Permit to wed was yesterday granted John H. Nichols and Sarah A. Henney, both of this city.

The Pall Mall club gives the last of its series of parties at the Royal Arcanum parlors this evening.

Frank Zenawine has purchased the district telephone service at St. Joseph, Mo., and has decided to make that place his permanent home.

Yesterday the city treasurer received from the county treasurer the first installment of the taxes of 1888. It amounted to $4,458.38.

William Cook has purchased a home through the agency of Johnston & Van Patten. It is located on Frank street, and was bought of Charles Shearer.

The pulpit of St. Paul's Episcopal church will be filled next Sabbath evening by Bishop Leonard, the newly elected bishop of Utah. He is a man of great power and his auditors will be regaled with a treat.

A peddler who speaks several foreign languages (all unknown to the police), was pulled in yesterday for selling without a license. He registered at the station as A. Washer Macheen, Omaha, which gives no clue to his name, but indicates his business.

The case of the state against H. C. Barnes, larceny, was called in Justice Barnett's court yesterday. By consent of attorneys it was continued until the 20th inst. This is the fourth continuance taken in the case, and it is thought it will at last be dropped.

In the concert to-night, in Omaha, Mr. M. T. Teyner, the local tenor, is upon the programme in numbers. This concert promises to be one of the musical events of the season, and a number of persons residing in this city will attend.

The grand jury began its labor yesterday. They will be some ten days as to the outcome of the cases threatened against the gambling houses, which have not fully complied with the notice given them by Colonel Daily, the county attorney to go out of business or be prosecuted.

The masquerade given last evening by the Maennerchor was a great success. There was a greater variety of costumes, and more novelty shown, than on any previous occasion. With good music, a large crowd, and the best of order, the evening was made a merry one.

On Saturday last the deal was closed by which J. W. Classen, of Walnut, sold to Gsantz, Gloc & Ott his stock of hardware. The price paid was $3,070. Mr. Classen has been in business there for years, and his retirement is a surprise to those who have known and done business with him. The new firm are residents of Walnut.

The body of Mrs. McMahon was taken yesterday morning to the home of Mr. Dryden, in Hardin township, and at 2 o'clock p. m. the services attending the interment were held at the church. The Rev. G. W. Crafts, of the Congregational church conducted the services and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved hearts.

Yesterday afternoon a delivery team was passing up Broadway. Before it this team on Main street, the horses were started by the driver into a run, and this gait was kept up the whole length of North Main street, jeopardizing the safety of all upon the street. Such cases should receive prompt attention at the hands of the police. A few fines would destroy the charm and fun in fast driving.

The Broadway Methodist church is beginning its sixth week of revival work. Nightly from one to two hundred persons are unable to gain admission, so great is the interest. There have been a great many accessions to the church, and many more are coming in all the time. Taken in connection with the work at other churches there is a great religious interest which will be productive of wonderful results.

Yesterday morning a valuable dog belonging to T. J. Clark attempted to jump through a barb wire fence. The skin covering the abdomen caught upon the sharp points, and in his efforts to extricate himself the abdomen cavity was torn completely open. Desiring to save the life of the poor brute, Mr. Clark called a physician. The animal was chloroformed, in order to sew up the wounds. The animal was too badly injured and died during the operation.

Whatever matters of municipal reform are desired by the citizens of the city can be accomplished by working through the proper channels. It is requisite to elect men to the council who are in sympathy with these measures. To do this it is necessary to attend the caucuses and see that the proper men are nominated. If people are willing to do this there is no good ground to kick against the nominees and afterward to upbraid the administration.

The board of supervisors will meet in special session to-morrow, at which time they will be asked to accept the county court house. No difficulty is anticipated, and the structure will doubtless be taken off from the hands of the contractors and payment made as per contract. In this event the dedication will be fixed for an early day. The furniture has been ordered from Andrews & Co., of Chicago, and was to have been here by the 15th inst. Nothing has yet been heard of its whereabouts. The money, $1,800, is ready to pay for the same on its arrival.

THE NEWS OF COUNCIL BLUFFS

The Dirt Hauling Ordinance Has a Hole Bigger Than the Wagons.

THE YOUNG MEN'S GYMNASIUM.

A Spicy Suit Between Landlord and Tenant—An Insane Wife—Council Bluffs—Another Ogden House—Promise.

A Faulty Ordinance.

