THE COUNCIL IS SUSTAINED.

Opinion of the Supreme Court in the Martin Case.

OTHER DECISIONS RENDERED.

More Petitions From Mismated Mortals Who Pine For Single Blessedness Again-Meeting of the Transportation Board.

[FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.] A decision in the case of Martin vs the state was handed down by the supreme court yesterday, which contains an important interpretation of the Slo-

Martin operated the saloon in the St. Charles hotel in this city, and last summer was found guilty in police court of violating the state law and ordinance. The police judge certified to the council the conviction, and that body, under the provisions in the Slocumb law, declared Martin's license forfeited. The case was taken on an appeal to the district court and heard by Judge Chapman, who held that it was the duty of the council to revoke the license, and that hearing on the question of revoca-tion was necessary. Upon this finding tion was necessary. Upon this finding in the district courtan appeal was taken to the supreme court, and the decision offirming the lower court was handed lown yesterday. The decision is as fol-

Martin vs State. Error from Lancaster county. Affirmed. Opinion by Reese,

1. Section 92 of chapter 13 of the compiled statutes of 1887, governing cities of the first class in this state, provides that the license of a person selling intoxicating liquors shall be revoked by the mayor and council upon conviction of the licensee of any violation of any law, ordinance or regulation appertaining to the sale of such liquors. Where the helder of a license was convicted of the violation of the law pertaining to the sale of intoxicating liquors in the police court of the city of Lincoln, and the fact of such conviction was duly certified by the police judge to the mayor and council, it was held: First, That the mayor and council were authorized and required to revoke the leaves. authorized and required to revoke the license; second, that no notice to the licensee of such proposed action was necessary; third, that such revocation could be declared by resolu-tion, and that the passage of an ordinance was not necessary.

2. In such case, where the resolution directed the marshal to notify the licensee that the license had been revoked by the mayor and council, there could be no presumption that the mayor was not present at such meeting, it being his official duty to pre-side at all meetings of the council. (Maxwell, J., dissents.)
3. Section 92, chapter 13, Compiled Statutes of 1887 held constitutional.

Bookwalter vs Lansing. Appeal from Lan-caster county. Affirmed. Opinion by

Reese, Ch. J.

1. Where an agent for the sale of real estate conceals from his principal material facts relative to the value of the property to be sold, and by a subterfuge fraudulently purchases the property from his principal in the name of another for less than its value, the principal may, by proper proceedings in equity, rescind the sale and require a reconveyance of the property from the agent. But this rule would have no application if the agent, in good faith and without any design to obtain the property for himself, sold it to a purchaser, reported the sale to his principal, giving the terms and conditions thereof, and after the ratification of the sale by the principal, purchased the land from the party to whom it had been sold and received a con-veyance from him, no fraud having been perpetrated against his principal.

2. Questions of fact are for the trial court to determine, and a decision thereon will not manifestly wrong, Lavender vs Holmes and Boggs. Appeal from Lancaster county. Reversed and de-cree for plaintiff. Opinion by Reese, Ch. J. 1. Plaintiff instituted his action in the district court to quiet his title to certain real estate to which defendants claimed title tiff. The deed to defendants from their grantor, by error in description, included a part of plaintiffs and not included in the sheriff's deed. Held, that plaintiff was en-

be molested by an appellate court unless titled to a degree quieting his title to that part not conveyed by the sheriff. 2. Plaintiff, who was a defendant in cer-tain foreclosures and execution proceedings, employed an attorney to represent him therein. While under such employment and after the sale of plaintiff's real estate, the at-torney entered into a stipulation with the attor neys for the execution plaintiffs, by which it was agreed that the sheriff's sales should be confirmed and deeds executed to the purchasers. With some knowledge of the facts, plaintiff continued the attorney in his emplaintiff continued the attorney in his employ. It was held that plaintiff could not maintain an action to quiet his title against subsequent purchasers of the real estate for value, upon the ground of fraud and conspiracy on the part of his attorney with the attorneys for the execution plaintiffs, without proving that the defendants had knowledge of such alleged fraud prior to the purchase of the land and the reavent therefor, even the land and the payment therefor, even though they held title by deed which did not contain the usual covenants of warranty.

