Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 .- The bill was passed reducing the charge for passports from $5 to $1.

The Morning business being finished, the bill for refunding the direct tax of 1861 was taken up, the question being on Mr. Chandler's motion to recommit the bill. The motion was rejected. The amendments to the extended pro visions of the bill to pay the tax collected under the law of 1862 and subsequent laws; restricting the terms of the first section to moneys paid by state treasurers, and inserting in the third section a provision for the return to individuals of sums paid by them; and to repay the income tax collected from military and naval officers during the war, were rejected.

Adjourned.

House. WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.-Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio presented a memorial of the board of centennial commissioners at Marietta, O., in regard to the centennial celebration of the northwestern territories, and it was ordered printed in the Record.

The committee on public lands reported a resolution calling on the secretary of the interior for information as to what legislation is necessary for the disposal of public timber lands so as to secure at the same time the preservation of natural forest lands at the headwaters of navigable rivers and put within the reach of settlers legal means for provid ing themselves with timbers for building and domestic purposes Adopted.

Mr. Plumb of Illinois asked unanimous consent to offer for immediate consideration a preamble and resolution. The preamble recites that the secretary of the treasury. acting in accord with the views of the presi dent, has paid out of the revenues collected from imports the sum of $2,852,015 in premiums to holders of government bonds, assum-ing that in no other way under existing laws can the requirements of the sinking fund bo met but by the terms of the refunding act. All of the bonds called "4 per cents" are pay-able at the pleasure of the United States for thirty years from the date of their issue, a provision which, if understood and acted n in accordance with its manifest wording and intention, makes possible not only the

of those seized. We did not believe the firm on Union square had any evil intent, but we did want to show the wickedness of such pic tures. Thirty-one artists have signed a paper to suppress the society and its agent. Our semies are numerous, chiefly among them the National Defense association, which composed of ex-convicts, abortionists, free thinkers. Among them is a liar and blackguard, whose financial embarrassment seems to be his principal recommendation, judging from his late appeals for money." Right here the citizen referred to arose, in the person of Lum Smith, of Philadelphia, and said: "I am here, Mr. Comstock, to de-Comstock turned to Superintendent Mur-

o you, you may leave the hall. Comstock went on sprinkling pepper this way: "We have convicted many criminals in spite of the daily press and in spite of the monthpiece of our enemies, himself a black guard and liar.

Treasurer Killaen Van Rensselaer then read a report. Referring to Smith he said : "Our splendid work induced such enemies as the disreputable person who stood up there the disreputation person who been a pro-to be more active." President Samuel Colegate said: "I want to defend our agent. He has been a true man. We wish here to support him. He has been accused of receiving blackmail. There

s absolutely no truth in it." The Rev. Dr. Parkhuršt made an address. Of Comstock's theories of art he said: "The hing to look at is whether the pictures would of that one thousand times better than all artists. They see only the beautiful artistic effect. When I go into the houses of our best families I see pictures on the walls. I would not think of looking at them when other people came into the room. Let them a hanished.

Talmage addressed those present as "Friends of home, friends of society, friends of God," and then said: "In thinking of the good work of this society, past and future, although I am not a Methodist, I could shout, I will shout, 'I all, glory to God! Glory to God!' Prevention, not cure, is what we want. Is there any way out for our poor girls who want to be good? Yes, the East river will receive them. Any other way! Yes, the sharp curve on the railroad offers a way. Don't God forgive! Yes, but man don't. Don't the church forgive! It says it will but it don't. God save New York, God save the world !!

Just before the benediction by Rev. Halse; Moore, Lum Smith left the house. He stood at the front door as the people filed out gin his arms he held a bandle of papers which he distributed right and left. He explained to the crowd he was there to convert them, and they would be benefited if they only read his paper. A large and much excited individual placed himself beside Smith and asked: Jsn't that the damnable Philadelphia paper? You have no business here. You belong in helt. Go back to Philadelphia."

Then addressing the people as they came out the fat man cried, "I want you all to know that he is distributing the damnable Philadelphia paper. All you people that war his damnable sheet walk right up and get it. There were shouts of "arcest him." There was no officer in sight. Suddenly a sma SILLA but greatly excited man put himself in front of Smith and began to take off his Throwing his arms tragically up in the air h "As a citizen of New York I arexclaimed: rest you in her name. I wish somebody would hold my umbrella while I arrest that

"Oh, I'll hold your umbrella," said Smith "Where's your warrant?" The small man, who was Comstock's agent.

