The United States courts meet here March 26. The juries will be drawn next week.

W. H. Bradley, the up town grocer, is preparing to build a large store building this spring.

A runaway car took a wild roll down the coal chute at the transfer, colliding with another car and derailling it.

Unity Guild gave a pleasant social, with a musical programme last evening, at the home of Mrs. Charles Swan on State street.

The Milwaukee & St. Paul is building a fine new elevator at Weston. It is to be completed within sixty days, and is to be occupied by Mr. Dillon, of Neola.

There are now thirty men at work on the building.

The recent find of coal near this city has not been lost sight of, but little more could be done. As soon as practicable steps will be taken to follow up the find, and determine just how much there is to it.

That there is coal is settled. The question remains whether it is in sufficient quantities to pay to work. It is believed by many that it is abundant, and of good quality.

There is something rather strange about the city's gas bills for the month of January, in the fact that they are considerably larger than for the month of December.

The gas bill for the patrol house for December was about $16 and for January it was about $27. The days are getting longer, but the amount of the gas bill is increased. It is the same for the various fire houses and the city jail.

The same number of burners are used, and the extra amount is hard to be accounted for.

Squire Biggs says he is through issuing warrants for the arrest of persons unless there is some urgent and plain reason for so doing, or unless the county attorney orders the issuance. It has got to be a common practice for an appeal to be made to the strong arm of the criminal law every time a petty officer or a sudden anger dictates, or to collect bills when the civil process would settle up with the contractor.

There have been several instances in which persons have been arrested for obtaining goods under false pretenses, in which all that was desired was to get the bill paid. The person arrested would settle up with the contractor, and then the case would be dropped, leaving the county to pay the costs. In some few cases the complainant has settled the costs, but this is the exception. The present justices are inclined to follow the same policy as that of Squire Biggs, and the county board is prosecuting the taxpayers by refusing to allow any such bills.

THE NEWS IN THE BLUFFS.

The Cases in Court Drag Along Very Slowly.

THE TEST OF A BLUFFS ENGINE.

A Coat Thief Collared—The Electric Light—Mayor Rohrer's Generosity Played Upon—Brief Bits of News.

Afraid of Fire.

The rooms of the Council Bluffs club are lighted by a sort of gasoline mixture, which is stored in a tank on the top of the building. The underwriters are just looking into the matter, and say that unless there is a change made the insurance companies will put rates on property in that vicinity a good deal higher than the tank is. Chief Templeton is also taking a hand in the matter, for if a fire should occur there it would be difficult for the firemen to accomplish anything where the blaze would be fed by nearly one hundred gallons of this gasoline mixture. The matter is attracting much attention, and the club is in favor of making a change. Looked at from merely a financial point of view, the increase in insurance rates would be too heavy to make a continuance of the method practicable.

The manufacturers of this new system of gas lighting declare that there is not any danger, and that the alarm is needless. The matter is to be investigated, and the real degree of safety or danger can easily be determined.

For Rent.—Part of my office, No. 606 Broadway, opposite new postoffice. Dr. C. B. Judd.

Testing a Home Made Engine.

Unlike some of our business men the Council Bluffs water works in place of sending away for a new steam engine, placed their order with the Ogden Iron works, of this city, and have reaped a just reward as shown by the tests made within the past few days. So well satisfied is the management of the water company that they claim to have the most economical engine in this part of the country. The engine is covered by the patents of Mr. Ferris Ogden, and is not only beautiful to look at, but operates with accuracy. During the test the load was taken off the engine by the pumping of all the water out of the lake, and notwithstanding the revolutions of the engine were counted, no difference was apparent in the speed. This is to show how beautifully Mr. Ogden's governor works. The test demonstrated that with properly constructed machinery Council Bluffs has a just position as one of the most advantageous points in the country for manufacturing purposes. Here is the result: One hundred horse power can be produced at any point in this city (where it is not necessary to shift cars off the road they came in upon) for 17 cents per hour for fuel. Think of running 100 horse power during ten hours for $1.70. Surely Council Bluffs has a future. The test results in the demonstration of a fact which should be most encouraging to manufacturing here. If any one is sufficiently interested Mr. Birkinbine will be most happy to show all the figures and details of the test to any one calling upon him at the water company's office.