"I see there is some complaint because we do not enforce the dirt hauling ordinance," remarked one of the officers. "Where's your book of ordinances? Just look at it and see whether it's our fault. You see the ordinance provides simply that the wagons shall have tight end boards, but the bottom can be like a sieve, and we can't help it. There it is, you see. It says, 'To have tight end-gates in front and rear of boxes, so as to prevent the dirt, sand or gravel or other material, from dropping on and into any street, highway or alley, where hauling the same for the purpose as above defined.' Now one of the troubles is that the teamsters haul by the load, and of course the contractors get them to haul just as big loads as they can. They shovel onto a wagon so much dirt that it is heaped up above the sideboards, and it keeps rattling over the sides and into the streets. What can we do about it? The wagons have tight end gates, but that doesn't keep the dirt from rattling off. The officers ought not to be blamed for not enforcing the ordinance. The ordinance itself is at fault, and ought to be changed. If the city wants to put a stop to the spilling of dirt along the streets, it should have a law that says: 'The teamsters have their side of the controversy. They declare that they must have their wagon boxes so made as to be loose, and so as to be easily taken apart in unloading. Otherwise their work of unloading will be so great, and so slow as to knock them out of business. There is more trouble caused by the heaping up of the loads than by dirt falling through the wagon box. Some suggest that an ordinance forbidding the loading of wagons above the height of the side board boxes would do more to prevent the spilling of dirt along the streets than any tight box ordinance.'

Landlord and Tenant.

Judge Thornell was able to appear in person yesterday morning to preside in the district court. The trial of the case of Mrs. Jane Richardson against Colonel C. R. Scott was resumed and occupied all the day. The plaintiff has for her attorneys Fickinger Bros. and Judge Ford. Colonel Scott has called in his assistance Colonel Sapp. The evidence has not thus far been of so spicy a nature as was generally expected, although there were some streaks of humor and gleams of sharpness yesterday. Mrs. Richardson was on the case on Colonel Scott's farm as a tenant, and a trouble arose. It was claimed by her that the landlord was overbearing and tyrannical, and that he violated their contract by forcibly taking possession of the farm, ejecting her therefrom, and using such abusive language to her as to make him liable for damages on account of slander. She also claims damages because of her arrest for violating an injunction restraining her from going onto the farm. She makes up quite a bill against the landlord, and the present suit is to get the bill audited and allowed. The other side of the contest is to the effect that Mrs. Richardson acted so as to exasperate a saint, and to make an even more evenly tempered man than Scott fly off the handle. It is claimed that she allowed cockle burrs to spring up all over the farm and grow luxuriously, and that the property was so used or misused as to cause it to depreciate in value so rapidly as to necessitate prompt action to save it. Various suits were started, including ejectment proceedings, injunction, contempt, habeas corpus, and others, in which Colonel Scott simply sought such advantages as he could gain through the courts. The case before Judge Aylesworth, which a number of fine bunches of cockle burrs were introduced in evidence, is still fresh in the memory of those who heard any of the evidence. The present suit is a gathering up of all the old cases, a potpourri, sharply spiced, and by the end is reached will doubtless furnish more amusement for those who have little else to do besides hanging about the court room and watch proceedings.

Travelers' Stop at the Bechtel.

The Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium.

This institution is now in complete running order and is growing in public favor every day. Those of our citizens who have not inspected the rooms since the new equipments have been put in place should do so at their earliest opportunity. There is now in use the following apparatus: Three chest machines, one pulley rowing machine, neck and wrist machine—all of A. G. Spaulding & Bro.'s improved style—pneumatic rowing machine with revolving handles and sliding seat, horizontal bars, chest bars, swinging rings, traveling rings, rope climbing ladder, horizontal ladder, climbing rope. In addition to these are the dumb bells, both wooden and iron, of various sizes, Indian clubs, mats, etc. In the same room are the bath rooms, three in number, with dressing rooms in connection, hot and cold water supply, water closet, waste bowl, etc., the number of baths now averaging over fifty per week. Although the shower baths are intended more for taking quick baths immediately after taking exercise in the gymnasium, still they are growing quite popular with business men and others who cannot attend regularly to the gymnasium.

The membership tickets which are supplied at a very reasonable figure, ($5 per year), entitle the holder to all privileges of the gymnasium and bath-rooms. The only extra charge is for those who do not desire to furnish their own towels, a ticket good for twenty-five towels being sold for 50c, thus only averaging 2c per towel, just about enough to cover the washing. The bath-rooms are open and in running order from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m.; the gymnasium from the same hour in the morning to 9:15 p. m., every day except Sunday, thus affording abundant opportunity for use to any one.

The general class at 5 o'clock, intended more especially for business men, meets every afternoon. The boys class for members under 16, is now organized and meeting regularly on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons at 4 o'clock. Parents, step in sometime and see what a chance there is for your boys. The evening class meets as heretofore Wednesday and Saturday evenings, except on the latter day, when it meets at 7:30 p. m. This class, being an outside feature, is not organized but is one of the possibilities.

