IT WAS A WILLFUL MURDER.

Such is the Verdict in the Ryan-Howard Case.

THE TESTIMONY DEVELOPED.

Eleven Witnesses Give Some Damaging Evidence Before the Coroner's Jury—The Court Room Crowded With Spectators.

It Was Not Accidental.

Six of the fellow-men of Frank B. Ryan, the slayer of Mrs. Helen Howard, sat at the coroner's inquest held last night and unanimously agreed that the killing was done by him with "voluntuous intent, malice and aforethought." The inquest was conducted in the police court, and began before 7 o'clock the spectators' cage was crowded to overflowing, and the main room was filled with witnesses and favored friends of the police who stood guard over the respective approaches and entrances. Those who were unable to gain an entrance stood on the outside, peered through the windows and blocked up the sidewalks. County Attorney Simeral and his assistant, Mr. Gurley, who conducted the prosecution, were on hand early, and waited the coming of Coroner Drexel. Judge L. H. Bradley, who knew Ryan in Springfield, Ill., was also on hand at a reasonable hour, and informed the reporters that he had written to Ryan's brothers in Springfield to come on to Omaha at once and arrange the details for his trial.

Shortly after 7 o'clock Ryan was brought in from his cell in the central station adjoining the police court and took a seat beside his counsel. He appeared cool and collected, but as he gazed among the audience and his eyes fell on the aged and venerable father of his victim and also his husband, he became unsteady and showed signs of guilt and fear. His voice was husky and inaudible when he attempted to answer the questions put by Judge Bradley, which were mainly as to how he felt and if he was getting what he wished to eat. To the latter interrogation Ryan replied that his appetite was not the best, and that he craved but little for food.

Upon the arrival of Coroner Drexel the jury were immediately seated and the investigation commenced. Upon the suggestion of County Attorney Simeral the eleven witnesses were sworn together, and as the slayer lifted his head to the desk Ryan partially turned his head to one side. This was doubtless noticed by the appearance of Mrs. Scott, the dead woman's mother; Howard, her husband, and Miss Scott, a half sister of the deceased. As Mrs. Scott came in to be sworn she caught a glimpse of Ryan, and uttered a subdued but painful scream. After the eleven were sworn by the coroner they returned to their seats, and Mrs. Scott, who was evidently prostrated, laid her head on the shoulder of her bereaved son-in-law, whose features were a telltale of his anguish. The testimony was of a highly sensational character, and was listened to throughout with the greatest of interest. The husband of the dead woman displayed considerable composure, and Miss Scott talked rapidly and emphatically all the damaging points against the prisoner. Old Mrs. Scott was terribly worked up, and caused a sensation when she turned to Ryan while giving her evidence, and said: "You swore to kill her, you blackie; you know you did, and you've done it, you will."

This scoring seemed to have but little effect on Ryan, who had just before been on the stand rattled by the appearance and ill-tempered relations with Mrs. Howard in a matter of fact way, and with a lowering slang conversation.

bullet hole through the heart from a 38-caliber ball. The bullet broke the sixth rib, went round the heart and landed in the back. It cut through the rib and took a downward and upward course. She wore considerable clothing, and the corset was stained either by the powder or load of the bullet. Did not cut the bullet out. Joe Blackwell, a colored man, swore that he was in Doty & Darst's saloon Friday night; saw Mrs. Howard after she was shot; had not seen her before that. She came out of the door as I was passing to another room; saw her go out after the shooting. There were four men in the saloon; heard no conversation before that. When she came out she cried: "Oh, he shot me!" She then turned and felt to the floor after walking about four feet. Saw Ryan there. As the door opened I saw him rise from his chair. That was after the shot. The door was closed before the shot. He said: "I shot her accidentally." He was handed a revolver, and the witness identified it as the one turned over to him by Ryan. There were four men in the saloon when the shooting occurred. There was a woman in the wine room with Leonard Laru. Ryan came out of the wine room and went into the saloon. He said by a side door, and that's the way Ryan and Mrs. Howard came in. They did not call for anything to drink. Ryan had the pistol in his hand when he was shot. "I shot her accidentally." He was perspiring, and looked frightened. There was no outcry previous to the shot being fired. Leonard and a lady were in the adjoining room.

