them if my assistance should be required. Soon after that I was en-gaged to hang two men in Edinburgh, and I have carried out nearly all the executions since then." The sequel of the tragic tale is yet to tell. "My brother," he went on to say, "had married a girl with plenty of money, and his pride received a blow on my ap-pointment. That was the cause of his death." This, it appears, was the brother who was a "a liberal" and in favor of the abolisment of capital pun-ishment." It must be confessed that this unfortunate member of the Berry family could hardly have given a more emphatic proof of his dislike of the hangman's office. It is to be hoped that we have here reached the final incident in this ghastly tale, though James Berry's final observation, "Altogether I have buried my mother, two brothers and two aunts within the last three years," has a painfully ominous sound.

FUNNY LEGAL NOTICE.

A Poetical Petition for a Divorce From an Unpleasant Woman.

Cincinnati Commercial: For several weeks past Mr. C. H. Etz. of Washington, D. C., a special agent of the United States labor bureau, department of the interior, has been busily engaged col-lecting the divorce statistics of each county in Ohio. While in this city not long ago he gave Joe Plumb, deputy clerk, a copy of a peculiar divorce petition, written in poetry, which he copied from the records of Portage county, this state, this being but one of scores of queer legal documents which he has come across during his research among the records.

This strange old document from Portage county reads as follows: The undersigned, in modest tone, Announces to his wife, who's gone, With deep regret and short discourse, His application for divorce.