Joseph A. Britton, again asked for a disin terested person to hold his umbrella, and told Smith he might consider himself under arrest. Smith said, "I guess not," and started toward Third avenue with a crowd at his heels and an officer of the society on each side. Suddenly the crowd closed around him and he was grasped from sides. There were shouts, "duck him," " him in the snow," and it looked for a while as though he would be roughly handled. A Britton buttonholes policeman appeared. him and said, "officer, I want you to arrest that man, He's Lum Smith, and he insulted Superintendent Murray to-night." "Then why don't Superintendent Murray have him arrested !" inquired the cautious policeman. He refused to arrest Smith with-out a warrant and the officious agents of the society were compelled to retire and let Lum go in peace.

A very small child of Mr, Williams also fell through the ce, but was saved by one of the drowning young ladles catching and throwing it out on the ice. Young Williams, brother of the young ladies, saw the trouble and ran to the assistance of the unfortunates, but was soon overpowered by the struggles of those who were drowning and he, too, was drowned. The Union Pacific Road Having a Hard Time of It.

The train dispatcher's office of the Union Pacific railway in the union depot last night was crowded with conductors, engineers and brakemen, who seemed to be greatly interested in the ticking of the telegraphic keys, and appeared somewhat agitated. The bulletin board was covered with instructions to railroad men, and framed in a manner which can only be deciphered by that class. A Bar reporter questioned the men as to the cause of the unusual eathering, and was informed by them that a severe blizzard was raging in the west and that the management o the company was somewhat in doubt as to the practibility and safety by sending out trains, especially freights. Passenger trans were reported away behind time, and as a sample the BEE's informants pointed out that the overland fiver due yeserday morning at a little after 8 o'clock did not get in until late in the afternoon.

The force of the storm is felt chiefly west of Cheyenne, and is rapidly approaching the east with all its wildness and fury. Trains that should have went out for the west early in the evening were held back, awaiting or ders which would be transmited from that point later in the night, and for the time being further information was lacking. At 11:30 a BEE reporter visited the train dispatcher's office and was informed that the reports of early evening had been greatly exaggerated. It was at this time, however, that a storm was raging in the neighborhood of Cheyenne, but its course was not yet di-rected to the east and the management fell ent felt no alarm in dispatching trains. Accordingly there was a general movement, and trains sent out.

Marshal McCracken of South Omaha. made a clever capture last night, and one. that if the facts as stated are borne out by evidence, entitles him to the thanks of all respectable residents. Thomas Lody is the prisoner, and hitherto his chief claim to notoriety has been the fact he consorts with the most vicious of both sexes. The police say he has no visible means of support, but somehow he secured board in the home of a respectable working man. He made use of his time in winning the affections of a fifteenyear-old daughter of his host, and on being forbidden the house, met her clandestinely and arranged for an elopement. She accordingly left for Omaha yesterday morning. and her father, becoming alarmed, on the ndvice of the marshal procured a warrant for the arrest of Lody. That worthy had not left town but the marshal had, and

COLORADO SPRINCS, Colo., Jan. 18.- [Special Telegram to the BEE.]-William Ray, a wellto-do citizen of this place, some six weeks ago left with his wife on a tour of the larger towns of Nex Mexico and southern Colorado, leaving his only daughter, Minulo, and a young lady music teacher, by name Maude Dobson, in charge of the house. The daughter was between fifteen and sixteen years of age. To night while her companion was sleeping Minnie stole from the house and threw herself in front of the engine of the Midland express, which passes here at half-past 11 o'clock. Her head was crushed and torn from the body, death resulting instantly. She left the following letter lying on the table in her room

It was the coolest work imaginable. Last night at 7 she asked her companion to play and sing some hymns to her, a which she sat down and wrote to her, after note and retired to her room. She dressed in her best clothes and then, lying down in bed, waited until she heard the thunder of the ap proaching express, which passes the rear of the house. Pittsburg Dispatch: "I played an enire season with Edwin Booth," said a theatrical man yesterday, "and I can testify that only once I heard the great tragedian swear. it is proverbial that he is not at all addicted to profanity.

"But you heard him swear once? "Yes; he was playing 'Hamlet' to a large but awfully sleepy audience in a town west of Chicago. Usually, if an audience appears to lack appreciation, Mr. Booth's efforts become relaxed, and he drops in a measure from his high histronic plane.

But this night the coldness of the night seemed to drive Mr. Booth to the use of all his powers. He worked harder than usual to provoke applause. It was no use; either there was an unusual number of dunderheads in the audience or the atmospheric circumstances or something else inducea sleepiness where there should have been lit responsive fire. When the curtain fell for the last time Mr. Booth came up to me as he went toward his dressing-room and said:

"By the gods! I'd rather play before a lot of - plates. Yes, and broken plates at that!"