NUMEROUS PLEAS FOR DIVORCE As the time for the sitting of the dis trict court approaches the pleas for divorce multiply. Yesterday three additional cases were filed. In the case of Minnie Dodge vs Lyman H. Dodge, the plaintiff alleges that they were married at Sturgis, Mich., in 1882; that in 1883 her husband violently abused her, striking her in the face with his fist and calling her vile names. This practice he continued at frequent intervals and finally deserted her in November, 1887, and has since absented himself, compelling her to support herself. Benjamin F. Beckett sues for divorce from his wife, Florence Beckett. He says that they were married in 1886 in Brooklyn, N. Y. On the 31st day of January last, the plaintiff affirms, and continuously since to the filing of this petition, his wife has been guilty of adultery with O. C. Sturnes at 1413 and 1423 Jackson street, Omaha. The real name of Sturnes, the plaintiff states, is unknown to him, and he further states that his wife has been guilty of adultery preceding this time for three months past in Lancaster county.

TRANSPORTATION MEETING. The state board of transportation met yesterday in an adjourned session from the week previous. The Biggs complaint for over charges made by the B. & M. on shipments between Minden and Heartwell, was set for hearing at the rooms of the board, Thursday next. The clerk was instructed to correspond with different boards of trade throughout the state relative to the question of these bodies co-operating with the board of transportation in the work of issuing a new railroad map of the state, each place to receive copies for general use in proportion to the amount invested in the work. Following this the board passed the remainder of the day in an informal discussion of freight rates and the proper reduction to be put into effect. Secretary Mason has prepared a new freight schedule which is tically identical with the rates in force in Iowa prior to the recent reduction in that state. The discussion was largely upon this proposed rate sheet and the secretaries will ask the board at an early day to endorse the tariff rates

A NEBRASKA WOMAN.

Starting For Europe She Lands in New Jersey Jail.

New York Herald: That is a very pathetic story of Mrs. Catherina Wag-ner, the wife of the wealthy Nebraska farmer, who was released from the Hudson county jail four days ago, where she had been incarcerated as an insane person since December 12, 1887.

A woman leaves her home in a distant western town full of hopes and in the best of health, with nothing to prepecupy her but bright expectations, joy and happiness, to revisit her native country, where she was not only to have the pleasure of seeing many dear old friends, whose memory she had cherished for a score of years or more, but where she was also to receive a legacy of some $9,000. She parts with her children and husband with affection and anticipates a most enjoyable trip.
In order to make her journey comfortable and to divest it of those little annovances incident to travel, her husband provides her with a return ticket, which was to have taken her to her destination and back home. She arrived in Hoboken after three days' travel from Hooper, Dodge county, Neb. She goes to the office of the North German Lloyd Steamship company in Hobokeu and sees Agent Bley. She wants to exchange her ticket, as is required by the company. The steamer she was to have taken has been withdrawn. She must wait for the next. Meanwhile she leaves her ticket with the agent, saying she would return the next day for the exchanged ticket. She disappears and nothing is heard of her until about seven weeks later, when she is discovered in the Hudson county jail, whither she has been sent as an insane person by the Hoboken authorities.

Then there is a great to do about her case. Yet, on investigation, but one conclusion is possible, and that is that the unfortunate woman suddenly became insane shortly after her arrival in

Sergeant Marvell, of the Hoboken police station, who committed Mrs. Wagner, told a Herald reporter:

"The woman was brought here by Poiceman Kenny, who arrested her at the ferry, at the request of one of the employes of the North German Lloyd steamship company. She had behaved in such a manner that the company refused to let her go on the steamer. Her mind was certainly unbalanced when she was brought here. She appeared lonesome. Officer Kniser, the court interpreter, tried to get some information from her, but she talked so incoherently through a line of conveyances originating in | that nothing could be gained by questhat she came from Nebraska. moaned and wrung her hands con-stantly, and walked to and fro in her We kept her here for twenty-four hours, and then sent her to the county jail for ten days, where she was to be examined as to her sanity." Mr. Bley, the Hoboken passenger agent of the steamship company, was asked: "Is it true, Mr. Bley, that your company refused to allow Mrs. Wagner to board the steamer because she was insane?" "No, sir, it is not," was the answer. 'She called here on her arrival from Nebraska to change her ticket. She was to have gone on the Eider on December 17, but that steamer was withdrawn, necessitating her waiting for the Traave. She left her ticket with me, saying she would return the next day, and I never saw her afterward till February I, when I was instrumental in getting her out of jail. I gave her a ticket to get back to Nebraska, and she ought to be there by 8 o'clock to-night. 'I am sure she never was insane. She was only excited over the expectation of seeing the old country again. We gave her in charge of the con-

As this did not agree with the police account, the reporter called at Judge Nelson's office. The judge has been credited with having been the main factor in effecting Mrs. Wagner's re-lease. He was absent, but his brother, who represents him, said:

"A prisoner named Basso, who had just served his sentence, came to us and told us that a Mrs. Wagner, a perfectly sane woman, was detained in the county jail as an insane person. We immediately interested ourselves in the case, neither knowing or caring whether we would ever be remunerated for our services. My brother saw her in jail and concluded at once that she was sane. She told him a pitiful story. He at once took measures to secure he release, which was effected on the 1st inst.

