Money to loan on improved city prop-erty by W. S. Cooper, 130 Main street. Go and hear the St. Cecelia quartette to-night at Congregational church. Admission 50 cents.

The concert by the Congregational church choir to-night will be one of the finest ever given in Council Bluffs by either home or foreign talent.

J. J. Stewart and Sarah Stewart, of Omaha, were married by Squire Schurz yesterday afternoon. Mr. Stewhrt is uite well known on this side of the river.

There will be a social given in the parlors of Masonic hall this evening under the auspices of Harmony chapter No. 25, O. E. S. All members are cordially invited.

The funeral of Louis Bierworth took place at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Knights of Pythias, to which order the deceased belonged, attended in a body, and conducted the services. The remains were interred in Fairview.

The ice on the river is now too soft to harvest, and is only ten inches thick where it was twenty-two two weeksago. On this account Mulholland & Nicholas will have to fill twenty cars for the deaf and dumb institute from their houses.

Henry Marr has sold to Michael Far-rell, of Illinois, a half interest in his bottom property for $1,250. Marr is one of the so-called "squatters," who has been living near the river for years, and whom those claiming to own land are trying to compel to move off.

The Boston Tea company's store, of which William Richmond and George Fulton are the proprietors, was in the hands of the sheriff yesterday, but no interference was made with the usual business. The firm seem confident that they can adjust their matters so as to be able to recover.

There seems to have arisen in the minds of many a misunderstanding in regard to J. K. Cooper, the county su-perintendent of schools. That worthy gentleman has not resigned that position, and the confusion must have arisen from the fact that he recently resigned his position as teacher in the city schools.

The first excursion for Sutherland, Florida, will leave over the Wabash on Thursday, February 9, at 3:40 p.m. All who desire to accompany the excursion should make application for tickets and sleeping car accommodations to J. C. Mitchell, agent Wabash Ry., corner Fifth and Broadway, Council Bluffs, Ia.

On January 1, 1888, the board of directors of the Council Bluffs water company met in New York. It was then decided to increase the capital stock from $750,000 to $1,000,000. Yesterday a certificate of amendment to the original articles, of incorporation was filed with the county clerk, making this increase. This action was necessary to cover the necessities of the future growth of the city.

THE POLICE ARE MORE QUIET. There seems to be much misunderstanding in regard to the secretaryship of the board of trade. Some of those Organization of the New Bank-Anwho subscribed express indignation that such a man has not been selected as was contemplated in the organization of the board. This natural indignation is the result of a misapprehension. In the evening the Salvation army started out for their nightly whirl with full band and colors flying, but found the Broadway mud too deep for even their high pressure enthusiasm to battle against, so they took the sidewalk. Chief of Police Mullen could not submit to such proceedings, so he marshalled the base drummer to the police station. The whole outfit followed and gave bonds for the victim's appearance in court this morning. The event served as a great "ad" for the army, as their hall was crowded at the evening meeting. The two crooks, Corrigan and Sloan who are now in the county jail awaiting the return of Judge Aylesworth from Des Moines to be tried for the lar-

It seems that they went to the tailor shop of Mr. Ritzenboff, on South Main street, and told him that a man in the county juil would soon be released and wanted him to come up and measure him for a suit of clothes. The tailor started right up to jealousy and bitterness. One of the complicating features of the affair seems of the situation to take a bolt of cloth

The Rothschilds and the Metternicks

-The Ugliest of Women.

Paris correspondence of the New York World: The emperor of Austria has declared the Baroness Albert de Roths-child hoffahig! Although she lives in Niennd, Parisians take great interest in this event, for the baroness is daughter of the Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, the autocrat of Paris. In order to understand the value of this new title we must explain shat it means simply that the descendants of the Frankfort banker are now considered worthy to receive invitations to court balls and entertainments. All the ceremonials at Vienna are borrowed from the Spanish court, and everything is conducted with rigorous formality. To be hoffahig sixteen quarterings are required from all ladies except the Hungarians, who, for some reason, are admitted within the charmed circle although they may possess but eight of the quarterings demanded. The emperor cannot make one hoffahig, but he can recognize Hoffahigkeit. Titled parents in Vienese society never accept as daughters-in-law those who have not incontestable right to the honors of the court, and children who make mesalliance are "cut off" without the proverbial shilling.

