The following were referred to the committee on construction: George L. Dennis' application for inspector on the new county hospital; request of Sheriff Coburn that one of the three jailers be designated as head or of the three jailers be designated as head of principal jailer at a salary of not less than $3 a day; from the same official asking that deputy sheriffs be paid $75 a month.

The county treasurer was directed to, cancel taxes on certain nieces of land in South Omaha, and J. M. Wilson's communication requesting a correction in the assessment and tax of Covelle addition was referred to the judiciary committee.

The following communication was referred to the committee on charities with power to OMARA, March 17 .- To the Honorable Com OMARA, March 17.—To the Honorable Commissioners of Douglas County.—Gentlement There is living in Omaha an old German lady, Helena Steinig, by name, seventy-four years old, who came from Germany a few months ago to live with her married niece, but the family is poor and consequently the old lady does not like to stay here; she is very homesick, nearly insane, crying day and night and wishing to go back to Germany, but neither she nor the husband of her piece having any morey, she wants the commissioners to give money, she wants the commissioners to give her, if possible, transportation to Baltimore and the German society in Baltimore, whose aim it is to help poor Germans in any way, will see to it that she is sent back to her relatives in Breslau, Silesia. It is the question for the commissioners to consider if it is not the cheapest way to send said lady to Baltimore instead of supporting her at the ex-pense of the county, which is sure to occur. Hoping to receive an unswer soon, I remain Hoping to receive an answer soon, I remain yours respectfully.

The official bond of John Toner, assessor for Douglas precinct, was approved, and the committee on judiciary reported in favor of renting the poor farm to Rainkin, Spencer & Co., for brickmaking purposes, the county to receive 10 cents for every 1,000 brick manufactured.

The claims of John Rush, William Gibson and Chris Hartman, appraisers, $5 each, and Jeff W. Bedford, sewer pipe, $17.34, were al-lowed and ordered paid.

ELLA BURDEN RETURNS. She Fails to Marry Her Printer Lover

and Comes Home. Ever since Thursday of last week Mrs. Bur den, who lives at 1219 Cass street, has been distracted over the flight of her fifteen-year-old daughter, Ella, with a printer named William Spellman. The disappearance was sudden and without any preliminary warning whatever, and the sorrowing mother has been striving ever since to find some clew as to the whereabouts of her daughter. The matter was put into the hands of the police, but they were unable to afford her any help, and it was finally, owing to the BEE, that about 8:20 last evening the side door of Mrs. Burden's dining evening the side door of Mrs. Burden's dining room opened and her recreamt daughter walked in. The mother rushed up to the prodigal, threw her arms abouther and gave free vent in sobs of joy at her daughter's return. After she regained her composure, the mother began to ply her daughter with numerous questions, but she could get but little satisfaction out of the replies. All that she could learn from the girl was that Spellman and Ella had been in some Nebraska town, where she refused to state, and that they had tried to get married. In this they were unauccessful, however, as the Bes had preceded them with an account of their escapade, and a license however, as the Ber had preceded them with an account of their escapade, and a license was refused them. After a few days' residence there they decided the best thing they could do was to return again to Omaha as they could not get married. They returned yesterday and last evening Spellman drove up with her in a hack to within a half block of her home and let her out. He then had the hackman drive rapidly away. The number of the hack was $0, but the driver, who was hunted up, was close mouthed and would say nothing.

Beyond the meager details given the girl would say nothing. She insisted that she still loved Spellman, and said that she intended writing to him to-day. The mother is greatly grieved over the girl's infatuation. She says that while she lived in Des Moines

She says that while she lived in Des Moines she knew that Spellman was paying addresses to her daughter, but she did not approve of it, as he was a man of vicious habits and was a dangerous companion for her She thought this was the last of the matter She thought this was the last of the matter, but a week ago last evening, while Elia and her sister, in company with their grandfather, were returning from the Eden Musee, Ella was stopped by a young man and drawn aside for a few moments' whispered conversation. The grandfather and younger sister took exceptions to this manner of acting, and Spellman, for it was he, stepped up and apologized to them. His presence in the city had been unknown to the family up to this time. The next night Ella disappeared. The mother intends to have Spellman punished for leading the young girl astray.