"I myself saw her after her release. and I can swear she was perfectly sane and rational. We at once telegraphed to her husband, stating the facts of the case. He answered immediately, expressing great surprise, as he thought she was in Germany by that time, and telling us that anything we would do for her comfort and return home would be handsomely remunerated by the Nebraska State bank. 'I saw a letter she wrote home while in jail inquiring about the children— how they had enjoyed their Christmas, if they had had a Christmas tree, etc., and it was as rational a letter as you or I could write. She is a woman of appearance, and speaks English very Jailer Birdsall of the Hudson county jail said: "That woman was insane be-yond a question. She would tear her clothes off and appear in the corridors. She tore her shawl into shreds, and screamed nearly all the time. I don't think she is sane yet by any means, although somewhat improved. After she had been here about ten days she was able to tell us where she belonged.

Then the doctor ordered her release. "We did not send her to the insane asylum because she was a non-resident, and because she was just as well off here. She spoke English fairly well, and had occasion to communicate with from thirty to one hundred persons daily. If those 'fake' journals go far enough for me to reach them, I will attend to their case in a jiffy."

OVER $7,000 IN THE "BEE" FUND.

Want to Make a Change. LOUP CITY, Neb., Feb. 9.-To the Editor of the BEE: Our citizens who contributed the $54.25 to the Bgg fund for Miss Etta Shattuck request that this sum be converted to the fund for the benefit of Miss Loie Royce, who is now in a much more deplorable con-dition than Miss Shattuck would have been.

Minnie Freeman. A large photo of Miss Minnie Freeman with her sod school house and the pupils whom she saved from the great storm will be sent prepaid for $1.00 each, $8.00 per dozen, $50.00 per hundred. Address The Quiz, Ord,

At the Christian Church. The ladies of the First Christian church of Omaha will give a supper and social at their church Friday evening for the benefit of the Loie Royce fund. Every one who can should attend. This is the first church in Omaha to take active steps toward aiding this worthy cause and the ladies of the First Christian church are entitled to great credit for their kindness and generosity.

The Churches.

To the Editor of the BEE: In response to your suggestion that the churches take a colection for the heroic school teachers who suffered in the late blizzard, the First Baptlst church, on last Sabbath complied with the request and we enclose check for $33.00. Please give half to Miss Royce and the other half to the little girl, Lena Woeb-becke. A. W. Laman, Pastor. Mis Royce's Teacher. PIERCE, Neb., Feb. 8.-To the Editor of the BEE: As the wires bring the news of Etta Shattuck's death, we wait with anxiety for them to bring tidings from our dear Loie Royce, who has passed through the severe ordeal of amputation. I am a humble teacher, with but little to give, but I cannot refrain from expressing my since thanks to you for your untiring and highly successful efforts in behalf of these dear girls. Miss Shattuck has passed beyond earthly aid to an eternal rest, but the substantial recognition of her bravery and suffering should go on, until the dear ones for whom she gave up her young life, are supplied with every comfort she would have given them had she the means. Miss Loie has been a dearly loved pupil of mine, and one I could admire as well as love, for such was her desire to acquire an educa-tion, that she came on her pony six miles every morning and returned in the evening. She is a handsome girl, the only child of pool but highly respected parents, who, I think looked to her for help, the mother being in poor health. She is truly deserving of al that the liberal citizens of Nebraska can defeat the liberal citiz for, and we hope she may live to enjoy th benefits of their liberality.

Mrs. W. W. Quiver.

The Nebraska Press. NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Feb. 8.-To the Editor of the Bee: We hand you herewith our check for $204.25, being the amount in full of the Press fund collected for the benefit of the late Miss Etta Shattuck. We believe that it is the wish of those who have contributed, as is certainly the right thing, that the money should go to those whom she loved best and who were dependent upon her for support.

who were dependent upon her for support, and entrust you with it with the understanding that it shall be so devoted. Nebraska City has done something for the BEE fund before, General Van Wyck sending $50 and Colonel W. L. Wilson $5, while the purses of $112 and $57.21 were sent direct, the latter being from the pupils of the public schools. This remittance makes the total of Nebraska City's contribution $428.46. FACTS FOR THE FARMER.

