

FAILED TO WORK THE BOARD.

The Jefferson Square Boomers Once More Disappointed.

THEIR RESOLUTION DEFEATED.

We, A. & Co. on Hand and Witness the Result With Sorrow—Doings of the Board of Education.

Would Not Be Bullheaded.

The lobby to the board of education last evening embraced the members and some active work was done pledging votes before the meeting commenced.

Mr. Kelly accused Mr. Sholes of going back on his word.

Mr. Kelly accused Mr. Sholes of going back on his word in the matter of the school building.

Proposition from the Edison electric light company.

A proposition from the Edison electric light company for illuminating the grounds of the high school.

Committee on teachers and text books.

The committee on teachers and text books asked permission to fill the vacancy on the examining committee.

Resolution signed by Henry Livesey.

A resolution signed by Henry Livesey, Fred W. Gray and K. J. Scherer.

Committee on buildings and property.

The committee on buildings and property reported that the proposed site escape for the school building.

Committee on heating and ventilation.

The committee on heating and ventilation recommended the plan for the heating system.

Miss Mann, the cooking teacher.

Miss Mann, the cooking teacher was granted the use of the culinary department for Saturday and evening classes.

Three delegates chosen.

Meeting of the Young Men's Republican Club.

Real Estate Transfers.

Herman A. Kuhn, trustee, to G. S. Benawa, lots 3, 4, 17, 18, 19, blk. 2, and lots 5 and 6 in blk. 3, Crigton Heights, 2,800

John P. Brown, et al. to Charles W. Brown, lot 2, N. W. 1/4, 5, 14 and 12, Q. S. Street, 100

M. S. Sturges, et al. to J. A. Smith, lot 2, N. E. 1/4, S. E. 1/4, 14 and 13, Q. S. Street, 100

Geo. H. White, et al. to Jas. Anscomb, same, W. D., 1,700

Jas. Anscomb to Wm. Colfax, same, W. D., 1,700

Wm. Colfax to Wm. Selby, 1st, except lots 1, 2, 23 and 44, blk. 5, and all blk. 6, Tr. D., 30,000

Clarence C. Miller, et al. to W. Lusk, E. 80 ft. of W. 130 ft. of lot 59, Millard & Caldwell's add., 4,000

Chas. J. Ryan, et al. to Wm. D. H. 151x75 ft. in w part sec 17, 15, 14, w. d., 8,000

Edna White to Hester Williams, w/2 lot 4 blk 152, q. d., 1

Elwin M. Parker to Kingsley C. Morehouse, 10 ft lot 7 and w 17 ft lot 8, blk 9, Foster W. D., 6,500

Amos Phillips and wife to Chas. C. Spotted, lot 11 blk 17, Bedford Place, 2,700

Chas. C. Spotted, et al. to Jas. Anscomb, B Woods, lots 2 and 3 in blk 11, Orchard Hill, w. d., 3,500

John J. Stewart to Edith Schmidt, lots 10 and 11 blk 10, lot 10 blk 3, and lot 12 blk 10, 187.50

Wm A. Goddard to Edith A. Hayden, lots 10 and 11 blk 10, lot 10 blk 3, and lot 12 blk 10, 187.50

Alice O'Donoghue and wife to L. Miles and James Thompson, lot 4, blk 15, lot 8 blk 17, lot 1 blk 24, lot 3, blk 15, lot 1 blk 20, lot 5 and 6 blk 14, all in Carthage, w. d., 5,235

Same to same, lot 4 blk 21, lot 10, blk 9, lot 11 and 12 blk 12, Chicago, w. d., 8,000

W. R. Lamberson and wife to D. B. Hoher, lot 16 blk 128, So Omaha, w. d., 1,500

Albert J. Brink and wife to Geo. G. Guild, blk 3, Myers, Richards & Todd's add, w. d., 5,000

W. C. Abright and wife to John Pfeiffer, 11 blk 9, Hoppe's Benz, w. d., 750

James K. Chambers and wife to Margaret Spotted, lot 12 blk 7, Bedford Place, w. d., 750

John W. Hingate and wife to Margaret Spotted, lots 9 and 11 blk 7, Bedford Place, w. d., 1,500

William B. Homan and wife to John B. Evans, lot 4, blk 7, Truinity, w. d., 1,400

John W. McClain to Brad M. Gray, lot 10, blk 20, west 10, w. d., 1,500

Augustus Kountze and wife to Isaac W. Kountze, lot 8, blk 3, Kountze's 4th add, w. d., 650

Isaac S. Hascall to Vincens Soukup, lot 8, blk 3, Kountze's 4th add, w. d., 750

Twenty-eight transfers, aggregating, 800

Building Permits.

