OMAHA LIVE STOCK.

General. Union Stock Yards, 6 p. m. Wednesday, Feb. 27, 1888. The receipts of cattle to-day were moderate, hogs light, sheep heavy. Prices on the former were higher; on hogs about steady with no sheep sold all the offerings being shipped to Chicago.

Cattle. The total receipts were 624 head of fair quality. The market on all grades was, in the estimation of some salesmen, about 10 cents higher while others claimed it was about steady. The highest price paid during the day was $4.15 for a lot of 1203-lb steers, with other grades in recoveries.

The receipts of hogs were 1,164 head. The market was about steady on all grades, with a limited demand on account of a shortage in receipts. Local packers took all the offerings.

The receipts were 2,056 head, which were shipped to Chicago. Nothing was done on this market outside of a sale of sheep at pri-

There was a somewhat stronger tone to the produce market this morning, as there was a better inquiry all around. Butter was in light receipt and brought fair prices, some choice creamery selling for 26c. The supply of eggs was also light, and 16c was the ruling figure, with a good demand, but we quote prices firm and unchanged. There was very little poultry in the market to meet a good demand, and prices ruled higher. The cold weather to some extent checked the demand for fruit, but there was no change in prices.

White cedar, 6 in. \( \frac{1}{2} \) \( \frac{1} \) \( \frac{1}{2} \) \( \frac{1}{2} Colonel Alexander Chambers.

Colonel Alexander Chambers, who ecently died in Texas, was a brother of Major Chambers, of Omaha, and was well-known in this city, where he once resided. The following sketch of his career, taken from the San Antonio Express, will be read with interest by the many friends of the deceased in this whither he had come to pass the cold season, hoping that the climate would allay a malady which was only accelerated by the rigor of a northern winter in Wyoming territory, where he was stationed in command of the Seventeenth infantry with headquarters at Fort D. A. Russell. The death of Colonel Chambers will create great regret, not alone in army surgles but in civilian not alone in army streles, but in civilian also. No officer could be more endeared to his subordinates or more loved by his fellow officers. He was chivalrous to a degree, of dauntless bravery and generous sympathies, possessing rare social attributes that made him universally States military academy at West Point July1, 1849, grauduating on July 1, 1853. On the same date he was promoted in the army to brevet second lieutenant of infantry, and after serving a short time in garrison at Fort Columbus, New York, he did frontier duty and scouting at Fort Columbus, New York, he did frontier duty and scouting at Fort McIntosh, Tex. He received his commission as second lieutenaut of Fifth infantry on March 3, 1855. He then escorted Captain Pope's artesian well expedition in New Mexico, and was engaged in a skirmish near the mouth Delaware creek, New Mexico. A brief time after he was in the Florida hostilities against the Semiole Indians. borax, refined, per lb., 10c.

Tennessee, and Mississippi. On May 15,1861, he was made captain of the Eighteenth infantry and did active service in the battle of Shiloh, where he was twice wounded. He was also in the advance upon and siege of Corinth. For his gallant and meritorious service at the battle of Shiloh he received the brevet rank of major. During September, 1862, he was in the reconnoisance from Burnsville, Miss., to Juka, Miss., and in the battle of Juka he was severely wounded. In that battle he again distinguished himself, his guerdon being the brevet rank of lieu-tenant colonel. He was in the Vicksburg campaign, and at the siege of Vicksburg was promoted to to a brevet colonel for his gallantry. He was next in the reoccupation of Jackson and afterwards in command of brigade in gar-rison at Vicksburg. From August, 1863, to April, 1865 he was a brigadier-general of the United States volunteers, and from that period until the close of the war he was actively employed and was part of the time judge advocate of the district of Nebraska and the department of the Platte, being brevetted brigadier general for his services at the battle of Champion Hills, and Meridian, Miss. He was transferred to the Twenty-seventh infantry September 21, 1866, and made major of the Twenty-second infantry March 5, 1876. In 1869 he was transferred to the Tenth infantry. On October 22, 1876, he was promoted to the lieutenant colonelcy of the Twety-first infantry; in 1877 he was military attache to the United States legation at tache at Constaninople, and in 1886 received a colonel's commission in com-mand of Seventeenth infantry, which he held up to the time of his death. In 1877, Colonel Chambers was sent by the United States government to observe the movements of the Turkish troops in the Turcoo-Russian war, and was present at the famous engagement at Shipka Pass, in Septemeer of that year.

In 1876, the deceased gentleman, then major Fourth United States infantry, was at Fort Fetterman and accompanied the expedition, under General Crook the expedition under General Crook against the Sioux Indians, in command of the infantry battalion on that expedition. He was present and took part in the engagement with the Indians in the "Rosebed," where the command was attacked, and was afterward commended by General Crook, in his report of the expedition, for his gallantry and efficiency and the assistance he ren-dered in preserving the command from destruction against the overwhelming force of the enemy. It was in this en-gagement the battalion of infantry, com-manded by Colonel Chambers, used, for the first time, the new Springfield rifle, which had just about that time been placed in the hands of the United States troops, and such was the rapidity of the fire poured into the Indians. the rifle barrels became so hot that many of the men had their hands burned in handling their guns.