While the gymnasium is intended solely for members, still all interested in the work are always welcome as spectators. The room occupied is light and warm, and with its new hard pine floor and new apparatus presents a very inviting appearance to any one disposed to develop his muscle and improve his physique.

A few necessary regulations noticeable as they are posted in a conspicuous place. From these we see that the floor is open for general exercise all the day excepting during class drills. At these drills the members are always put through a brisk drill, and the work is of a more vigorous nature than that of the ordinary movements being arranged in physiological order and in sufficient number to bring into play every muscle of the body. This drill is followed usually by work on the parallel bars or Indian clubs. According to the present system a man can take from twenty to forty minutes a day and accomplish wonders in the way of tuning up his system. Experience shows that there is nothing equal to gymnastic exercise, properly used, as a remedy for nervous troubles, lung and heart diseases, dyspepsia, constipation, etc. Our citizens should do all in their power to aid in maintaining this worthy institution established through the efforts of the Y. M. C. A.

Each member who expects to take regular work, as complete measurements taken, as per card, once at beginning and again after a few months, to show development in general, and in particular when any one part needs special attention.]

J. G. Tipton "the real estate broker" has cheap homes on easy payments. Why pay rent? Nonsense.

Quick Police Work.

One of the gang of thieves which infest the city was pulled in yesterday. Mr. G. W. Ferguson, of the Pacific house, laid his glasses upon the desk where he was engaged. When he looked for them a few minutes after they were gone. The police were notified of the loss. About 4 o'clock Officer Unthank noticed a fellow passing up Broadway who was slightly under the influence of "benzine." He had upon his arm a coat and vest and the officer decided to investigate. The fellow was taken to the station, where he gave the name of F. M. White. He was searched, and among his effects were two pairs of glasses and a pawn ticket. One pair was identified by Mr. Ferguson as his own. The pawn ticket was issued by Goldstein upon an overcoat, which he now has. No doubt all the articles were stolen. The fellow will get a soft job at the expense of the city, and no one but himself will be sorry for it.

J. G. Tipton has a Broadway corner lot in Baylies & Palmer's very cheap to-day.

Sad Insanity.

Mrs. Lucy Clark, wife of William Clark, the butter and egg dealer, residing in the rear of his store, corner of Broadway and Stutsman streets, has for several days been in a distressing condition of mind. It is feared that she will have to be taken to an asylum for treatment, although her friends are endeavoring to care for her here, in the hope that relief may come without removing her. One of the saddest features to the case is that her delusions center against her husband, she believing that he has another wife, that he is trying to rot her with little money she has, and that she appears in her presence she becomes terribly excited, so that he is unable to care for her as he would gladly do. The fact that she is in expectation of soon becoming a mother is another of the peculiarities of her case. She has during the past two or three days caused several quite sensational scenes in that neighborhood, it not being realized until late that she was so out of balance mentally.

The Ogden Opening.

The prediction is now made that the Ogden house will be re-opened before the first of March. The reeve five applications from those desiring to lease the hotel, and a decision is to be reached so soon as Mr. Stout returns, and as he is expected daily, the public will not have long to wait before some formal announcement will be made. This is the latest which can be learned by the reporters, but there have been so many statements made in regard to the hotel, that readers are naturally slow to accept anything the papers may say in regard to it as to be relied upon. The BEE in this case gives the reader the benefit of the information as it receives it from what may be considered as reliable sources, although not directly from Mr. Stout.

A Small Sunday Batch.

The malcontents who appeared in the court yesterday were few and were lightly handled by the judge. J. Shackle was given a thirty day leave-of-retirement from the view of the public. The case of J. Rivers was continued. New papers were issued for the arrest of D. Grimmelman, charged with larceny, the old warrant having been issued. The case and that of Fitzgerald will be tried to-day. Judge Aylesworth was absent during the afternoon and in view of this fact court was adjourned for the day at the noon hour.

Records of Good Deeds.

Youth's Companion: M. Emile de Girardin, a French journalist and statesman, was the originator of a plan for a local book of archives in each town or village, in each ward of a city, which should record, not the routine proceedings of the local governing bodies, but the noteworthy acts, the good deeds, the instances of devotion and courage that should occur in the town or village.

"I would propose still more than this," said M. de Girardin, "whenever a man, a woman or even a child—yes, above all, a child had performed an act, which commended itself to the public mind, concerning it should be officially communicated to the community in which the person was born.

"This deed should be formally inscribed in a register kept especially for the purpose, which would become the Book of Gold of the town. What an encouragement to well-doing it would be! The newspaper is too perishable; it is read only to be thrown away. This register, however, would not perish, but remain in the archives of the town, the town, as but the family on a larger scale. A register such as this, full of a record of good deeds, would be to a village like a patent of nobility to a family.