The following building permits were issued yesterday by the superintendent of buildings:

J. H. Elliott, Cottage, Burdette near North Thirtieth, 850

J. H. Elliott, Cottage, Burdette near North Thirtieth, 850

Two permits aggregating, 850

Brevities.

Yesterday's internal revenue collections amounted to $12,257.67.

The Omaha Woman suffrage association will meet at the residence of General Estabrook this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

An envelope of pension papers addressed to Mrs. J. Schorer awaits a claimant at the office of the chief of police.

Charles Clark was run in by Officer Ward last night for going through the pockets of a drunken fellow in the City hotel barroom.

Peter Barrett, the Minneapolis murderer arrested here last fall by Captain Frank and O. J. Turley, was sentenced on Saturday last to be hanged.

F. S. Bromley, secretary of the board of fire and police commissioners, is housed with the measles. J. Leary, police alarm operator, is also on the sick list.

County Treasurer Bolln has discovered that the unpaid taxes of 1884 were 21 per cent of the total, in 1885 the delinquency was 22 per cent and in 1886 24 per cent.

Phillip Corbett was caught yesterday afternoon stealing a large coil of copper wire from the Western Union telegraph company. He was arrested and jailed to await trial this morning.

The Press club met Sunday afternoon, and a report by the secretary was submitted. This showed that the gross receipts were something over $1,000, expenses $250; leaving a net profit of $750.

The regular meeting of the evangelist alliance occurred yesterday at the Y. M. C. building, and arrangements were made for important work in the cause of christianity throughout the city.

County Clerk Roche was busy yesterday filling out pension papers for widows and veterans. Mr. Roche follows the plans laid down by his predecessor and charges the government wards nothing for his services.

Yesterday Deputy Marshal J. H. Showalter brought J. F. Hopkins from Battle Creek, Neb., who was arrested at that place for passing counterfeit money. The bogus money was all counterfeit dollars, and was some ten different counts against him.

The inspector of sidewalks has computed the number of cross walks necessary to comply with a recent resolution passed by the city council, that all sidewalks be connected by cross walks, to the amount of $82,000.

A little boy named Tommy Melville was set upon by a vicious dog at the corner of Clarke and Twenty-third streets yesterday and severely bitten in the thigh. The brute belonged to H. Soder, who has since been instructed to shoot him.

DEMOCRATS BADLY FOOLED.

They Elect a Prohibition Mayor Without Knowing It.

IOWA MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Cedar Rapids, Des Moines and Burlington Elect Democratic Mayors—Stout City Goes Republican—Chased From Pennsylvania.

Stout City, Pa., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—A presidential election could not have produced more excitement than the municipal election here to-day.

The issue as to the mayor's office was drawn strictly on the temperance question. The saloons have been closed without any help from Mayor Cleland, who was a candidate for re-election, and the prohibitionists supported Flynn notwithstanding he was the democratic candidate.

Every taxation keeper and the entire whiskey influence were against Flynn. John Aromorath and three other defendants in the Haddock murder case worked openly and energetically at the polls against him.

The German vote worked against him. The full force of the business element which is opposed to prohibition, went against him. The result is that Flynn, a democrat, was elected mayor.

At Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Des Moines, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Burlington, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Ottumwa, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Ottumwa, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Ottumwa, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Ottumwa, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

At Ottumwa, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—The municipal election here to-day was quiet but very interesting from the singular features involved.

The chief fight was for mayor. The republican candidate Robt. Finkbine, the man who superintended the building of the new capitol.

The democratic and independent republicans united a citizen's ticket nominating W. L. Carpenter, a bar-bow manufacturer, and a democrat. The independent republicans were urged to support him as an expression of their opposition to prohibition.