Children's day this afternoon at the museum. School children under 12 years 5 cents.

Collared a Coat.

Some time during Thursday night or early Friday morning a fellow by the name of B. F. Mead, stopping at the Durgan house, on South Sixth street, appropriated an overcoat belonging to another boarder and departed. As soon as the loss was discovered the police were notified, and Chief Mullen began a search for him. Bailiff Wall McFadden, of the district court, was furnished with a description of the man, and found him about half past 8 in front of Goldberg's, on a brick building near Broadway, with the coat in his possession, waiting for the place to open. He was taken into custody and a charge of larceny from a building entered against him. As the witnesses could not be secured yesterday the hearing was postponed, and the case was tried before Judge Aylesworth to-day, but the prisoner waived examination and the case goes to the grand jury. The defendant has been hanging around the transfer for several days, and was ordered away from there Thursday by the deputy police. His face bears the marks of an unsuccessful pugilistic encounter, and he is altogether a tough-looking specimen. There seems to be no question as to his guilt in stealing the coat, and his chances are very good for a term in the pen.

Don't fail. Visit the museum to-day.

The Delays of the Law. There was no business of importance transacted in the superior court yesterday. The docket was called and new assignments made for to-day. None of the cases in yesterday's assignment were ready for trial. A few motions were argued, and the case of Wells Cook vs A. Cochran, to collect commission fees for the sale of real estate, was continued until Monday, as the attorneys were busy at the district court. The defendant is at present in California, and it is probable that his attorneys will ask for a change of venue and take the case to the district court.

The case of F. H. Guannella vs Pottawattamie county, for officer's fees, is set for to-day, but owing to the fact that Colonel Dailey, county attorney, is busy with cases now in the district court, it will not come to trial before next week. The present term of court will adjourn about the middle of next week unless Judge Aylesworth concludes to extend the term to wait for some of the equity cases that it is desired to bring to trial before adjournment.

Gone to Her Rest.

Yesterday morning Mr. L. C. Emplie received a telegram from Des Moines giving the painful intelligence of the death of Mary J. Van Pelt, mother of Mrs. Emplie. The sad event occurred yesterday morning at 5:30 o'clock. Other than this no details were given, and at this writing little is known concerning the fatal illness. For some months she had been making her home with her sister, Mrs. Cox, at Des Moines, and although her health was delicate there was evidently no cause for immediate alarm.

The deceased was the wife of Isaac Van Pelt, who passed away from this life eight years ago. Her age was sixty-eight years. For many years she and her husband were residents of this county, and their memory is held in

The Disunited Labor Party.

New York, Feb. 10.—(Special Telegram to the Bee.)—All is not harmony between Henry George and the united labor party. Mr. George has practically retired from its ranks. Ever since George came out and stated that he did not think the united labor party should nominate a presidential candidate, there has been wrangling all along the line. Dr. McGlynn, last evening, at a meeting of the anti-poverty society, in Pythons hall, thought that the party should not allow itself to be sidetracked by tariff tinkering, and should not allow itself to be made the tail of the democratic kite. "I no longer want Henry George for my candidate, and his candidacy would now be more hurtful than a help to us." After adjournment Dr. McGlynn twid a few words to a knot collected around him: "Henry George could no longer be the candidate of the party he represented, there were other good candidates, such as Smith, Milwaukee, and Judge McGuire, of San Francisco."

The Mayor Doesn't See the Joke.

Mayor Rohrer has a generous hand and a warm heart, and so when he was approached by a lady the other day and asked to contribute to the Home of the Friendless he willingly gave an order on a grocery house for "one sack of flour." Yesterday he stepped in to pay for the flour. To his surprise he found that he was charged with 500 pounds. He began investigating and learned that his order for one sack of flour had been taken too liberally and too literally. A special sack had been made by the solicitor of the home, a sack large enough to hold 500 pounds, and this had been taken to the store, ordered filled and charged to Mayor Rohrer. He had his mind fixed on one sack of flour, and for this he paid, but the man in charge in his larger sack of 500 pounds. Before settling the balance the mayor purposely to look into the matter, and see why he should thus have his generosity joked with. He doesn't look on it as a bit funny.