"This idea remained dormant for a long time, but a bill is now before the French chambers which embodies the proposition of M. de Girardin, and it is likely to be favorably considered.

It is intended, it is true, to cover more than De Girardin proposed, since the language of the bill provides that the record shall include "all the facts, accidents, etc., of a nature to interest the commune and to form the basis of its history."

In the United States town histories are often written, but they are the majority of cases, mere formal records, and the brave and inspiring deeds that they record only too often rest upon untrustworthy tradition or mere hearsay. There are many homely events, not deemed worthy of recording by town historians, which, nevertheless, inscribed in such a "Book of Gold," would have an influence for good.

A Day's Work.

From the Family Physician: The amount of work some people get through is simply enormous. Few people are harder worked than a London physician in active practice. We know a doctor who seldom gets more than four hours' sleep out of the twenty-four. He says that it is not that he can't get more, but it is as much as he can get. Many busy men are constantly at work of some kind or other from 8 in the morning till 12 at night. Some, of course, break down, but others do this year after year, apparently without any detriment to their health. Instances are known of professional men who have not been in bed for three weeks at a time. These sound almost like travelers' tales, but they are true, although of course, they are exceptional cases. It is astonishing what interest and energy will go in enabling a man to dispense with rest. It has been said that the twenty-four hours might be advantageously divided into three equal parts—eight hours for sleep, eight for meals, exercise, recreation, etc., and eight for mental work.

Few men really require more than eight hours' sleep, but the majority of us have to do considerable more than eight hours' work in the day. It is not so much that a man wishes for the work as that it is forced upon him. He, perhaps, is the only person who can perform a certain duty, and when, as is often the case, it is a question of life and death, it is almost impossible to refuse. Many people can never force themselves to do more than a certain amount of mental work; they get nervous and headachy, and then it is all over with them. Forced work, as a rule, tells on a man much more rapidly than purely voluntary work, for in the former case it is usually associated with anxiety. Real overwork gives rise to loss of memory, a general sense of fatigue, and particularly of the amount about the head, poorness of a appetite, loss of spirits, and other similar symptoms. It is worthy that injures more than real work—care killed the cat. Some people are so happily constituted that they never weary with anything, whilst others are in the power of anxiety on every trivial occasion.

The Only Line That Gets There.

It has been well said by a distinguished writer that "the Michigan Central is the only 'Ningara Falls Route' in the country."

It is the only railroad that runs directly by the falls and stops its trains at a point from which all parts of the falls and the rapids are in full view. From this point, called Falls View, the scene from the Michigan Central train, whether in its summer setting of emerald or its winter setting of crystal, is one of unexampled grandeur and sublimity. As it is on the direct route to New York, Boston, and New England, no east-bound traveler should fail to take advantage of it.

An Unsatisfactory Answer.

San Francisco Chronicle: She had just come back from the country, and she had been spending the summer, and they were asking her all about it.

"I had a lovely time."

"Lovely! In that poky little hotel! How on earth could you, a flirt all through. Have a lovely time in a little country village?"

"He was very fine looking, and he was very bright."

"Who was it?"

"Well, I had to give my religious convictions a wrench, but—you know I'm in a church—it was a Presbyterian minister."

"Oh!"

"Yes, you'd never think how I made his acquaintance. I didn't know what to do one Sunday; so I went to church. I ran on all the most elegant togery and sat well up in front, and—well—I don't know—but when the sermon was over, before he dismissed the congregation, he announced that he was very lonesome, being a stranger. He said from a good many there who were not members of his congregation—and if they would send him their cards he would be most pleased to call upon them."

"And you—"

"I found him a very charming man and full of fun. He asked me if he could marry me."

"What did you say?"

"Oh, I said—yes—he might perhaps marry me—to somebody else."

The first crematory in New England is likely to go up at Worcester. Some Boston folks tried to get up a company, but the Hub wasn't ready to burn its dead, and so its leading cremationists have united with the Worcester association, which is incorporated as the Massachusetts Cremation society, and they are raising $10,000. Worcester has given $4,000; Boston, $2,000; Springfield, $1,000; and Providence and other New England cities will doubtless add the rest.

An octogenarian living at Budapesth, who for the last few years has been existing as a beggar on the alms of the charitable, tried to drown himself in the Danube because, according to his statement, he was no longer able to support his parents, who are respectively one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and ten years old.

A new fashion in bookbinding is to have large sets bound in leather of different colors. A Boston man has just had Dickens bound in sixteen different colors, among them red, brown, orange, light and dark blue, lemon, fawn, maroon and black. Each volume was bound in an individual color, the only duplication occurring when a story came in two volumes.