Dairying on Small Farms. Philadelphia Record: Dairying and pasturing have been so long considered as one and the same occupation that but few farmers will venture to engage in the former without first devoting a large portion of the farm to grass upon which the cows may be allowed to graze during the day. When this method is changed for that of feeding at the barnyard it is termed "soiling" the cows. Even those who do not believe soiling can be done profitably; involuntarily practice the soiling method to a certain extent during the winter months, for at that time the snow covers the pasture ground and compels the dairyman to prepare food for the cows and give them his attention in the barn-yard. The principle objection to soiling is that it requires a large outlay for extra labor, yet there is as much profit derived from winter dairying as there is during the summer. The real benefit is in the saving of manure, which is the most important occupation on the farm, and the expense of providing long fences is done away with. Practical experiments show that by the aid of the manure saved when soiling a sufficiency of green food can be grown on a small feed quite a number of cows, as well as to provide a better variety of food and secure greater yields of milk and butter. Prof. Stewart, in his book on feeding animals, mentions how he fed four horses and seven cows for fifteen days on the food grown upon forty rods of ground; and he has estimated that forty rods will produce enough to equal the summer feeding of one cow, but sets aside half an acre in clover as the allowance for a cow during the summer. This result is not the experiment of a single season, but the work of fourteen years devoted to soiling, by which method the cows give 20 per cent more milk than when kept on pasture; and rye, clover, orchard grass, timothy green oats and fodder corn, with ground grain when required, compose the daily diet. The system is one that permits of the gradual accumulation of wealth in the annual increased fertility of the soil, and though extra labor may be necessary, yet it is more effectual in operation, as it is not distributed over a large space, consequently there is economizing in hauling loads to great distances over the fields. Soiling may not be profitable to those who have plenty of pasture and large tracts of land, but it will enable those having limited areas to engage in dairying, when, by the proper application of labor, they may realize larger profits than those who devote more land to dairying but adhere to the pasturage system. Flax as a Profitable Crop.

Practical Farmer: Flax is not extensively cultivated in the United States. It can be made a profitable crop, however, owing to the high prices obtained for the seed, while the fiber may also be made a matter of profit. Those who grow flax claim that it is easy of cultivation and subject to but few obstacles, while the crop may be sown and harvested within three months. It grows best on a mellow soil, but will grow on any soil that produces wheat, corn, oats or potatoes. In preparing the soil it should be well plowed and harrowed till fine and level. The best fertilizer is wood ashes or potash salts. About three pecks of seed are required for an acre, and the yield usually averages fifteen bushels, the market price ranging from $1.30 to $2 per bushel, according to de-

In putting down a crop of flax great care should be exercised in selecting good sound seed that is perfectly free from the seed of weeds, or there will be trouble when the crop is matured, the seeds of weeds not being as easily sepoats, and it is best to secure European grown seed if possible. The crop should be sown as early in the spring as the land will permit, but slight early frosts are not injurious. If the crop cultivated for the fiber two bushels of seed should be used. If grown for seed three pecks are sufficient, while if cul-tivated for both fiber and seed one bushel will answer. The crop is cut when the lower leaves of the plant begin to wilt and drop off, the stalks then be ginning to turn to a light yellow and the seed bolls slightly brown. A scythe of any kind of reaper may be used for cutting, the stalks being bound in bundles and stacked for threshing. With our ordinary threshers the fibre is injured, but it answers for such purposes as making bagging, upholstery towl twine, etc., its value ranging from $3 to $5 per ton, though if properly pre-pared, with delivery at linen factorics, the fibre sells for about $25 per ton. The former treatment of flax was to rot it in order to separate the fibre, but invention now enables the grower to market the entire salk, providee it is not broken, as the factories can in a few hours do the entire work which usually required many days, a chemical process enabling the manufacturers to shake from the fibre all unvailable material.