The Electric Light.

The final test of the electric light at the electric light station has not yet taken place, although the company has sent in the bill for settlement. Mr. Officer notified them that the money was ready as soon as they proved that the engine was fully up to the guaranty. Unless the test is made next week it will have to be postponed for some time, as that gentleman will be absent in the east. The lights are now running very satisfactorily, and arrangements have been made to run the lights on cloudy nights when the moon fails to perform its expected work. The city is now credited for what time any of the lights are not burning, as an account is kept of each of them. During the month of December no account was kept, and the actual burning time of each light was not known. A reduction of one-fourth was made from full time to cover the loss of time during the stormy weather when the lights were not run at all.

How They Handled Derringers in the Days That Told.

Victor Duquesne, the famous pistol shot of New Orleans, while traveling in Kentucky, says the Post-Dispatch, stopped for a night at a tavern in Frankfort. In his day, pistols, like Kentuckyans going to take a drink, went in their coats, and were carried in their twin derringers. After supper Duquesne went to the office counter, behind which the proprietor lounged, and putting down a half-dollar, requested him to change it. The proprietor swept the counter clear of money drawers, and in a chivalric way, and taking out two "bits," or twelve and a half-cent pieces, shoved them towards Duquesne. The latter, seeing that the proprietor made no move towards giving him any more money, said:

"I gave you half a dollar; here are only two 'bits.'"

"You gi' me a quarter, sir," responded the host.

"Beg your pardon; you are mistaken. Look in your drawer and you will see."

"Do you mean to say I don't know a half dollar when I see it? I say, sir, you gi' me a quarter and you've got your change for it."

Duquesne looked steadily at the tavern-keeper for a moment. The guest seated around the fireplace became silent.

"You are a liar!" said Duquesne in a low, even tone. Those terrible words meant something in Kentucky, and the proprietor knew it. He felt nervously for his pistols. They were missing. He had left them in his room. The tavern-keeper's movements were as quick as if he had been charged by an electric battery. He jerked open his money drawer, took from it a pistol, cocked it and covered Duquesne, who stood motionless.

"Would you shoot an unarmed man?" inquired the latter, calmly.

"That appeal is never without its effect in the old commonwealth."

"An unarmed man has no right to give an insult."

"Will some gentleman lend me his pistol?" said Duquesne, without removing his eyes from his antagonist, whose two brothers had now ranged themselves behind him.

"Fair play, the world over," spoke up a burly drover, putting a pistol in Duquesne's hand, while two more were dropped into his overcoat pocket. The crowd parted. The men fired simultaneously. The landlord's right arm dropped to his side, broken, and his weapon fell to the floor. Duquesne stood unhurt and quietly exchanged his smoking pistol for one of the loaded ones in his pocket. One of the landlord's brothers, who had a level, leveled his pistol at Duquesne, but before he could pull the trigger Duquesne fired and his new antagonist's right arm dropped to his side, broken.

"Any more?" inquired Duquesne, preparing another firearm.

"No damn you!" exclaimed the third brother, firing one shot wildly and endeavoring to shoot again. Duquesne fired quickly again, and that brother's arm fell, broken, just as the others had fallen.

"Who the devil are you?" cried the landlord, clapping his disabled arm.

"I am Victor Duquesne of New Orleans."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Duquesne, I'm satisfied it was a half-dollar you gi'

Explosion in a Powder Mill.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 10.—At 10 o'clock this morning a shock was felt in this city. It was learned that a violent explosion had occurred at Dupont's powder works at Wapwallopen, twenty miles from here, and that four men were instantly killed. The explosion took place in a packing house, where several tons of powder had been stored.

The Source of Health; therefore, to Is well, purify the blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is peculiarly designed to act upon the blood, and through that upon all the organs and tissues of the body. It has a specific action, also, upon the secretion and excretions, and assists nature to expel from the system all scum, humors, impure particles, and effete matter through the lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. It effectually aids weak, impaired and debilitated organs. A trial will convince you that it does possess peculiar curative powers.

