THE MESSENGER'S CHOICE.

Satisfaction.

How to Entertain Him to His Perfect telegraph messenger is chiefly remark-able for his wonderful independence of all social laws, a disregard for specific instructions, his incorrigible exhaustion of valuable time, his smallness of head and largeness of hat. When the district messenger call is sprung, the blue demon of uncertainty and danger is summoned.

And yet there can sometimes be detected a peculiar humor in certain members of the band which relieves them from the necessity of utter condomnation. For instance a lady had need to call in a messenger on a recent stormy night while she was giving a little party at her house. Being acquainted with the perpetual appetite of small boys, Toronto Mail: A few days ago refer- ence was had to the danger threaten- ing the beaver, says the Toronto Mail. In Ontario the little animal is seldom met with, and in Quebec the colonies are few. The northwest, however, has favored the beaver until within the last two or three years, during which time such attacks have been made upon them, owing to the demand for the fur, that extinction is imminent. We owe much to the beaver. At one time the beaver skin was the currency of Canada, and later on the hunting of the beaver was the principal occupation and the export of his skin the principal commerce of the country. It is almost haughable to read of the peculiarities of the beaver busi- ness a couple of centuries ago. Every fourth skin belonged to the king of France, and no skin could be sold ex- cept to the firm authorized by the king to huy and collect his majesty's share of the catch. The skins were sent to France to be manufactured into hats; but the manufacturers would only pay for them in hats. Had the merchant or middleman in Canada the right to sell the hats in Franc, he might have made money; but he was only allowed to sell them in Canada, where they were not wanted, or in the West Indies, where there was builted demand for them.