The Rothschilds are an exceptional family, for although they have received titles because of their vast wealth, still in every part of Europe they have proved themselves worthy of the highest social favors.

In Vienna the court balls begin at o'clock and end at midnight; the first, called the Hofball, is official, and to this about three thousand people are invited. The second, called the Ball bei Hofe or Kammerball, has the appearance of a private ball, and for this only 1,000 invitations are issued. At these balls five immense salons are converted into refreshment rooms, and at 11 o'clock supper is served for the guests. Royal princesses and ambassadors and ambassadresses alone are seated next to the emperor and empress, and etiquette is strictly observed in the placing of each guest. Since 1856, the year of her mar-riage, Princess Pauline de Metter-nich has been the leader of Viennese society, but Paris is the city of her Here, after 1850 she came a ambassadress, and for ten years of the empire, she charmed Parisians by her wit and talent. She sang and played, danced and conversed, until her popu larity became very great. Music she prefers to all arts, and she places it above everything in this world. All modern languages are familiar to her, and although she writes French with the implicity of Mme. de Sevigne, she has never been able to conquer the participles. We all know how in 1861, notwithstanding the opposition of the emperor and the entire city, she insisted that Wagner's operas should be performed before the Parisians. And when at the performance of "Tannhauser" the audience did not attempt to restrain its fury she leaned far out of her box, in her excitement, shook her broken fan before the enemies of her favorite, and cried: "What you burn to-day you will adore to-morrow."

Princess de Metternich is one of the ugliest women we can possibly imagine; she said of herself when in Paris: "I am the best dressed monkey in the city;" and she really had the courage to of Ugl club in which there were only five members. In 1884 I received an invitation to meet the Princess de Metternich, who was spending a few days in Paris. I had the curiosity to read everything I could out of the way. This case will also be find relative to her life in Paris, personal appearance, etc. An enthusiastic person who must have wished some fovor from her highness had written the description that fell under my eyes: 'Blonde hair, whose heavy rings fall upon ravishing shoulders; fine, large expressive eyes, mouth denoting wit and gayety, a delicious physiognomy, in-born elegance and the incomparable grace of a figure unique in its flexible

It is probable that the First ward is best entitled to their votes.

Warren Haney and Albert Kosser, the two boys who were arrested for stealing cigars from Larsen's store on lower Broadway, were tried yesterday before Justice Schurz. Haney seemed to be the principal offender, and has been in the same fix several times before. The 'squire read the riot act with all the variations and told them to beware of the next time. They promised to do better and were discharged.

Marshal Guanella has instructed his deputies to notify the merchants who are obstructing the sidewalks with boxes and barrels that they are violating a city ordinance, and to see that the nuisance is abated. He should also give his attention to some of the awnings on Broadway that have a peculiar habit of knocking a man's hat off when he tries to pass under them. The city ordinances provide that these awnings shall be seven feet from the sidewalk but in many instances they are barely six.

Theodore Beckman, who has been looking about for a good location to start a harness shop and horse goods store, has wisely concluded that he can find no better place than his old home, Council Bluffs, a decision which his many friends will gladly approve. He has leased the store, No. 205 Main street, recently vacated by Jones & Shugart. He will proceed to fit up and stock up at once, and will doubtless find stock up at once, and will doubtless find his old friends and acquaintances speedily shoving in orders upon him. He has lived here for twelve years, is thoroughly practical and skillful in his line, having been engaged in it since boyhood.

me?" replied the princess, before all the servants. "I am always early enough to hear all that the emperor has to say." The annoyed archduke said nothing, but when supper was announced he sent his aide-de-camp to say to the princess that because she attached so little importance to the conversation of the emperor he had given her place at his majesty's table to another lady.
