Arrival of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Omaha;

A Brute of a Man-The Bee's Roll of Honor-Street Commissioner's Disappointment - Other Interesting Notes.

Inter-State Commerce Commission. Pursuant to an appointment made in December last, when a body of Omaha ship pers had a hearing before it at Washington, the inter-state commerce commission met at the United States court room yesterday morn ing. The commission consists of Judge T. M. Cooley, chairman, who is an eminent jurist and an able expounder of the law. He was chief justice on the supreme bench of Michigan and was for two years receiver of the Wabash railway, resigning to accept the position he now holds. He is a polished gentleman, with a mind well stored with legal lore. He is quick to arrive at a decision, yet is careful and deliberate in weighing all matters calling for judgment. Judge Cooley is a ters calling for judgment. Judge Cooley is a political hybrid—a mugwump.

William R. Morrison, of Illinois, became particularly conspicuous through his famous tariffbill introduced in the house of representatives. He has a four years' appointment on the commission. Morrison is a democrat, and the vice presidential bee is buzzing in his bonnet. He is slow in movement and speech and only talks when speech is absospeech, and only talks when speech is absolutely necessary.

A. F. Walker, hails from the wooden nut-

A. F. Walker, hails from the wooden nutmeg state, and naturally enough flys the colors of the mugwump. He is a lawyer of brilliant capabilities, and has had great familiarity with railway matters. He is rotund, vigorous, smiling, of easy approach, and his term on the commission is five years.

Augustus Schoonmaker belongs to New York, and is a democrat, a muscular Cleveland man, and a staunch advocate of civil service reform. He is tall, thin and sedate.

Walter L. Bragg, the fifth member of the body, is the southern representative, Alabama being his home. Of course he is a democrat. He is a typical southerner, in action, idiom and sentiment, yet clear-headed and perspicuous in his decisions and judgments. his decisions and judgments.

The commission was engaged during the day in hearing the petition of a delegation of Minnesota business men, setting forth their grievances and complaints against the Northwestern railroad company, and praying for a reduction of the discriminating rates through their state in favor of Chicago.

The greater part of the day was spent in

The greater part of the day was spent in the examination of witnesses. The last on the stand was Mr. Clark, general freight agent for the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, who brought out a number of papers to show that the schedule of prices asked by the people was untenable.

At the conclusion of the testimony the convex of the testimony that the convex of the testimony the testimony that the convex of the testimony the testimony that the convex of the testimony the testimony the testimony the testimony that the convex of the testimony the testimon counsel for the opposing parties each made a short speech. Mr. Burlingham, who opened the argument, stated that the case was in reference to the very great difference in rates shown to exist along the lines in question. He admitted it did not exactly come under the inter-state commerce law, but as it belonged to the same class of cases they could properly consider it from that stand-point. Mr. Goudy, general solicitor of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, spoke of the evolution of the inter-state com-cerce commission and then of the association bringing the present suit, claiming that the latter was usurping the prerogatives of the former. The plaintiffs, he claimed, were a set of men who had not proven that they had ever shipped a pound of freight. He denounced them as inter-meddlers who did not deserve to be heard. He claimed that the present rates in the complaining region were reasonable and proper; the sparse popula-tion, the smallness and cost of the business, the difficulty of keeping the roads open and the cost of fuel justified the advance in charges.

Colonel Howe, in behalf of the railroad company, said the rates could not be adjusted by any rule in cuclid or any arithmetical eration. It was a matter of business and ad to be treated as such.

Mr. Burlingham, on behalf of the plain tiffs, claimed that the right of petition ex-tended to every person who knows of any violation of the law. Of the 105 cases already presented to the commission nineteen were by associations similar to the one he represented. He also claimed that the long and short haul clause had been violated by the plaintiff s.

The commission then took the matter under advisement until 10 o'clock this morning. OMAHA'S GRIEVANCES.

A largely attended meeting of a committee from the board of trade was held at the secretary's office last night to formally prepare the grievances of Omaha jobbers against the railroads. Judge Woolworth conferred with the gentlemen and plans were formulated which will be laid before the inter-state commerce commissioner's to-day.

The plaintiff states that she was married to defendant on the 13th day of January, 1880, in this city. Four children were born to them, the oldest being seven years of age and the youngest but eight months old. She charges extreme cruelty and habitual drunkenness. In the long petition she recites many instances of her husband's brutality that almost passes belief. She states that on almost most passes belief. She states that on almost numberless occasions he has knocked her down and beaten her into insensibility. From injuries inflicted upon her by the brute her eyesight has become permanently impaired. During several cases of illness he has frightfully abused her and refused to furnish proper medicines and food. She states that her husband owns property at Dorcas and Seventeenth streets. She prays for a divorce, alimony and the custody of her children.

Her Old Home. St. Paul, Neb., March 16.—[Correspondence of the Ber.]—The opera house in St. Paul was well filled Saturday evening with ladies and gentlemen gathered to pay tribute to Nebraska's heroine, Minnie Mac Freeman, This is the home of Miss Freeman and her visit here last week was the first since the memorable storm of January 12.

Miss Freeman was attended by the Misses Jennie Leftwich and Edith Martin, and was introduced to the assemblage by Mrs. A. C. Rowell. The appearance of the young lady was hailed by the most enthusiastic applause. Hon. Thomas Darnall stepped forward and eulogized in an eloquent manner the moral worth of the young lady teachers of Nebraska, the good they are effecting, by precept and example, in forming the characters of the children committed to their charge, the heroism and disinterested self-sacrifice they exhibited, and the voluntary suffering many of them endured, by risking, and in some instances losing their own lives to save these little ones in that death-dealing cold and angry atmosphere of January 12. Hodge Again Insane.

Robert Hodge has for a number of years displayed signs of mental disturbance, and a little over a year ago he was sent to the asylum at Lincoln for treatment. The attention he received there apparently restored him to reason and health and a few months ago he was discharged as being perfectly cured. He came back to Omaha and secured employment as clerk at the B. & M. headquarters, and the work there seemed to have had a depressing effect upon him, Within the last few days his old malady has returned and was first noticed by his com-panions in his strange actions and wildness of speech. Yesterday afternoon Hodge became furious, and as fears were entertained that he would infflict injuries upon himself, Deputy Sheriff Grebe was summoned and locked the unfortunate man up.

Early Journalism in Omaha. Mr. E. Rosewater, editor of the Ban, opened a series of talks to the Press club Sunday afternoon, on the subject of the early journalism of Omaha. He spoke of all the several dallies which have at various times sprung into existence in Omaha in the last twenty-five years, the people who have been connected with them, as also the trying circumstances through which both journals and journalists passed. The address was a most interesting one and was greatly appreciated by the members of the club. On next Sunday, the second address of the series will be delivered in the rooms of the club by St. A. D. Balcombe, who was formerly editor of the Republican.

Street Commissioner Knocked Out The street commissioner saw Mayor Broatch on Friday last and was told that a soon as the frost was out of the ground he ought to employ a good force of men and with them set to work at the repairs and im provements required in his department al over the city. The beautiful weather of the three or four days led Mr. Kent to believe that it would be only a question of time before he would be able to comply with the mayor's suggestion, but the unexpected change in the temperature which took place yesterday will likely postpone the work for a least several days.
