COLORED MEN HOLD A DEBATE

Several Interesting and Intelligent Views Exchanged.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY SINGED

Politicians and Office Holders Severely Handled and Without Gloves—They Were Not Without Champions, Though.

Colored Club Debate.

Recorder of Deeds Megeath was at the head of a number of whites who last night at the council chamber intermingled with a fair sized turnout of the representative colored politicians and citizens of the city. The object of the gathering was to listen to a debate on the resolution.

Resolved, That it is clearly against the Afro-American voters to divide their vote in the coming campaign, but at all hazards cast their solid vote for the nominees of the republican party, national, state, county and city.

The subject was ably, vigorously and intellectually handled by the debators, and their logic was listened to attentively throughout. It was after 9 o'clock when the assemblage was called to order and organized with Henry Scroggins as president. The vice-presidents were: From the Young Men's Republican club, Messrs. W. B. Watson, A. A. Plummer and W. T. Jackson; from the independent voters, F. F. Bellaway, Millard Singleton and Lincoln Brown. Secretary, Mr. Barnett.

Mr. Scroggins upon taking the chair spoke of the affiliation of the colored voters with the republican party, and said that twenty-five years experience has led them to think for themselves.

Mr. Banks, president of the young men's colored club, was the first speaker in support of the resolution. He said that it was an important one. The republican party had always been and is to-day the friend of the negro. Why should they divide their vote, and give it to the party that had always kept them down, trampled on human rights and chained their fathers and mothers and kept them in bondage and slavery? The democratic party had done a little for them in the way of giving them offices, but colored men should not be caught by such molasses. In the republican party we have the creme de la creme, and in the other democracy and the devil. The speaker paid eloquent tributes to Lincoln and Sumner, and asked if the democrats could show such men as they. If the democrats are our enemies knock them out with your votes, and stand solid for the republican nominees, was the advice given by Mr. Banks.

Dr. M. O. Ricketts argued in the negative. He was a staunch believer in republican principles, but was opposed to the ways and manners of the republican office holders. He next gave the Republican a raking over for an article printed in that paper in reference to the meeting, and said it was a direct insult to the colored men who are asked to cling to a party whose organ in Douglas county hurls insinuations and burlesques at them. The doctor said that he was opposed to all kinds of slavery, and insisted that the negroes were now shackled to as great a slavery as the one they had been freed from—political slavery. The republican party was making tools of the colored voters, and knifed them every time it got a chance. That was true of Douglas county, and when some of its best colored citizens asked for positions of honor they were choked off and put down. In conclusion the doctor said it was time the colored voters freed themselves from this yoke of political slavery and expressed their manhood. In the past the republican party had done something for them, but it was not doing it to-day. For years the republican voters had been tickling the backs of the republican party that it might laugh, but it was now time that the republican party tickled their backs that they might laugh.

Mr. Smith insisted, while sustaining the resolution, that it was the duty of colored voters to cast their votes for the republican party, which lifted them from slavery and made them full-fledged citizens of the United States. There is nothing in the democratic party to inspire the support of the colored man. Democrats did not vote for the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, but still they ask for colored votes. In the south they have usurped the colored vote, and the rights of the colored man is being overridden. There he is in majority by several millions, but is not given a chance to elect a presidential elector and has only one congressman in Washington.

Mr. Parker, in responding in the negative, said that the republican party was only pandering to the colored men to get their votes. The party was pulling away from the colored men, and it was time that they in turn were pulling away from the republican party and to think and act like men. The speaker said that he had always been true to the republican party, but it was not acting true to him and that he was going to withdraw from that yoke of political slavery. The progressive colored people were with him and were getting out of that old rut of political fogyism.

Mr. Sprigg sustained the affirmative. He said he is a straight-out republican, and don't expect to be anything else so long as he lives. The republican party had freed the colored man from slavery, took him by the hand and educated him. Besides, this party had given the negroes employment, and of 3,000 negroes employed four years ago in the government offices at Washington only 150 are now employed. The democrats had turned them out, and now has the cheek to ask the negroes to divide their vote.

Mr. Hubbard defended the negative. He denied that the republican party had given them office, and dwelt on local proofs to sustain the assertion. Sheriff Coburn and a republican register of deeds said that there was not a colored man in Douglass county capable of being a jailer or clerk, but a democratic register of deeds discovered a colored man capable to work in his office. The speaker attacked the leaders of the republican party, and said the best men had been either driven out or were leaving it of their own accord.

Mr. Banks closed the debate by saying that the previous speaker had misrepresented the principles of the colored voters of Douglas county. The republican party is a party of the people and for the people, and the great men of the country are in the republican party, and he beseeched his hearers not to put democrats in power with their votes.

A man who was under the influence of liquor insisted on disturbing the speakers, and after putting up with him for some time he was removed from the meeting by force and placed in the lockup.

TEN NEW M. D.'S.

Seventh Annual Commencement of Omaha Medical College.