A Cleveland scientist thinks the reason birds can fly is that their flesh and bones are a battery of such a composi-tion that the rapid quivering of the feathers charges the body with negative force, and, in consequence, the wings have but little labor to perform further than to propel and guide the body onward. He thinks this could be proved by harnessing up a flock of wild bigeons and causing them to discharge their electricity into a receiver. By supplying men with a sufficient quantity of electricity, says this Cleveland geentleman, they could be taught to fly. NEW YORK, Jan. 18.-[Special)Telegram to the BEE.]-Whoever, of the large crowd which attended the annual meeting of the society for the suppression of vice, at the association hall, expected a quiet meeting with a suppressed religious air about it, was doomed to disappointment. It was red hot from beginning to end. The beginning was Comstock's reading of his annual report. He traveled along at a good pace from topic to topic, something this way: "The feeling between the police and the society has been most friendly. Some people feared for art last November. The pictures published in a certain evening paper were not reproductions

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE]-There has been a miniature earthquake in the Police Gazette office. Archibald Gordon, editor-in-chief; Arthur Lumley, managing editor: Theodore Butler, superintendent of art department; George McAvoy, artist, and thirteen engravers have left. Richard K. Fox, the proprietor and Jake Kilrain's backer, says he discharged them. They say they resigned after various disagreements, but mainly on account of a difference of opinion over the Smith-Kilrain fight. Gordon said to a reporter: "As ed itor of the paper, I wished to see the Smith Kilrain fight fought to a finish and on its merits. Mr. Fox declined after the draw to to insist on another fight, and gave up the stakes. I have reason to believe that he knew the fight was a fake, or else he was badly handled. Charley Johnston, a friend of Mr. Lumley, and myself went over to see the battle, but were not allowed to be present." The secoders expect to start a new paper. Mr. Fox was asked if the trouble was about the Smith-Kilrain fight. He replied that the fight was not a fake, and he had discharged the editors and artists as a matter of business and to reorganize the staff.

BASE BALL.

The Cowboys Jump to the American Association.

Again there is a stir in base ball circles Kansas City has jumped the Western association and gone into the American, and Kansas City will rue the day she made the jump. It is like matching a street-car horse against Jay-Eye-See, for there are no two ways about it the American association far outclasses the Western as to playing strength, and while the Cowboys could have been up in the lead of the latter organization's chase for the championship pennant, they can't reasonably hope to make anything they can't reasonably hope to make anything but a very poor tail-ender for the former. It would strike an ordinarily posted admirer of the game that Kansas City had had an elegant sufficiency of shabby, slouchy base ball on account of being outclassed. When a member of the National Lengue, and their team then was much stronger than the one engaged for the coming season, they were defented with such an unvarying and monot onous regularity that they were the butt of ridicule of the whole profession, and the ex-perience all but killed the national pastime in the city at the mouth of the Kaw. Menges, the president of the club, may possess some little business astateness, but he makes a lamentable failure of displaying it in this instance, and he will wish he was back in the Western association before the season is a month old. Kansas City's ambition to again get back into one of the older associations has long been suspected, and their procrastination in filing their bond guaranteeing to play the season out has all along given birth to the fear that there was a senegam-bian in the wood-pile. This bond, as is gen-erally known, is $1500, and is filed with the secretary and treasurer of the association for the purpose above named. The other seven clubs promptly filed thems, but Kansas City clubs promptly filed theirs, but Kansas City deferred such action, which is proof sufficient that she has been dickering with the American people ever since the collapse of the Metropolitans, and an eighth chub was to be chosen. The disloyalty of Menges and his followers to the Western association is undentably a blow that will occasion much perpiexity and trouble. They had a strong team in this association, and would have played good ball, and Kansas City, with their club up in the lead, would have been probably the best ball town in the whole circuit. Now the Western is in precisely the same predicament in which the American found itself on the sale of the Metropolitan franchise to Brook-lyn late last fall. They want an eighth club and where they can find a town with the and where they can find a town with the nerve and the money to jump in and fill the vacancy is the question. The Bre man vacancy is the question. Thes BEE man called on Dr. Worley, the local secretary, this morning and found him in anything but an angelic humor over the Cowboys desertion. He thinks, however, that the hole thus occa-sloned can be filled without much exertion.

they fought, Smith is naturally surprised to see a challenge from Davis.