An Imperative Necessity.

What pure air is to an unhealthy locality, what spring cleaning is to the neat housekeeper: so is Hood's Sarsaparilla to everybody, at this season. The body needs to be thoroughly renovated, the blood purified and vitilized, the germs of disease destroyed. scrofula, salt rheum, and all other blood disorders are cured by Hood's Sarsa-parilla, the most popular and successful spring medicine.

The Veteran Firemen.

The veteran firemen held a meeting last evening at Chief Galligan's office and the main matters considered were all relative to the coming firemen's ball. First the communication from the Firemen's Benevolent description in the parade, was read and accepted. The veterans next determined to have a band of their own in the parade, and a committee consisting of C. Fisher and H. Burthold were appointed to look after this matter. It was also decided to come out with some handsome new badges and a committee consisting of H. Taggart and J. F. Sheeley were appointed to use their best taste and jadgment in selecting something suitable. The "vets" are de-termined to give the boys all the encourage-ment they can end the ball already promises to be one of the most mammoth parties over

That chicago meeting at Chicago Tuesday was chiefly remarkable for the incubation of a not very sound schedule, in which for once the tail—Chicago and St. Louis—succeeded in wagging the dog. The meeting was almost barren of results, without the introduction of a single innovation, or the advancement of even a single progressive advancement of even a single progressive base ball idea. The three strike rule which was to have been considered, was not even broached. There was an opportunity for the baby organization to have distinguished itself, but they allowed it to slip through their fingers, as if they dared not attempt any legislation on their own hook. All they can do, it seems, is fo follow in the rut of the older associations, and to them all lovers of the game must look for all new changes, benefits game must look for all new changes, benefits and improvements. The magnates—pardon the term—of the Western association, were well aware that the opinion of those best qualified to entertain an opinion on the subject, such as old experienced players and managers, is that the game will suffer in point of lively interest through the return to the old order of pitcher's games. Then, why did they not take this step—the initiative in a move toward the restoration of last season's excellent four strikes rule, a move that is bound cellent four strikes rule, a move that is bound to be made sooner or later by one of the older bodies. By this independent bit of legolder bodies. By this independent bit of legislation they could have impressed the base-ball element with the idea that the new association is the possessor of a set of brains of its own, that they were capable of some achievements purely original and determined to be enterprising, progressive and systematic in their handling of the game and not merely existing by sufferance of Von der Ahe and Spaulding. By a return to the four strikes the Western association could have congratulated themselves upon the thanks and best wishes of every lover of the game in the country. There is no denying the fact, with the exercise of a little horse sense, the Western association, will enter upon its first season under the most luminous auspices. It has, in the main, populous cities to draw It has, in the main, populous cities to draw from for support; the circuit is a fairly good one; there are several of its officers men of experience and competency, and for these reasons alone the new enterprise should be a success. It needs, though, to guard against one great danger, which has been repeatedly intimated in these columns, and that is, to see that Chicago and St. Louis do not run the association evolutions by their constitutions.

sociation exclusively in their own interests. Neither city, for various reasons, should ever have been admitted, but there is no remedy now, so let that pass. Will Arrive in the Morning. Manager Selee, of the Omaha base ball team, and Left-Fielder Annis, will arrive from Chicago this morning. The entire roster of players will be here within the next ten days, and the lovers of the game are all alise to the importance of the occasion. Everybody is anxious to get a look at the new

"Deacon" White Signs at Last. DETROIT, March 21 .- Until 12:05 this afterneon Detroit sat in the shadow of great grief and would not be comforted, for "Deacon"