A large audience assembled at Boyd's opera house last evening to witness the exercises of the seventh annual commencement of the Omaha Medical college. During the opening overture the faculty filed in, followed by the candidates for the degree of M. D. The divine blessing was invoked by the Rev. Willard Scott, and after another selection by the orchestra the Rev. Dean Gardner was introduced and delivered the address:

"I have the most profound respect for the medical profession and medical science," said the speaker. "Christ was the physician of souls. The study of medicine ranks next in dignity to the science of theology. Each medical aspirant should feel that he is not animated by a love of science and dollars, but a love of good and sympathy with men. An eminent physician upon being asked by a young doctor the best book for him to read next, replied, "Don Quixote." He meant that the young man should not devote himself to books exclusively, but should also study men. Young men, your graduation is from books and lectures into the study of men. If you wish to become good practioners you must pay the minutest attention to the details of your work. The man who practices particularity makes the whole world tributary to himself. This is an age of generalization, and in no other field is there such a need of it as in the practice of medicine. You must inspire confidence in your patient and give him your sympathy and love. If ever I were sick I would never tolerate at my bedside the cold professionalism that can cut off a leg with indifference or watch a death with a critical eye. The great genius is he who masters the details of all his profession. It should be the ambition of every man to excel in his chosen profession. Choose Christ as your master; be the guardians of sobriety and chastity. Your powers for good and evil are simply enormous. The office of physician and minister blend together in man's organism. And now, young men, you are going out into the world to help the afflicted and to alleviate pain, you need a firm and resolute faith in Almighty God. Marching under this banner you will be instruments of incalculable good to humanity.

The address was followed by another selection by the orchestra and Prof. L. F. McKenna read an address to the graduates preparatory to the presentation of diplomas. The paper was very ably written, but considerable of it was lost to the audience on account of a poor delivery. He mentioned a number of illustrious names in the realms of medicine and urged the young men to emulate their example. He also pointed to the great American discoveries in medicine. He advised the young men to stick to their business and leave politics, base ball, preaching and whisky alone. He told them by all means to get married, as he assured them they needed a good wife more than a good wife needed them.

The diplomas were then conferred upon the following graduates: Ira Elmin Jasper Atkinson, Homer Frank Fort, Frank Dooley Burgess, Sherman J. Hadley, Robert Ramsay Livingston, jr., Joseph Henry Miller, Joshua Shipley Devries, Joseph Epward Noon, Edward Jackson Taggart, Andrew Crawford.

Next Dr. M. W. Stowe, chairman of the state medical society, presented each of the graduates with a certificate from that society, with the brief injunction: "Young men, if you do no good, for heaven's sake do no harm!"

The closing address was given by Prof. Joseph Neville, M. D. He said that the first thing the young physician finds out is that the rich patient is monopolized by the old doctor, and the young man's first patient probably is in a wretched hovel. The poor man is the young doctor's friend. The physician who is idle is indeed wretched, as any idle man is a sorrow to himself and a burden to the community. The advances in medicine have kept pace with those of other sciences. Look at the wonderful discovery of anaesthasia, the laryngoscope, the art of diagnosis and numerous others. It is all right if doctors do occasionally disagree. It leads to study and better doctors. His parting injunction to the graduates was: Remember the ode of Hippocrates, in which the physician says: "I will follow that practice which is best for my patient and abstain from that which is deleterious and mischievous." A number of the graduates were loaded with floral tributes.

BURLINGTON CARS MOVED.

A Union Pacific Freight Starts Out With Two.

There was flashed over the wires from Chicago at a late hour yesterday afternoon orders from the grievance committee of locomotive engineers and firemen who went from Omaha to Chicago to confer with Chief Arthur to the Union Pacific engineers to begin handling "Q" cars. The edict was received with a display of disappointment by the men, who for a time were loth to accept its genuineness. Later the order was substantiated, and the duty of handling the cars of the boycotted road started in at Council Bluffs. At that point for the first time in weeks two "Q" cars loaded with freight were attached to freight train No. 27, which passed through Omaha last night on its way west. Up to midnight this was the only departing train that was thus decorated, but as several freights were booked to come across the river for the west by day break, it was expected that "Q" cars would figure in the make-up.

At midnight a BEE reporter visited the yards of the Union Pacific and was told that no Burlington cars had been switched or attached to trains as yet on this side, though there were hundreds of them lying about. Cornered for a reason for this the men said they were not ready to explain.

That Tired Feeling

Afflicts nearly every one in the spring. The system having become accustomed to the bracing air of winter, is weakened by the warm days of the changing season, and readily yields to attacks of disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed. It tones and builds up every part of the body, and also expels all impurities from the blood. Try it this season.

Oft obscure the road that leads to health,
Unmarked by board or sign;
Wisdom avails not, powerless is wealth
To soothe those aches of thine.
But do not despair, with life there's hope,
The cloud conceals the sun;
With Pierce's Favorite Prescription at hand
You life's full race may run.

More truth than poetry in these lines, as thousands of ladies all over the land now blooming with health, testify to the great curative powers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, adapted by much research and careful study to the happy relief of all those weaknesses and ailments peculiar to females. All druggists.

Gone to California.