Last fall the same coalition elected a license republican to the legislature and set the republicans back in the spring for continuing the co-operation. The issue of the matter is that Finkbine, the republican, proved to be an anti-prohibitionist, while Carpenter, the democrat, is a Methodist prohibitionist of the strictest sort.

Some of the precincts were kept open late. The entire vote at 10 p. m. had been counted but the republicans are not yet exclusive right in the city.

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

New York, March 5.—The spring meeting of the American base ball association began here to-day. It was decided that the Metropolitan club, New York city, shall be continued, in spite of all talk to the contrary, and leave is given the club to discontinue the playing of games in the city.

THE OMAHA'S DULUTH OFFICE ROBBED.

Duluth, March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—Burglars entered the ticket office of the Omaha road this evening by prying the doors open with some blunt instrument.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

For Nebraska: Light to fresh easterly winds, warmer, fair weather.

For Iowa: Light to fresh northerly winds, becoming variable, warmer, fair weather.

OMAHA GUARDS LAST EVENING.

After the usual drill last evening at the armory, the Omaha Guards proceeded to elect officers for the coming year with the following result: Captain, Charles Schaff; sergeant, Dr. E. W. Lee; first lieutenant, Geo. Lowe; second lieutenant, Charles A. Harvey. A number of sergeants and corporals were also elected.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

George Stebbins and bride have returned from their honeymoon.

Dr. O. Hoffman has returned from a seven weeks' trip to the Springs in Colorado.

George Kraig, general western manager of Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis, went to Denver yesterday.

DON'T GET CAUGHT.

This spring with your blood full of impurities, your digestion impaired, your appetite poor, kidneys and liver torpid, and whole system full of poisons, you are diseased—but get yourself into good condition, and ready for the changing and warmer weather, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It stands unequalled for purifying the blood, giving an appetite, and for a general spring medicine.

A VICTIM OF SATURDAY'S STORM.

Duluth, Minn., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—Harry Roscoe, yielded up his life a sacrifice to the cold and fury of Saturday's storm. He was a cook at a lumber camp and came to Duluth to see a dentist and started back for camp early Friday morning.

THE FIRE RECORD.

MAXXING, Ia., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—At 6 o'clock Sunday morning fire broke out in the grocery store of C. Perry, of this place, and completely destroyed the building and stock of goods amounting to about $5,000, partially covered by insurance. No cause can be assigned. The earnest effort of the firemen and citizens generally saved the adjoining building, otherwise the entire block would have been consumed.

A BIG MORTGAGE FILED.

Duluth, Minn., March 5.—[Special Telegram to the Bee.]—A $50,000 mortgage given by the Eastern railway company of Minnesota to secure payment of bonds was filed here with the Central Trust company, of New York.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Mr. Reagan reported adversely, from the postoffice and post-roads committee, the Edmunds and Cullom postal telegraph bills, and reported favorably the original bill to reorganize the interstate commerce carried on by telegraph companies to the supervision of the inter-state commerce commission.

THE WOMAN THE SUBJECT.

Of Hitherto Unpublished Letters of the Notable English Satirist.

The current publication in Scribner's Magazine of letters selected from the apparently voluminous correspondence of Mr. Thackeray, the English novelist, throws a new light upon his character, and explains much of the tenderness and gentleness which he showed in his romances, to the lot of woman-kind. He was essentially appreciative of the commonplace in life, and was a most judicious and patient as his simple, homely, yet touching letters indicate.

It was the position of genuine and personal sentiment that he gave vent to in "Vanity Fair." "What do men know about woman's martyrdom? They would go mad had they to endure the hundredth part of the bodily pain which are borne by many women. Ceaseless slavery meeting with no reward; constant gentleness from others; and the most unrelenting selfishness from those who love them; suffering, patience, watchfulness. How many of them have to bear in quiet and appear above it."

With CHEERFUL FACES, as if they feared that the story were to be written, "whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear."

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was to bear.'"

It is in this same ring of characteristic sentiment which the reader will find in many of the letters, that the English novelist, in his own words, said: "I doubt, said a lady who had been selected as the subject of this story, to the writer, 'whether there are many women, or men either, who are not content with their lot, and who, in the weakness, the loss of strength, health and vigor, to find that the sounds about me grow faint, and that I am unable to do the work of my friends I could hear with difficulty. You can't imagine how hard that was