White, the ancient grasshopper of third base, was not of us. White wrote a letter last week accusing Watkins of being the inspirer of much newspaper criticism of the great guardian of the third bag. Watkins, under powerful pressure, wrote a letter of apology, which White said did not apologize, and he (White) therefore left yesterday for Kalamazoo. Detroit at opee put on deep mourning and went down by the river side and wept. Unexpectedly White returned at 10 a. m. to-day. At 19:14 he stepped into base ball beadquarters; at 10:20 he and the directors came out; at 10:45 White and the directors returned to base ball White and the directors returned to base ball headquarters. White at this moment looked so fierce that Secretary Leadly fied down the fire escape. At 10:55 pogotiations were opened, Director Edson and Vail looking as haggard as a pair of newly shaven goats. At 10:56 White smiled. It was the first smile in a week and indicated a weakening. Encouraged, the directors at 10:57 began to talk to White together and the bald-headed third baseman grow pale. At 12:05 he capitulated to stop the flow of eloquence, and at 12:05 k Director Edson ran out into the street, and giving a yell that might have been heard in Chicago, announced that the country was saved. White had said he would sign. This saved. White had sald he would sign. tremendous act will be done to-morrow or next day, and White will leave for Mobile to join the other players. "Not that I dislike Watkins less, but that I love the club more," said White.

BADEAU'S BRIEF.

The Controversy Over the Authorship

of the Grant Memoirs.

New York, March 21.—[Special Telegram to the Bre.]—Colonel Fred Grant glanced hastily over Badeau's long statement shown him by the reporter, making few comments as he proceeded, but laughing where a sharp charge was made against himself. "It is in genious," he said, "but not ingenuous. As a whole it is untrue. I do not care for the attacks Badeau may make upon me, they hurt no one, but we are defending my father from the insinuations and reflections of this man. We have truth on our side. I do not think I ought to say anything further. Everything will come out in the courts. But if they will consent I am just as willing to fight the matter in the newspapers. My father's reputation will not suffer, though we are all sorry for this controversy. We look on the claim as presented by General Badeau as sort of blackmail." Colonel Grant has in his possession the original of the letter of May 5, 1885, which General Badeau claims the colonel wrote to him, but which General Grant signed. It was examined by the reporters. The sheets are of yellow paper, evidently a portion of a pad, each one having seemingly been torn off as it was filled with writing. The chirography is all in pencil. In the postscript it is an irregular and painful scrawl, without any attention to lines across the page. There could be no doubt of the authorship of that document. Here and there were a few inter-lineations and one or two erasures of a word or syllable, but generally it was clear, as if the writer knew what he was going to say and just how he wanted to say it. When the sheets were handed back to Colonel Grant he said: "That is the letter Badcau gives me the credit of writing. I wish 1 could write such a letter. You can now say truly that General Grant did.not dictate a line or even a word of it. He handed it to me to copy, signed the copy, and the copy was forwarded to General Badeau." Before saying goodnight Colonel Grant added: "If my attorness are willing I matrices to the muchical neys are willing I may give to the public full reply to General Badeau's statement. General Sherman, in the corridor of the Fifth Avenue hotel, was asked his opinion of the Grant-Badeau controversy, and, with a sig-nificant shrug, the general replied: "Of one thing I am certain. General Badeau did not write the Grant letter to Badeau."

Tuesday evening a number of friends of Rev. J. M. Wilson, of the Presby-terian church, corner Sixteenth and Castellar streets, gave him a surprise party. A pleasant feature of the oceasion was the presentation to the reverend gentleman of an elegantly upholstered rocking chair.

DEALING FROM HIS BACK HAIR A Poker Story That Comes From the

Truthful Town of Memphis. Memphis Avalanche: "The greatest dealer in a poker game I ever saw," remarked one of a gang of first-class yarn spinners in a Memphis grocery store, "was Colonel Bill Jones. One of his peculiarities was the style in which he wore his hair. It had been allowed to grow until it fell below his shoulders. This and his characteristic trait as a player county of the characteristic trait as a player county. player caused us to dub him 'Five Ace Bill.' We parted company once for sev-eral years, and while I risked fortune on the west of the Mississippi he remained at his native place, Tenn., and became quite influential in politics. At one time he was elected to the legislature from his district. His former reputation followed him to Nash-ville, and the legislator who could beat him at poker was regarded as one gifted with supernatural power.