Leaving out the value of the fibre entirely, flax is a better crop than wheat, for the yield of seed is nearly the same as that of wheat, while the value is nearly double. It is considered a very sure crop, and grows in so short a period of time as to allow of a crop of turnips following it. An acre will produce two tons of straw, which can be sold, even in its inferior condition, for more than the cost of the labor. A bushel of seed will produce two gallons of oil, and the refuse is the celebrated oil cases now universally used for feeding. The crop is no morse exhausting to the soil than one crop of wheat or oats. We bring up the subject of flax be-cause late improvements enable the farmer to grow the crop and realize from both the seed and the straw, provided the seed is separated without injuring the straw. This enables the crop to be placed among the standards to assist in the regular rotation. Considering that its fibre, refuse straw, seeds and oil are all salable, it equals the cotton crop for this various purposes, with the advantage of being grown easier than cotton, and in a much shorter time, not omitting the fact also that it can be grown in many sections where cotton could not exist. In proportion to cost of production, it can be made more profitable than any of the field crops now grown may be naturally vicious, but nearly always viciousness is the result of ill treatment. Calving is a severe nervous strain, and leaves the cow nervous and irritable. If the calf is her first one she is very much afraid that it will be injured; in this she is like all young mothers. Milking is an entirely new operation to her; likely drawing the milk from her udder gives her pain. Her condition, her fears, and the operation, all call for the exercise of the greatest patience and gentleness. But instead her solicitude for her calf is resented; if she shows shyness when it is attempted to milk her-an operation which she knows nothing of, and which her instinct to nourish her offspring would cause her not to submit to readily—she is scolded; if the pain caused by the milk being drawn leads her to kick she is kicked in return. Thus her fright and nervousness are increased and soon she is angered. If this treatment is continued she is made vicious; and we have never known of a heifer being conquered in this way. Her temper is rained; and a cow no matter how liberal a milker she may be, is fit for the shambles only if she is vicious. It is no rare thing for a man to throw $50 to the wind by striking a young cow. Some years ago we bought five heifers about to calve, and that had never been handled, and the plan we adopted has proven so satisfactory that we have made use of it on like occasions ever since. We built a high pen, ten feet square, of rails, driving a stake down outside of each corner, to make the pen secure, and making a "slip gap" in one side.

The calf, when a day old, was set in the pen, the gap being open. The mother at once followed the calf. Then the calf was taken out of the pen and the gap closed.
Next we entered the pen, speaking gently all the time to the gap. gently all the time to the cow. As soon as we laid our hand on her side she started to run around the pen. could keep our hand on her side by moving in a much smaller circle, and soon she tired herself out and stopped. Then we patted her flank lightly, spoke to her gently, and soon could put our hand on any part of her body. But when we grasped a teat the trip around the pen began, but soon we could handle her udder without any remonstrance from her. When we tried to draw the milk there was a third trip around the pen, and this terminated as the others had, and in half an hour after the cow had walked into the pen she was milked clean, and without a barsh word or a blow. In three days the cow could be milked anywhere in the lot. We have broken (if broken is the proper term to use) upward of a score of heifers since then that gave evidence of being ripe for viciousness, and better dispositioned cows we never had. Of course, all heifers should be handled until they are quite gentle; yet very few will never have occasion to put to good use the plan above given.

Hints and Suggestions. Every hen-house should be kept as warm as possible. Eggs cannot be got when they sell highest unless the poultry be fed comfortable and fed properly. The following is said to be an excellent food for boars: Take corn and rye, or wheat, of each one part, and oats four parts. Grind this fine, and to it feed. There is just as much in knowing how to feed hens as there is in knowing how to feed any other farm stock. This is the next important item to look after as soon as good houses shall have been provided.

add as much bran as there is of the

At the late convention of farmers at Hartford, Conn., Professor Alvord remarked that the influence of the breed on the constitution of butter was of the highest order, and that food was of comparatively small effect.

To sum up profitable stock farming in a few words: Breed good stock, horses, cattle, sheep and swine; feed, water and shelter them properly and hygienibally, and do not too much put your whole energy upon one kind of stock. Of two colts similar in disposition and sense, one may develop into a steady and valuable family horse, while the other may be everything that is vicious, treacherous and unsafe-all because of a difference in the men handling them. Fowls cannot possibly thrive and do well if they be compelled to stand around in the mud and filth all day long. They must have a place to scratch and exercise. The horse stable is a most excellent place for them to range in if allowable. What the colt wants is plenty of exercise, a clean place to sleep, shelter from bitter storms, plenty of good grass of different varieties, good clean hay with-out dust, and good, sound oats. Colts raised in this way will not look so well nor win as many premiums, nor sell for as much money, but they will last. There is no standard percentage of butter as to milk. Milk varies in the amount of butter it contains during the season. In the autumn, when cows give less milk, the percentage of butter is twice as much as it is when the flow is the greatest. Cows differ, as it takes all the way from five pounds to twentyfour pounds of milk to make one of but-

Prof. Henry, of the university of Wisconsin, who is well know as a conservative and careful agricultural experimenter, advises, where cornstalks are to furnish the principal rough food, the following as a day's ration for a cow, to be fed at two or three feeds: Corn stocks cut, fifteen to eighteen pounds; clover hay, five pounds; bran, six pounds; corn meal, four pounds.

The practical benefit to be derived from raising good stock depends, among other things, upon the treatment to-ceived at the owner's hands. Blood and breeding and rare natural capacity are powerless to contribute to successful stock raising unless accompanied by the co-operation of humane thoughtfulness, intelligent management and regular care. Merit is not proof against neglect, starvation and abuse.