Herman Mittman, who was acquitted of the charge of murdering the man Durham, has packed up all his effects, and with his wife and daughter has left the scenes unpleasant to his gaze and gone to California, where he will reside.

MANY whose occupations are of a sedentary character, often have the feeling of being literally worn out, and are reminded very forcibly of declining years, when if they know what ailed them, they would find all their troubles arose from the inaction of their kidneys or liver. If they would at such times take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm, would again feel the vigor and strength of maturity.

Reception to Marianne Brandt.

Marienne Brandt, the gifted and charming vocalist who sings at the Apollo club concert this evening, was tendered a reception last night at the residence of Uto Brachvogel. A number of leading citizens of Omaha were among the invited guests and a delightful evening was passed.

Hack No. 20.

The driver of hack No. 20 is much aggrieved over the fact that the BEE stated that after Ella Burden returned from her runaway trip she was driven home in his hack. The young lady and her present husband rode in some other vehicle.

A Pleasing Entertainment.

Viola Lodge No. 80 Knights of Pythias, held a very pleasing and enjoyable entertainment at Central hall last night. The different numbers on the well arranged programme, consisting of brass, string and vocal music, recitations and an address by Knight R. S. Ervin were carried out in an acceptable manner.

Rev. T. M. House will lecture to-night at the Y. M. C. A. hall upon the subject, "Forces of Our Time." No charge for admission.

The Heathen Chinee is Peculiar.

Ex-Consul Holcombe in Jeweler's Weekly: The recent discussions about adulterated gold and silver ware reminds me of an incident which happened to an English friend of mine while in China as the representative for his government. He was one of the ablest men who had ever held the position, and an excellent Chinese scholar.

Shortly after he had domesticated himself in Pekin he determined to have a pair of silver candlesticks made by a native workman, but, having already learned to his cost that the merchants of the flowery kingdom make use of every well-known device to cheat a customer, he was extremely careful to select a silversmith of unquestioned reputation. The bargain was duly made. My friend was to furnish 300 Mexican dollars, which the silversmith was to melt and make into a pair of candelabra, reserving 3 per cent of the silver for his labor. In due time the candelabra was delivered and gave great satisfaction.

After several years, when his term of office had expired and my friend was about to return to England, he concluded to dispose of his handsome candelabra, and calling in another silversmith asked him to make an offer. The Chinaman examined them carefully and at last offered $2.50. Explanations were at once in order, and the minister soon learned that while he had theoretically put 300 Mexican dollars into his candelabra, there was not an ounce of silver in them.

In a great rage he immediately sent for the first silversmith, and the following conversation ensued, it being borne in mind that it is considered by the Chinese a mark of respect for a subordinate to repeat words addressed to him by a superior before answering them:

The British minister—You infernal scoundrel! Didn't I make a bargain with you three years ago to make a pair of solid silver candelabras, and didn't I furnish you $300 for them?

Chinese silversmith — You infernal scoundrel! Didn't I make a bargain with you three years ago to make me a pair of solid silver candelbra, and didn't I furnish you $300 for them? Yes, your excellency.

British minister—And aren't those your work, and there isn't an ounce of silver in them?

Chinese silversmith—And aren't those my work, and there isn't an ounce of silver in them? Most true, your excellency.

British minister—You barefaced thief, if before sunset you don't bring me every dollar I gave you, I'll send you to prison. Get out of my sight!

Chinese silversmith—You barefaced thief. If before sunset I don't bring your excellency every dollar your excellency gave me, you will send me to prison. Quite right, your excellency.

The silversmith bowed and departed. Half an hour afterward he returned with the money, which he handed over with many assurances of his distinguished consideration and best wishes that the minister might have a pleasant voyage home, he calmly took his departure.

The Poisoned Key of Padua.

George D. Simms in the London Referee: Another delightful relic of the life and times of the Tyrant of Padua is a simple key—about the size of an ordinary door key. It was the key of the Duke's library in his private room. When he wanted to get rid of any person in his household that he had a bitter feeling against he used to ring his bell and ask for Mr. John to be sent to him (fancy name, of course). When John entered the Duke would say: "O, John, I wish you would go to the bookcase in my private room and bring me the "Dagonet Ballads." "Certainly, your grace," Mr. John would say, and away he would trot with the key in his hand. When he got to the library he would put the key in the lock of the bookcase and turn it. But directly he turned it, out of the handle of the key shot a long poisoned needle, which stabbed the hand of the holder and instantly shot back again. John would let go of the key and say, "What the duce was that." He would look at his hand and see only a small, dark blue spot. He would think nothing of it, but all of a sudden he would begin to feel queer in his head. Presently some one would come in and find him in a fit on the floor and the household would be alarmed. "Mr. John has had a stroke or a fit," the people would say. A doctor would be sent for, but his services would be of no avail. In twenty-four hours Mr. John would be dead and everybody would think that he had died through a fit. There were no bothering coroners' inquests to upset the plans of clever fellows like the Duke Francis in those days.

When is an actress old? Here comes a story from Bordeaux, France, to the effect that Mme.