"I had occasion to visit Somerville a few months ago and there met my old friend. On the night after my arrival it was decided that a party of four should meet in the legislator's apartments at the leading hotel and revive memories of days gone by in due and ancient form. Chips clinked until a late hour, and when the bell boy, who acted as cupbearer extraordinary, told me the next day that he made eighteen consecutive trips from the poker room to the small to bet champagne and oysters for the party that I could bent Bill in a single-handed game of 'freeze-out,' if he did not cheat. The wager was accepted on the condition that if he was detected in the act of cheating the game would be mine. Bill was equally ready, and the game was made up. I can vaguely remember dealing the cards. I lost the first pet and the second, and continued to lose until the pile of chips before me was diminishing to about half a dozen. Realizing my helplessness, I abandoned myself to fate and ventured these on the

"My head was swimming all the time and the contents of the room rapidly passed before my uncertain vision. Chairs, tables, bureaus and furniture of every description floated about in lively confusion. Occasionally, among the exaggerated wall paper patterns, I could distinguish Bill's face and the mass of hair behind it. This vision appeared before me just as he laid down his hand. A suspicious looking corner of some-thing appeared in the flowing locks in proximity to his ear. Before I could distinguish what it was, the face was gone and was followed by a string of furniture, ending with the cracked hotel water bowl pitcher. I patiently watched a second time. The face again appeared and I could distinguish a red heart on the quaer corner that protruded. It was gone again before I could reach for it and the panorams of the furniture again floated by. "Are you going to sit there all night?" somebody asked. Presently the wash-stand and the pitcher appeared again and I prepared to make a grab at the card. The last thing I can recall is reaching out and seizing it as Bill's face passed before me third time. When I awoke several hours later I found myself stretched over the form of one of my companions, who lay on the floor, and the noonday sun shone through the window. Bill and the other member of the party were in the same undignified postures, slumbering soundly. I remembered the wager and the futile attempt I had made to sdatch the card from its place of concentrations. from its place of concealment, and in-tuitively glancek at my friend's prolific crop of hair. The card still remained, and I left it stay there until I had awakened three sleeping men. They all rembered the occuarence, and although the wager was decided it was several days before we recovered sufficiently to settle it. Jones thought the rather liberal lock

I had torn from his scalp in grabbing at the card should offset the champagne. We allowed him this and contented our, selves with oysters."

WONDERFUL RECOVERY DRS. S. & D. DAVIESON,

A Cold Day! A Cold Car, and Still the Interviewer Did Not "Get Left."

A Young Man Tells a Remarkable Story and Gives Proof of It's Truth-

The man who desires a fair idea of the in tensity of the cold artic regions need not take a trip to the north pole to satisfy his curlosity. A 5-cent ride on the grip car of the cable line on a moderately cold day will give him all the infor-mation on that score he will want, plus a pair of fect so cold that they will make his head ache. The world's cold charity will seem red-hot in comparison. At least that was the experience of the reporter on a recent trip in search of in formation to corroborate certain testimony concerning a young man whose residence is a the corner of Cuming and Elizabeth streets, by name Mr. Lawrence B. Larsen, a brick-moulder by occupation.

The reporter after leaving the grip car, almost frozen, meandered around until the gentleman frozen, meandered around until the gentleman above referred to was found, stated the object of his visit, when Mr. Larsen related the following account of his remarkable experience during the last six years:

"I am nineteen years of age, a brick-moulder by trade, reside with my parents corner of Cuming and Elizabeth streets, and work at Myers' brick yards. My trouble began about six years ago, as the result of a cold Louid not get rid of. From a simple cold in the head it gradually spread until-my throat and ears were also affected. My head generally ached, an when I was free from headache I would be troubled with pains through my chest and in my back, and frequently I would be afflicted with both. I think I must have had all the symptoms of chronic Catarrh. My nose would stop up, first on one side and then on the other, and at times both sides would be stopped up so that I could not breathe through it. I would have frequent spells of dizziness, and was troubled with ringing and buzzing sounds in my ears. I had but little appetite and LOST PLESH AND STRENGTH rapidly. I did not rest well at night, and always