In answer to the coroner, Joe said he was a porter about the saloon, and went on duty Friday night at 6:30 p. m. He didn't see Ryan and Mrs. Howard come in, and to the best of his knowledge it was twenty-five minutes to 8 o'clock when the shooting took place. Mrs. Howard wore a seal plush sack, which was burning, and he put out the fire.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bradley—Entrance to the wine room can be gained by a side door, and that's the way Ryan and Mrs. Howard came in. They did not call for anything to drink. Ryan had the pistol in his hand when he was shot. "I shot her accidentally." Ryan passed by her and went out to the saloon, where he was arrested by police officers. Ryan had no money; he had a few cents in his pocket and he had a watch on his wrist. Ryan had a watch on his wrist. Ryan had a watch on his wrist.

By Mr. Simeral—The chair which Ryan raised from was sitting close to the table. The other chairs were not disturbed. By Mr. Simeral—None of the chairs were tumbled on the floor. Henry Doty, one of the proprietors of the Merchants', said that he did not see them come in on the fatal night; saw them after the shooting, which took place at twenty-five minutes to 8 o'clock. They were in wine room No. 3, and he heard the shot; ran back and met Mrs. Howard who said, "Oh, he shot me," and Ryan replied, "I did it accidentally." Ryan passed by her and went out to the saloon, where he was arrested by police officers. Ryan had no money; he had a few cents in his pocket and he had a watch on his wrist. Ryan had a watch on his wrist. Ryan had a watch on his wrist.

William Hector swore he was in the saloon the night of the shooting. Heard the report of a pistol and then a scream. Heard no noise prior to that. After the shooting Mrs. Howard came to the door of the wine room and said, "Oh, he shot me." Ryan appeared in a few seconds and said he had shot her accidentally. When Mrs. Howard said to the floor Ryan had stepped into the barroom. Thomas Ross, who was in the saloon at the time, corroborated Hector's testimony and stated that one of the chairs was moved back about a foot from the table. Ryan said the shooting was accidental. Cross-examined by Mr. Bradley—When I took hold of Mrs. Howard to guide her to a chair after the shooting, Ryan was walking out towards the saloon. Ryan assisted her in no way. Miss Willie Scott testified that she was a half sister of the deceased. A little after 7 o'clock she and Mrs. Howard started out to get a guitar string. Mrs. Howard saying she was afraid Ryan would follow her. They went to Masonic hall, but could not get the string there. Willie had no rubbers on and could not walk over the icy sidewalk. She returned home, and Mrs. Howard went on to Crapp's to get the string. When Willie went into the house Ryan grabbed his coat and did not speak to Ryan. Ryan was with her when he ran after Mrs. Howard. Ryan said he would kill her if she went back to live with her husband. Mrs. Howard had told her that she was afraid of Ryan. Mr. and Mrs. Howard used to quarrel a little. Ryan said nothing to her the night he followed her sister. Did not go out after him, as I feared he would shoot me. Cross-examined by Mr. Bradley—Mr. Ryan had roomed with the Scotts for two months; did not know that Ryan and Mrs. Howard frequented saloons. Saw Ryan take his hat and coat and pull the pistol out of the dresser drawer, after which he ran after Mrs. Howard. Ryan said that Mrs. Howard had made no arrangements to meet Ryan. She was home all day Friday. Ryan said he saw Ryan in the saloon most all the afternoon. She did not go out of my presence. Richard J. Howard, the husband of the deceased, stated that he had a conversation with Mr. Ryan Friday night. He said, "Dick, I want to see you to-morrow afternoon to have a conversation with you." Did not have the meeting with him; knew nothing of the intimacy existing between my wife and Ryan until three or four days ago. She said, "I want to go away when you go this time." I asked her why she wanted to go, and she said that she was being continually tantalized by Ryan and that he was annoying her by leaving the saloon open. She further said that he had put a pistol to her head, and on various occasions had forced her into wine rooms for her parents were dependent on boarders and roomers for their livelihood. She told me not to raise a disturbance in the house, as it might draw attention to the place. Ryan said that I was a poor man and had no money; that he was rich and wanted her to elope with him, adding that if she did not he would kill her. Dr. Webber was present at the house when Mrs. Howard and Willie Scott went out; was there when Willie came back, and she said to me, "My Ryan has followed her out, and I must not call myself if the pistol went work out. I reached around to pull it out, and in doing so I slipped from her lap. In the attempt to catch myself the pistol exploded, and she jumped to her feet. I told the darky that came to the door that I shot her accidentally. I was going to lay the pistol on the table. There were no reasons for the shooting. We were as friendly as lovers could ever be. I had on several occasions threatened to leave the house, but she said to me, "I must not call myself if the pistol went work out. I reached around to pull it out, and in doing so I slipped from her lap. In the attempt to catch myself the pistol exploded, and she jumped to her feet.