The Liquor Traffic.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The senate committee on education to-day instructed Senator Wilson of Iowa to report favorably a bill providing for the appointment of a commission of five persons, all of whom shall be small holders of total abstinence, to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic, and its relation to revenue and taxation, and its general effect upon the social, moral, criminal and social vices, public health, and general welfare of the country. For our own parts we take testimony as to the practical results of license and prohibitory legislation for prevention of intemperance in the several states of the union.

Mice Change a Will.

St. Louis Republican: D. W. Burford, a prominent farmer of Longwood township, Mo., died recently. Sometime before his death he made a will leaving his valuable farm to two of his sons, P. C. and B. F. T. Burford, on condition that they care for their mother during her lifetime. The other children, two girls and a boy, were not provided for. To-day the two favorite children of the deceased were in the city and visited the office of the probate judge to file the will for probate. The judge called their attention to the mutilated condition of the document. It contained no signatures whatever, and the lower portion of the sheet of foolscap upon which it had been written was missing. "The Burford boys," he said, "before they discovered that mice had taken possession of the desk containing the will and other valuable papers, and had devoured the missing portion of the document in which they were interested. The judge told them that the will was worthless, and through the work of the mice the disinherited children will come in for their share of the property."

has formed and many people have already crossed the river upon it below the falls. The scene from Falls View, where the Michigan Central train stop is one of remarkable beauty and grandeur. The emerald waters of the falls, with the angry rapids above and the rain tinted spray below, with gigantic icicles hanging from the cliffs and the trees and shrubs on the shores and Goat Island covered with curious ice formations, with the great masses of icebergs stretching over the turbulent waters where the Maid of the Mist sails in summer, all combine to form a spectacle seldom to be seen and worthy of a lengthy journey.

Some of the New York state senators seem to have an inclination toward athletic sports.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

Houses.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The bill granting a right of way through the Indian Territory to the Choctaw coal and railroad company was passed.

Mr. Anderson of Illinois, from the post-office committee, reported favorably the Perkins resolution directing the postmaster general to inquire into and inform the house of the cause and foundation for grievances complained of in a Kansas newspaper regarding western mail service and also to inform the house whether the almost universal complaint prevailing in the west against the present unsatisfactory mail service results from insufficient appropriations. The committee reported an amendment, adding the following: "And also that the postmaster general be directed to further inquire and inform the house, what, if any, improvements are in progress, and have been made in the mail service of the west during the past two years." The resolution was finally adopted after the insertion of an amendment offered by Mr. Holman putting the word "alleged" before the word "complaint."

Upon reaching in the committee of the whole, the bill for the relief of Nathaniel McKay, of the executors of Donald McKay, a spirited debate between Mr. Springer and Mr. Cox of New York, ensued, the former antagonizing the measure. The committee finally decided to report the bill favorably to the house and rose. When the McKay bill was reached in the regular proceedings Mr. Springer again opposed it and it finally went over until next Friday.

The house then passed the senate bill authorizing the appointment of Andrew D. White, as a member of the Smithsonian institute. Adjourned.

Explosion in a Powder Mill.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 10.—At 10 o'clock this morning a shock was felt in this city. It was learned that a violent explosion had occurred at Dupont's powder works at Wapwallopen, twenty miles from here, and that four men were instantly killed. The explosion took place in a packing house, where several tons of powder had been stored. The force of the shock was distinctly felt here. The windows in all the buildings rattled and the officials in the court house thought there was an earthquake, as the building shook violently. At Shickler's and Waimie, chimneys toppled from the roofs of buildings and school children ran in terror from the school houses. At Shickler's the glass in almost every window was broken and many were thrown to the ground. At Wapwallopen nearly every building was damaged or wrecked. Besides the killed, over forty persons were injured, fourteen of whom, it is said, will die.

Four victims were blown to pieces and only small portions of their bodies have been found. The cause of the accident is not known, as all who were in the building are dead.

The castle of Gessler, the landvogt who enabled the Swiss to throw off the Austrian yoke, has been recently transformed into a stable.

The castle is located at Kussnacht, in the same spot where, according to tradition, William Tell had his first encounter with the tyrant.