And then, too, I was compelled to hawk and as I said before, I had ringing and buzzing sounds in my ears, but that did not annoy me near as much as the fact that my hearing was growing more faint every day, and that during conversation persons would have to speak very loud to me before I could understand what they were talking about; this, with the other troubles I have enumerated, had a tendency to make me feel low spirited and despondent, and often felt as though life was not worth living for and that I would be better off dead than to go through life in the condi-

"This was my condition a few months ago You could scarcely think such was the case to see me now. Indeed, as I said before, I can hardly believe it myself now. Hearing of the see me now. Indeed, as I said before, I can hardly believe it myself now. Hearing of the success of Dr. McCoy and his associates in treating cases, such as mine, I determined to give them a trial, After careful and minute examination the doctor told me he could help me and that my disease was Catarrh in the head and throat, and that my eastachism tubes were affected, due from the Catarrh, and that as the Catarrh got better, with the treatment he would give my ears, my hearing would also improve, and in his opinion the tubes would soon become normal again and I would hear a well as over.

"In conclusion," continued Mr. Larsen, "I want to say that they have done all for me they said they could do. I feel like an entire different man. I cat hearty, feel strong and well, have no more pains in my head or chest, sleep well, arise refreshed in the morning, my former ambition seems to be brightening, and I feel more emergetic and like working again. The ringing and buzzing noise in my head has ceased and I can hear an ordinary tone of voice in any conversation, and I am thoroughly satisfied with the manner in which they so successfully treated my case. I have no hesitancy in recommending them to the public as men of medical ability and skill."

TWENTY-ONE QUESTIONS.

A Few Symptoms of a Disease Tha May Prove Serious to You.

Do you experience ringing or buzzing noises in your ears?

Do you reel as though you must suffocate when lying down?

Are you troubled with a hacking cough and general debility?

Are your eyes generally weak and watery, and frequently inliamed?

Does your voice have a husk, thick sound, and a nasal sort of twang?

Is your breath frequently offensive from some unaccountable cause?

Have you a dull oppressive headache generally located over the eyes?

Do you have to hawk and cough frequently in the effort to clear your throat?

Are you lesing your sense of smell, and is your sense of taste becoming dulled.

Does your nose always feel stopped up, forcing you to breathe through your mouth?

Do you frequently reel dizzy, particularly when stooping to pick anything off the floor?

Does every little draught of air and every slight change of temperature give you a cold?

Are you annoyed by a constant desire to hawk and spit out an endless quantity of phlegm?

Are you always tired and indisposed to exertion, whether of business, work or amusement?

Is great effort required to keep your thoughts fixed upon matters that formerly were easily performed.

Do you rise from bed as tired and weak as you Do you have frequent fits of mental depres-

Is great effort required to keep your thoughts fixed upon matters that formerly were easily performed.

Do you rise from bed as tired and weak as you were the night before, and feel as though you wanted to lie there forever?

Is your throat filled with phlegm in the morning, which can only be discharged after violent coughing, and hawking and spitting?

Do you occasionally wake from a troubled sleep with a start and feel as if you had just escaped a horrible death by choking?

Have you lost all interest in your calling or business or former pleasures, all ambition gone, and do you feel indifferent whether tomorrow finds you allive or dead?

Are you troubled with a discharge from the head in the throat, sometimes watery and excessive, sometimes mucus, thick sticking to whatever it touches, sometimes bloody and nearly always putrid and offensive?

The above are some of the many symtoms of catarrh and the begining of lung troubles, Not one case in a hundred will have all of them, but everyone affected will have a few or many of them. The greater or more serious your symptoms, the more dangerous your condition. This class of diseases is treated very successfully by Dr. McCoy or his associates. The many cases reported through the column of the daily papers prove this, and each statement published is substantially the same as given by the patient cured. Dr. McCoy and his associates, use no secret nostrums, but cure diseases by their skillful combination of the best known remedies, applied in the most approved manner, and by using the latest and most bighly recommended appliances known to the profession. They thus produce results that speak for themselves in the many patients cured, and we assure our readers that these eminent physicians have achieved a success in curing disease which few or no other doctors can duplicate.
